Livestock Breeding in Albania.

While not so long ago cattle robbery and brigandage ! were among the chief occupations of the Albanian peasants, the most turbulent people in Europe, after the war, under better Government the country seems to have settled down to peaceful pursuits. As live stock breeders the Albanians should easily achieve notable results as they have a keen eye for this occupa-The country is in parts very fertile and wheat, maize, tobacco and olives can be reared to great advantage. In spite of their bad reputation, the Albanians are a very hospitable and kind hearted people, speaking a language of their own and ready to be persuaded in matters concerning their own welfare In the Hinterland sheep and cattle breeding is their main occupation The population is small scarcely more than 1,700 000, comprising besides Albanians, Serbs, Turks and Greeks The land is very hilly, almost entirely composed of ridges of mountains which stretch from north west to south east. The only river of importance is the Drin Inthe valleys and round the lakes of Okhrida, Scutar and Janina very good cattle can be seen, and among the larger land owners propaganda for the advantages accruing from raising high-yielding ammals should easily result in an increased interest for Pedigree stud sizes and dams. No live stock census was ever taken.

On September 1st, 1928, the Albaman people changed their constitution and declared their country a Monarchy, the first King Ahmed Ben Zogu, being unanimously elected The Albamans proclaimed their independence of Turkey at Avlora in 1912 In January, 1925 a Republic was proclaimed at Tiran.

While Vienna will always remain a city of high finance, of gaiety and pleasure, fine handicrafts, arts, and above all of music, agricultural Austria will probably develop on live stock breeding lines In the present boundary Austria one of the finest cattle breeds in Europe-the Pinzgau cattle-is bred and as breeders of light horses the Austrians have always excelled, gifted with the horsebreeders' fine instinct Austria where the large monasteries with great agricultural domains, and enormous estates belonging to the aristocracy were so conspicuous in pre-war days, is to-day developing towards becoming a small holders' country, or a country for the small farmer; and probably with only one exception-Denmark-the agricultural co-operative system is more developed here than elsewhere in Europe As a cattle breeder the Austrian farmer is prominent. The number of agricultural schools is remarkable, and the opportunities for agricultural education in every part of the country no less Owing to its magnificent forests, forestry has developed here on a scientific basis, but in the opinion of those who know the country well. it is the Pedigree live stock trade that will probably 27

The Ministry of Agriculture at Vienna has a Department for live stock breeding. The various live stock breed associations work, of course, on lines and in accordance with rules adopted by their local organisations, but hand in hand with the Live Stock Department at Vienna. As regards pig breeding probably 65% of all pure bred pigs belong to the German Edelschwein type and the German improved Landrace pig Pig breeders devote much attention to steadily improving their herds and one point is noticeable even remark able in the annals of pig breeding in Austria—the high expert much of interest will be found degree of fecundity Small litters are almost unknown and the average litter is ten to twelve The Government maintains two Studs at Wiesel

burg in Lower Austria where English Half bloods are bred while the Lippizaner horse is chiefly bred at the Piber Stud in Steiermark A certain number of the Nori horse is also bred here. In upper Austria at Stadl a well organised stallion depot is doing much good towards the promotion of horse breeding Before the war Austria had a very prominent and profitable Light Horse breeding industry and the exports of the Wieselburg Hackney horses were considerable After the war however the Department of Agriculture is especially encouraging the breeding of the Non and Pinzgau horses Horse breeding is under the supervision of a Stud chief while in the Provinces a number of local Stud masters work untiringly in connection with agricultural Associations and individual horse breeders These are stationed at Lambach for the Provinces of Salzburg and Tyrol at Innsbruck for Vorarlberg at Klagenfurt for the Province of Karnten and at Graz for Steiermark Agricultural Austria is divided in Bezirks and in each a Horse Breeders Committee is work ing hand in hand with the local Chamber of Agriculture

As already stated Austria excels in the breeding of Pinzgau cattle and in the following notes on this remarkable breed written by a well known Pinzgau

Pinzgau Cattle in Austria

By Breed Director FRANZ FLOCK Sta nach Ste ermark

Pinzgauers are the most important. They are bred over an area embracing 40 per cent of the country including the Provinces of Salzburg and Karnten and almost half of Tyrol besides the greater portion of Upper Austria and Steiermark The area extends over the frontiers into Bavaria Italy and Jugo Slavia There are now about 450 000 head of Pinzgauer cattle in Austria and 160 000 in the districts across the border while according to recent census in Roumania and Czecho Slovakia the Pinzgauers there may be estimated at about 150 000

For long the Pinzgauer cattle were without ds tinctive classification among breeds of cattle Recently Dr Schenck Breed Supervisor in Karnten proved that the breed undoubtedly is of indigenous origin

These Pinzgauers are marked in a most peculiar manner-brown with white stripes joining up on the withers and extending along the back. The legs are brown with white rings 4 room wide. The rest of the body is always brown from I ght red to dark chestnut brown which is the more popular colour Mouth and nostrils are flesh coloured. The white colour seems to le increasing and therefore when selecting animals for breeding if other points are equal those of a dark exertions great skill and good management success

Among the various cattle breeds in Austria the | brown colour with very little white marking are pre ferred the reason being that animals with a lighter coat are not so robust The Pinzgauers have a good muscular build and strong bones Mostly bred at high altitudes the skin has become fairly thick and elastic the hair short and thick and as a thick skin is caused by climatic conditions it is not a sign of bad milking propensity The head is of medium length with broad forehead short nose fine horns broad fore quarters always deep the height at the withers about 130 cms The ribs are well sprung backbone straight the back broad and good muscles Hind legs are well set strong with large bones and firm and hard hoofs Faults in the Pinzgauer cattle have practically dis appeared through careful breeding They are excellent beef producers splendid milkers and unsurpassed for work It is a mountainous cattle breed grazing during the summer and autumn on pastures often situated at an altitude of 2 000 2 600 metres During the winter they are always stabled

Seventy years ago the first attempts were made to improve the breed. It was from the outset a question of creating a better shaped body build then leaving much room for improvement Through painstaking has been achieved and at the principal breeding centres the Pinzgauers certainly are now bred pure and thus entitled to be classified as a Pedigree breed Of course the breeders aims vary in the different districts thus in Salzburg Tyrol and Upper Austria the Pinzgauers are bred for their usefulness as milkers beef cattle and draught oxen In Bavaria great importance is attached to milk production and fattening propensities as the climate and abundance of pastures are especially suitable for breeding animals of such qualities In East Tyrol on the other hand the breeder's chief aim is an animal for work and in the Province of Steiermark the milk yield is the chief consideration. In this district large milk concerns abound and the breeders here have shown what the Pinzgauers can yield if bred and fed for this special purpose Investigations of inherited propensities carried on with the object of improving the breed have demonstrated that there are several bulls whose progeny was remarkable for its milk yield and notable among these were Leo 5 Edward 10 all animals of outstanding ment Owners of prominent herds have endeavoured to pro cure the progeny of Edward 10 provement in the quality and quantity of the food is now apparent as milk tests controlled by the Pinz gauer Breeders Society in Steiermark show average yearly increases in the best herds of up to 500 kilos Many a breeder can now show yields of 3 000 4 000 kilos. Although in the different breeding districts of these cattle different propensities are aimed at all breed societies desire animals of threefold usefulness Breeding is now well organised everywhere first Pinzgauer Breeders Society was founded in Bayaria in 1878 and the next in Steiermark and Salz burg in 1898 There are now 93 breeders societies in Bayaria while the number in Austria is 132 All these Associations amalgamated in 1924 and formed the Austrian and Bavarian Association of Breeders of escape popularity in many a country in Europe

Pinzgauer Cattle which now includes 7 Provincial breeders Associations and 220 private breeders societies with 6 000 members. Each of the Provincial breeders associations runs its own Herd Book and members must submit to tests of performances of milk yield and fat percentage The Organisation works exclusively in the interests of the Pinzgauer breed and issues a journal The Pinzgauer Breeder For the time being the following herds as members of the Organisation are under permanent milk control

From these tests the conclusion should not be drawn that the Pinzgauer cow is a small milker as this is not the case. The results are averages obtained from herds in the valleys and from herds spending most of the year high up in the Alps where they are exposed to hard climatic conditions As a general rule the production of a cow on pastures in the mountains is about 700 kilos less than when grazed in the valleys Should the summer be cold with snowstorms this difference is sometimes increased to as much as I 500 kılos

The Pinzgauer breed are strong healthy animals whose excellent qualities are capable of development in good climates. In the future this breed cannot

Livestock Breeding in The Balearic Islands

The islands of Mallorca Menorca Cabrera Iviza and Formentera with the capital Palma on the island of Majorca is a group of islands in the Mediterranean constituting a province of Spain with an area of about 1 940 square miles and a population of about 325 000 The soil is very fertile and live stock breeding is here of ancient date as once upon a time in mediæval days Balearic Cattle was a commercial term indicating beautifully developed milking cows which were in those days looked upon as decorative animals much cherished by the Grandes of Spain A splendid little horse is also bred in the islands hardy and full of endurance. Quite a good type of pig probably indigenous has long been bred here and must have been considered valuable for stud purposes as a number of these pigs can still be traced on the north coast of Africa There is no live stock census in existence but in any case the industry is not important. It is possible however that with propaganda a market might be found for good bulls rams and boars. Poultry breeding has lately obtained a stimulus from Spain from which country a number of good class birds have been imported.

Local stock breeders are co operating through their agricultural associations which as a rule handle purchases of seeds fertilisers machinery etc while selling their products stock etc. Stud animals are mostly acquired through these the names and addresses of which are —

Livestock Breeding in Belgium

The Live Stock in Belgium comprises 1 631 000 head of cattle 1 342 000 pigs 191 000 sheep and 254 000 horses The four chief cattle breeds in Belgium are easily distinguished through their colour 10

Red Flemish the Blue the Red and the Black and White cattle The blue coloured cattle— Race Bleu —is probably the best meat producer among the various breeds and are early maturing obtaining large size heavy build and fatten easily on pasture as well as in the stable Butchers prefer the fattened beast of this breed owing to its nicely flavoured meat of well mixed fat Full grown and fattened the bullock weighs 1200 kilos and the cow from 600 to 900 kilos. The milk yield reaches from 1250 to 1 400 gallons with an average fat percentage of 3 5 The piebald cattle red as well as black are more or less of the Friesian type good milkers with a fairly satisfactory fat percentage but otherwise not very remarkable The Campinoise cattle are rather small sized slow at fattening but remarkably good milkers on bad or scanty pastures This is probably a breed of cattle that should do very well in more than one pastoral country where it would be a mistake to cross the indigenous cattle with large sized heavy bullsas so often is being done through ignorance but where the native breed could be greatly improved by crossing with bulls of a milk yielding type. Among such countries Afghanistan Abyssinia and Nigeria might be mentioned

As a sheep breeder the Belgian farmer has never the capacity of all developed any particular propensities and the Belgian the main features sheep chiefly in the Provinces of Namur Brabant South Flanders and Hainault are chiefly kept for commercial value

mutton Very little attention is paid to this branch of the live stock industry and where sheep are kept they are very often fed entirely on grazing along the roadside

As for pigs while the so called Flemish pig is certainly not a bad type the tendency to day is towards the Large and Middle White Yorkshire pig Pig breeding is however not exactly to the taste of the Belgian farmers and little if any attention is paid to the necessity of breeding from acknowledged arecrossing and re crossing often taking place without Government interference. When crossed with the Large White Yorkshire boar these Flamsh pigs have proved quite suitable for easy fattening and good hams. It is chelly the small farmer who goes in for pig breeding. In several districts cattle and pigs alternate in the attention of the breeders and feeders so that when the cattle are on grass the pigs are taken in to be fattened and pige Letta

The Belgian draught horse is undoubtedly one of the best of his type and Belgium has developed a remarkable trade in the export of these horses as wherever they are utilised they are slowly pushing other horse breeds aside as is the case in the United States in Sweden and various other countries. During the war years the Belgian draught horse proved his superlative value. To day the prices asked for and obtained by prominent breeders in Belgium would before the war have been looked upon as fabulious but the capacity of always breeding true to type is one of the main features of this horse breed and now more than ever before recognised as one of the greatest

Livestock Breeding in Bulgaria.

The latest Live Stock Census in Bulgaria estimates | the sheep flocks to total about 9 000 000, cattle 1,879,000, pigs 1,091,000, and horses 391,000 head In Bulgaria the actual owners of the land are the peasants who have always been freeholders as no aristocracy ever existed. The legislative power has always been vested in a single Chamber, the Sobranye, elected by universal suffrage, and as the Bulgarian peasant is a man of very strong mentality, proud, independent, industrious and of a careful disposition, this State of peasants may some day become the leading power in the Balkans Of Slav origin the Bulgarians at first settled on the wide, large plains of the Volga whence they later on migrated southward towards the region of the Danube river. Here a Bulgarian realm was early established but as it threatened to become too formidable, the Turks fell over and subjected the Bulgarians for many years after having conquered them in the year 1018 Later on however, assisted by the Wallachs the Turkish voke was thrown off and Bulgaria developed in every direction until once more, in the year 1391, the Turks again fell over the country and annihilated tens of thousands of the best people Since then many Bulgars emigrated to other countries, driven to these through poverty such as Roumania Hungary, Russia and Turkey but when Rumelia finally refused to continue to exist as a Turkish province and in 1886 joined Bulgaria this country has steadily developed its natural resources and to day the Bulgarians proudly call their country Greater Bulgaria As there are only a few industries, farming with live stock breeding is almost the sole occupation

Buffaloes are being reared in many districts. chiefly for draught purposes and among the indigenous cattle strains several are quite valuable easily fattened good milkers and attaining considerable size sheep are, however, the mainstay of the smaller farmers and the three indimenous strains are reared for wool, for mutton, and for milking. As for the peasant farmers, in no branch of live stock rearing is much attention paid to breeding from pure stock but on the larger agricultural estates belonging to the Crown, and on several ecclesiastical domains and farms belong ing to larger estate owners pure bred horses of magnificent qualities are bred, while here and there excellent hulls, rams and boars are also used. In the very extensive forests the pigs are permitted to roam about, often attacked by wolves and often mating with the wild boar Soil and climate in Bulgaria are excellent, with warm but never oppressive summers and the winter climate is cold but salubrious Crops of wheat, barley, oats, maize and millet are as a rule bountiful and all over the southern slopes lovely rose gardens are cultivated in support of Bulgaria's interesting

luxurious flax and hemp crops can be seen in various districts In many parts of Bulgaria the Highland reaches an altitude of 8,000 feet, even higher, and here opportunities for sheep breeding are remarkably good The Bulgarian indigenous sheep can easily be improved through selection and controlled mating, and the wool finds a ready market in all the neighbouring countries

Thirty years ago at least two thirds of all the arable land in Bulgaria was held by small peasant owners whose holdings seldom reached over 40 acres During the last 25 years a great parcelling of land has taken place chiefly resulting from a new law providing for small agricultural holdings. The result has been the creation of many thousands of new farms of from 15 to 20 acres As on all of these small farms wheat, barley and rye are every year cultivated on half of the area it follows that the fertility of the soil is constantly being improved. On many farms in the neighbourhood of Sofia and Kustendil wheat and oats are cultivated mixed It is reliably stated that 15% of the arable land is constantly left fallow Sugar beet cultivation of comparatively recent date, is now coming much into vogue and Bulgaria has now six sugar factories producing some 30 000 tons of sugar from beet Vegetable gardening is coming much to the fore and the area for this branch of agriculture is now over 30 000 acres. The vineyards have lately been given less attention than previously owing to the deplorable encroachments by the Phyloxera to quite recently the absence of modern agricultural tools and machinery, an inheritance from the Turkish days was remarkable, but after the war over 200,000 steel ploughs reaping and drilling machines, etc have been imported. The number of operating motor ploughs is now close on 100. The co operative movement has taken hold of the Bulgarian farmers. nourished by the establishing of very large co-operative consuming Societies in the towns through which grain, flour, dairy products, fruit wine, tobacco, etc. are sold direct to the consumers from the producers. thus the development of Bulgarian Co-operative Agricultural Societies has expanded in a remarkable degree and there are to-day 200 Credit Associations, 361 Consumers' Societies, 171 Buying and Selling Societies, 142 Producers' Societies and 103 Societies for various purposes In the year 1864 the foundation was laid to a remarkable institution under the name of "Agricultural Cash Offices," the purpose of which was the granting of credit to small farmers. Now known as the Agricultural Bank of Bulgaria, this institute is a powerful instrument for help and encouragement of the small-holders, supplying every year credits to over 1,300 agricultural co-operative syndicates The Bank enters into arrangements with the cultivators for the handling and selling of industry, distilling Atter of Roses Tobacco growing their products, advances money at sowing time, colust general, and the quality as a rule very good; and assorts and sells the products; and in resard to their products, advances money at sowing time, collects.

exportable products as tobacco, silk cocoons, attar of roses, wheat and barley, the Bank even arranges for the exports to foreign countries, accounting to the producers the nett results of sales, only charging a small commission for the handling. During the last few years the Bank has erected at many places of the country warehouses and sheds for the sorting and preparation of tobacco and silk excoons, while purchasing and importing machinery, tools seeds, fertilisers insurance policies is stated to be proportionately and all such articles which the farmers require in the larger than in any other country in Europe

course of the year Another highly useful institution, the Bulgarian Central Co operative Bank, a social institution established in 1910, besides being a credit granting bank, is chiefly responsible for insurance of live stock, crops and implements Thus up to 1927 the number of land owners who insure their crops and live stock has increased from year to year, and the percentage of small holders who take out live stock

Livestock Breeding in Corsica.

This little island in the Mediterranean with an i area of about 3 372 square miles where the climate is wonderfully salubrious and the heat as a rule, never excessive, the breeding of sheep and goats is an ancient industry True, agriculture is still in a very backward state, but wheat crops of good quality are harvested and potatoes, olives, lemons and grapes grown in abundance. The chestnut reaches in Corsica remarkable size and is of excellent taste, and in many parts of the island it is the staple food of the people Curiously enough, although the island has long been a French possession, the language spoken is still Italian The people are sturdy and thrifty, of a pleasant mentality, with the exception of their inclination to settle disputes by means of "vendetta," and they are naturally inclined years. It is chiefly as a breeder of shee to farming and live stock breeding. A good type of will have any interest for live stock men sheep is here bred, and the Corsican pig is by no means a very backward animal, and both could be considerably improved through better breeding methods and crossing by superior Stud animals Although the population is larger than in the great Dominion of Newfoundland-about 310,000-for various reasons Corsica still remains to day a backward country owing to lack of enterprise of the Corsicans themselves and lack of means to develop their farms. The history of this island is romantic, as in mediaeval times it was continuously and alternatively invaded by the citizens of Pisa and Genoa The great Emperor Napoleon was a native of Corsica

No live stock census has been taken in recent years It is chiefly as a breeder of sheep that Corsica

Livestock Breeding in Cyprus.

The Live Stock estimate for Cyprus states · cattle 42,000, sheep 280,000, pigs 33,000, horses 3,800

In his recent interesting survey of the history and development of the Island of Cyprus, Mr W H Flinn states that "the importance of Agriculture in Cyprus cannot be exaggerated as a good harvest means all the difference between prosperity and want " And so it is Cyprus is not an island where the cultivated land is in the hands of a few ancient families as is often the case in the islands of the Mediterranean, here it is the small peasant proprietors who cultivate their small acreages of land, selling their produce to the nearest merchant Farming is carried on after the most ancient methods, but conditions are slowly being improved thanks to the untiring efforts on behalf of the Director of Agriculture The drawback is much the result of lack of capital and therefore it is not surprising that during the last two or three years a tendency is noticeable among local capitalists to acquire small peasant holdings with a view of turning contiguous areas into larger estates The Department of Agriculture, however, to which is attached a Vetermary Department with a fairly large staff of adminis trators and advisers, is doing a great deal of good towards enlightening the peasants concerning better methods instead of scratching the surface with a wooden plough. reaping the crops with the sickle and threshing the corn by moving the oxen up and down The agricultural school for the education of farmers' sons, with a three years' course, has already brought about a new way of thinking among these young farmers who recog nise that education may have its advantages students enter the school at the age of fifteen or more, reside in a hostel the cost of which is is 4d or thereabout a day, while they daily receive a similar sum in payment for the field work, etc., they have carried out during the day At Athalassa is a Government Stock Farm for the purpose of teaching live stock breeding and dairy farming in a large scale manner. with splendidly equipped dairies, while in the Laboratories the students have opportunities of learning practical chemistry, Viticulture, Sericulture and Entomology, and in an interestingly organised Apiary with a number of beehives under the tuition of an expert the rational studying and handling of Bee products is learned-important as a very considerable income to the islanders is derived from this branch of agriculture

Currously enough, in spite of the small area of Cyprus some 320 000 acres of cultivatable land are still uncultivated Forests cover some 450 000 acres. and 1,125 000 acres may be estimated to be under cultivation The total area of Cyprus is thus 2.293 810 acres Splendid crops are being grown on the island as can be seen in the plain of Messaoria the central plain of Cyprus stretching over the whole island from Morphou Bay, across to Famacusta During the winter months, between October and March. the raim period, the average fall is 18 5 in .. owing to relied on to turn out a success In March much rain is the rule, to the benefit of the cereal crops, chiefly wheat

It has been stated, and probably truthfully, that a belief in Providence and a deplorable absence of thrift are the chief characteristics of the Cyprus peasant farmer His mentality seems unable to understand the importance of saving for a rainy day, and thus it happens in a year of bad harvest or bad corn prices he is without means of existence and has to resort to moneylenders at exorbitant rates of interest on the security of his land and crops This explains why visitors often see so many peasant farmers waiting outside the Law Court to which they are summoned for debts. Now, however, in this respect matters are improving as the Government some years ago enacted a series of new Laws for the protection of the farmer against usury (the maximum rate of interest on loans to farmers is 12%) A 'Merchants' and Farmers Law compelling the former to keep books and truthfully record their dealings with the farmers, a Law through which an insolvent farmer can exempt from bankruptcy or creditors sale of his property so much as may be necessary to maintain himself and his family. while another Law is now in force according to which the creditor has to prove to the satisfaction of the Judge that his claim is real and based on real facts

Some twenty co-operative credit societies for the benefit of farmers are now in operation, chiefly with money borrowed from the Government at a peppercorn rate of interest, for the purpose of lending it in small

portions to co operated members

The chief crops in Cyprus are wheat, barley and oats, but the cultivation of fruit is perhaps even more important Thus considerable capital is accruing from walnuts, chestnuts, almonds, figs, apricots, peaches, etc. The Cyprus cauliflowers and tomatoes are renowned all over the Mediterranean countries The locust bean is perhaps the national crop and the export trade in this article, chiefly with England, Egypt and France, is increasing from year to year The locust trees are certainly being improved and the average crop may be estimated at half ton per tree valued at 35s to 45s Cyprus, is of course, a cotton producer, although on a small scale, and the crop is as a rule turned into manufactured goods locally.

In the year 1898 improvement in live stock raising was commenced A Stock Improvement Committee, formed for handling the matter, commenced importing stallions The already mentioned Experimental Farm has been added to from time to time for stock raising purposes and has now an area of 2,000 acres Juvenile convicts from the central prison are carrying out most of the work, an experiment that has turned out an unqualified success. During the last eight years live stock-stallions cattle pigs, etc. have been regularly imported. Eight stallions are now placed at Athalassa Devon and Shorthorn cattle have which happy circumstance the harvest can as a rule be been imported into the island and crossed with indigenous cattle, the crosses turning out fairly well Whether these breeds are the most suitable remains to be seen and it is possible that an entirely new type of cattle will have to be created as the inhabitants in the island are very prejudiced against consuming Cyprus beef A number of cattle are consequently imported for slaughtering purposes

As regards pig breeding it would be well within the possibilities to create a very large pig industry in the Island of Cyprus The miserable wretchedlooking native breed has now almost disappeared as a result of regular imports of the Large Black pig from England and the stationing of boars at Stud stables in many districts The Gloucester Old Spots pig and Middle White Yorkshires have been imported and done fairly well

As regards sheep breeding, the Government have for some time tried to create a type of sheep with a view of breeding wool of more uniform quality, so as to demonstrate to flock owners in the island that sheep breeding is a paying proposition. Whether any imported sheep breeds in the long end can act as good substitutes for the indigenous Cyprus sheep is questionable, as this historic fat-tailed sheep has been bred in the island since time immemorial and become almost a local necessity It is yet too early to predict how the imported sheep types will thrive, and meantime great care is given to breeding matters

Among other animals, donkeys are bred in the island and exported in large numbers to Anatolia, even India and the mule here in Cyprus is probably one of the finest and most elegant of its type to be seen certainly far superior to mules bred in any other Mediterranean country Then, of course, the Cyprus camel is a good specimen, chiefly suitable for transport work. but unsuitable for trotting Goats are bred, but as Mr Flinn stated not so long ago, they are " an unmitigated curse

The Exhibition held in the year 1923 acted as an eve-opener to the inhabitants themselves as they here, for the first time in the annals of this ancient island, had opportunities to study the benefits of organised live stock breeding based on prominent stud animals and the benefit accruing to soil and crops from utilising modern machinery and tools

The Cyprus breeds of cattle were up to the time of the occupation in 1878 almost entirely used for draught and they certainly are excellent for that purpose The military authorities would not look at them for beef, and for many years they imported oxen for the troops from the Danube, and it was not until 1893 that an effort was made by the inspector of agricultural industries to prove that they were suitable for beef production

The Cyprus cows are very poor milkers, and with a view of improving their milking capacity and the quantity of the meat without deteriorating them for draught, the Government some time ago sanctioned an mportation of one Aberdeen-Angus bull and one Red

Poll bull from England

The flock of Cyprus sheep at Athalassa was purchased in 1904 from different flock owners in the Island The object aimed at was a general improvement of the wool, with the elimination of This improvement has been slow owing to the difficulty of obtaining suitable rams to prevent in breeding. The work done at Athalassa has been an object lesson to the island shepherds who now realise the advantages to be gained by selecting their rams and ewes for breeding purposes. Whenever there is a sale at Athalassa they seem willing to pay high prices knowing that they receive good value for their money Every year the old ewes are culled, sold and replaced

A serious mistake which Cyprus flock owners commit is that they generally keep more sheep than they can find grazing for, with the result that in the autumn the sheep are practically in a state of starvation and very liable to disease. When rain and green herbage arrive the sheep feed ravenously, and unable to stand the sudden change, a considerable number die Recently some Merino rams and eves were imported from South Africa as an experiment at the Athalassa Stock Farm

Years ago the Stock Committee imported two boars and three sows of the Large Black breed, and from this time dates the improvement of the Cyprus The Large Blacks are hardy and admirably suited to the climate, and the result has been a general improvement of the pig stock in the island Pig breeding at Athalassa has been steadily maintained, and 1,977 pigs of different breeds have been distributed in the villages with the result that there is a very marked improvement. The boars are stationed at the Stud stables in different parts of the island and the villagers appreciate being able to get their sows served at a fee of four pence Boars are also being presented to the villagers in the Papho District on condition that they must be kept for three years for Stud purposes, after which time they become the property of the farmer with whom the agreement has been made

Cyprus is the home for white and bronze turkeys They thrive very well indeed, though as a rule they do not run to a great size The American Mammoth Bronze breed has been imported, and up to the present done very well, and it is hoped that the native breeds will be improved by crossing with these birds

Aylesbury ducks were first imported in 1895 when they were distributed in the village of Kythrea where there is perennial water They have done extraordinarily well and displaced the native small ducks A few years ago, however, the villagers came to the conclusion that ducks foul the water supply. and a resolution was passed among themselves " that they should be banished

Cyprus has a healthy climate for Poultry breeding, but great difficulty has been experienced in the past in combating the various diseases prevalent in the Mediterranean These have been mostly overcome and the poultry to-day is healthier than ever before-There is a great demand for stud birds

Livestock Breeding in Czecho Slovakia.

The last Live Stock census estimates the number of cattle at 4,602,000 head, sheep 860,000, pigs 2,540,000. and the horse stock at 740 000.

From various points of view live stock breeding in [ this country could easily serve as an object lesson in what can be achieved through agricultural co operation and a strong will to achieve results The farmers have long aimed at eleminating indiscriminate breeding and increasing the breed capacity and performance ability of their herds, and resulting from well thought-out schemes for regulating breeding with a view of developing all that was good in the indigenous breeds, it was long ago decided that these could best be improved through group selection and controlled mating, confining such measures to local or District appointed This led to a movement among farmers and breeders to form Associations for mutual selfsupport, and a number of Societies were created in which membership was only offered to such farmers who would undertake to strictly adhere to adopted rules In the following list of breeders Societies the diversity of their aims and purposes may be seen. The number of co-operative horse, cattle pig, etc breed Societies officially registered is now 373, considerable indeed when the size of the country is taken into consideration, but it should be remarked that the greater number of these many Societies only register as members the local breeders. Compared with prewar figures when Bohemia was still a part of the Austrian Empire, the number of co operative Societies has increased by over 50% Resulting from political conditions and the refusal on the part of the Bohemians to have their administration and conditions of life regulated from Vienna, a movement very long ago was started with a view of economically developing the country in every respect for the purpose of biding the nsychological moment when the hated voke could be thrown off, and this truly national movement was powerfully promoted through their ardent love of their country and its history, the romance of which stretches back almost one thousand years It was felt that the road, to success and independence was through self education and thus it is explained why the agricultural schools in Czecho Slovakia like all other Institutions for education in this remarkable country, have long been a pattern of what such schools should be In short, everybody is trained or training with a view of making himself suitable for his place in the country. and probably no other land in Europe has adopted such a well-defined and highly efficient system of popular education This being the case, it follows that agricultural training has led to improvements in every beet cultivation barley production the pork and ham for a number of years, not repayable until the borrowindustry, brewing of ale, dairying beet sugar manu- ing Society is capable of refunding etc

facturing and live stock breeding, powerfully assisted by Government and agricultural credit Institutions. illustrate the very high level to which these branches of agriculture have been brought through the farmers themselves A number of efficient banks exist for the assistance of the breeder and farmer, and the thrifty agriculturist can always reckon with an accommodating hand from these when needed Agricultural District Boards control and manage a number of pursuits, and appoint Committees for selection and decision of which animals shall be admitted for breeding

As regards pig breeding, this branch of the live stock industry is all over the country supervised by small local amalgamations of breeders farming in a district, and these in turn, are supervised by the Co operative Breed Associations which tackle the matter of controlling the performances of the breed animals Sheep breeding has never been given particular attention in Czecho Slovakia as mutton is not favoured by the housewife, and sheep are mostly maintained for their milk which is largely utilised in cheese making. The highly developed cloth weaving industry in Czecho Slovakia always gives preference to the wool grown in the country

In regard to horse breeding, the heavy Oldenburg horse is much in favour and bred in many parts of the country, and State owned stallions are maintained at a number of large Studs Stallion Depôts are likewise in function and spread all over the country. The English Shire horse is a favourite, as is the Pinzgauer horse, but the Belgian heavy draught horse is probably the chief favourite among the farmers little hardy Hucul horse, so extensively bred in Hungary, is also largely bred in the hilly parts of this country

The Simmental and the Brown Swiss cattle are much in favour and widely bred, but lately the Moravian native cattle breed seems to be singled out for special attention The Department of Agriculture through its live stock section, is continuously assisting the Breed Societies by the granting of monetary help towards acquiring valuable Stud animals and in various other directions the Department is exercising benevolent influence for the good of the breeders-through Research work at State-organised laboratories where experiments are carried out under the supervision of experts with a view of discovering ways and means of assistance, and suitable for a local district. by undertaking the control of breeding operations at Government sphere of agricultural activities and to-day their sugar expense, or by simply lending money without interest

Livestock Breeding in Denmark.

The Live Stock estimate for Denmark states cattle 2 840,000, sheep 231,000, pigs 3,124,000, horses 548,000.

There are few countries where the farmers and I breeders so successfully battled against difficulties and obtained such splendid results as is the case in Denmark Bled almost white by the terrible war years during last century, the Danish people made up their mind to consolidate the position as an agricultural community and develop their natural resources on national lines Without any assets useful for industrial development such as coal and minerals live stock breeding and dairying seemed to be the means hereof and with remarkable single-mindedness the Danes set about organising farming and milk production on new principles Fortunately, men such as the late Docent N Ford and similar others clearly saw that the development of Denmark's national asset, pig and cattle breeding, could only run along lines suitable to the country's resources and plans were worked out for bringing about unity in breeding while at the same time the co-operative movement, so sympathetic to the Danes, took hold of their imagination. By stating that to-day every single pig bred in Denmark is a replica of all the other pigs the picture is given in a nutshell This wonderful accomplishment has only been possible owing to the determination of the Danish farmers to build up a real export trade as theirs is today with the United Kingdom The percentage of men devoting their energies to commercial activities or to manufacturing is remarkably small in companson with the great percentage of the people, men and women, who devote their whole life to live stock production, dairying and other agricultural pursuits, but they are backed by the Government. by their own organisations, by their co-operative "instinct," and by a feeling that they are fighting a continuous battle for their own existence. Whether the Danes can continue to hold the English bacon market as they hold it to-day is doubtful, and probably some day the British Dominions will oust them as

however is not yet, and meantime one cannot see competition from any other source, as the only present alternative would be Germany where one of the best landrace pigs in Europe is bred and fattened Germany has her home market to supply, and the Germans are probably the largest pork eating nation at the present time

The Danish Slaughter House figures for 1925,

1026, 1027 were Pigs 3 "66 1°9 3 83 666 5 098 206 1925

This remarkable development in Denmark, as already stated is backed by the Government, but kept alive and maintained by the Danish farmers themselves who have shewn remarkable skill in organising their agriculture. Judging matters from an outsider a point of view, every pursuit seems to be regulated, directed and supervised by themselves for themselves, and through their own financial means Here are a few facts and figures

The Department of Agriculture, Copenhagen, is the highest authority on farming. Then there is the Landvaesenskontor under which a number of Secretariats are working, dealing with Rates, Taxes, Accountancy, Organisation, Tithes, Small Holdings, Travelling of farmers for study purposes, Contributions to Live Stock Breed Associations, Breeds, Breeding Centres, agricultural Exhibitions and Shows, Dairy Organisations, the Veterinary Service, Experimental Laboratories, Poultry Breeding, Honey production, Game, Forestry, and so on As will be seen, a large field of administration

The Royal Veterinary and Landbohöjskole's Serum Laboratory, Copenhagen, is a remarkable institution, aiming at producing scrum, vaccine, tuberculin and many bacteriological preparations utilised in the fight against animal diseases. This Laboratory has chief suppliers to the British breakfast table. This, carried on investigations and research work during very many years, and enormous sums of money have certainly been saved for live stock breeders through discoveries made there from time to time

"Statens Husdyrbrugs Udvalg" Government institution organised for handling all lands of experiments and research connected with live stock breeding. The best brains in Denmark among breeders and agriculturists are always drawn to its Committee of Control whose work is of the greatest benefit to farming. Then there is Statens Meiers Udvalg" originally organised by the Government, handling the many questions on which the Danish dairy industry rests. Its Board of Directors eight in number, is appointed by the farmers, with the approval of the Minister of Agriculture and likewise drawn from the best brains and experts. A Government experimental dairy- Statens Forsogs Mejeri "-is constantly working out new ideas and suggestions on behalf of farmers and darrymen connected with the milk, butter and cheese trade having at its disposal for experiments the milk of some 1 000 dairy cattle. obtained from private producers as well as from several Government farms

Outside the pleasant little town of Hillerod. not very distant from Copenhagen, the Government run several agricultural farms with a total area of I 100 acres all of which is placed at the service of the previously described institution for field experiments and matters connected with stock breeding and feeding etc. The activities which are here carried on are always of the greatest interest to the Danish farmers, small and big, all over the country, who never neglect to pay frequent visits to these farms to see and learn for themselves what is going on These acti vities are controlled by a Committee consisting of prominent agriculturists and live stock breeders

The Royal Danish Agricultural Society- Land husholdnings Selskab -is a busy institution indeed Under this numerous expert advisers on breeding dairy cattle, pig breeding, breeding of light horses, butter and cheese making (one or more for each of the various Danish islands, and a number for Jutland) and experts on agricultural machinery, sugar beet cultivation, etc. are busily filling their days by advising the farmers

As regards the pig industry, a permanent council
—"Bedommelse Udvalg for Svineavls Centre —is entrusted with all matters pertaining to the control of pig breeding for experimental purposes The Committee is drawn likewise from the best known brains and successful breeders and men conversant with the Abattor industry, the Department of Agriculture appointing the President The Committee supervise the experiments in feeding, breeding selection, etc carried on at the various centres which are selected for experiment breeding for one year at a time. Among the various institutions dealing with agriculture and live stock breeding in Denmark, this is probably the most popular and important, as its work is recognised as of real national value

tories fertilisers, artificial manures and cattle and nig feeding stuff are constantly being examined, and probably in no other country in the world do the farmers and breeders attach such importance to applyted results as pronounced in these Laboratories, as is the case in Denmark where it would be impossible for a merchant firm or co operative society handling these merchandises, to sell anything to the farmer in these categories without being first asked to show the analysis

Another institution whose business is to create and maintain co operation between the Provincial agricultural associations for promotion of any matter of interest to Denmark's agriculture-" De Samvirkende Danske Landboforeninger -deserves to be mentioned The chief idea is to maintain a united front in dealing with the Government or other indus tries, and to protect the farming and live stock breeding community against possible infringements of rights or encroachments of territory This is a singularly successful institution, one that has bestowed much benefit on Danish farmers. The committee of Control central as well as departmental in the different Islands is drawn from owners of small or middle-sized farms and the tenant farmers, and rarely from larger estate The institution is in possession of large funds It appoints a special committee for the regis tration of any and all such information concerning Danish breed animals that may be considered of economic and national value in live stock breeding, and this committee- Registreringsudvalg for Kvaeg og Heste —issues a Register and Stud Book in which yearly "the results of Research in live stock breeding" The committee is working in two subare set out committees, one for experiments with breeds and the other for live stock breeding pure and simple Some very remarkable Reports have been issued and the advent of the Committee's publications always looked forward to

The Danish Small Holders' Association 18 another remarkable 'movement' towards bringing farming within the reach of the smallest man, but enough has elsewhere been written and stated concerning this organisation which truly may be called and is, one of the pillars of Denmark's agriculture

The Danish dairies are now brought up to the highest pitch of production and they all belong to Associations and societies handling their interest with the single point in view-the production of butter for the English market.

The Associated Danish co operative Pig Abattoirs embrace fifty one co-operative Associations and their Council representing an enormous number of pig breeders, has for its business continuous watch of everything that may promote or retard the interests of these breeders. The members of the Council are all small farmers and breeders or men intimately connected with the business of pig slaughtering and its activities during many years have been one of the blessings enjoyed by the Danish farming community Let it be mentioned that this Society also looks after and arranges for mutual pig transport insurance

There is a number of Associations and societies working exclusively for the benefit of horse breeding Those who are conversant with the Danish horse breeding industry will readily agree that during the last thirty years a remarkable uniformity in type has been created and that the Danish draught horse to-day is a valuable animal. These Associations have for a number of years devoted much attention to the oues tion of breeding and selecting brood mares and at the various agricultural Shows and exhibitions some remarkable horses may be seen which may easily compete with the best draught horses in many other countries In the year 1004 a Breed Association under the name of Staelland was founded for the purpose of promoting the breeding of Half Blood, and marked results can be shown The well-known Frederiks borg Stallion Depot a very old Institution embracing all the Danish Islands has a fairly large number of members enjoys State subvention, and arranges every year for a series of courses where the young farmers can learn how to breed and treat light horses Spread all over the country a number of Horse

Breeders' Associations are doing much good to encourage the interest in this animal. Thus there is an Association of Breeders of the Belgan heavy horse with branch associations in every Island and on Jutland. There is one Society for promoting the breeding of Thoroughbreds and another for the breed

Breed Centres for pigs are arranged all over the country and their chief business is the Creation of a national pig breed possessing robustness ability to obtain a pretisely fixed live weight at a fixed datability to fully utilise the feed, and of high fecundity, but alongside the rational development of such a National Landrace pig, these breed centres also work for the development and maintaining of the Large White Yorkshire race from which bears are utilised for crossing with the Danish Landrace pig. As already stated uniformity in breeding is one of the spread such in Danish live stock breeding and these Breed Centres have demonstrated and will continue to prove to all the world what can be done in the direction of organisa trans of breeding.

The Danish goat is lately coming to the fore firms and several breed Centres have been organised for the breeding of Saanen goats as well as goats of the Danish landrace. These vanous centres—among which should be mentioned such at Faanup, Norrebro near Manho and Odense for Saanen goats, and at Slagelse H Broby and Spanghuset near Stake for Danish landrace—are also working for the export of prominent breed animals

Cattle breeding in Denmark is chiefly concerned with the steady development of the indigenous cattle races. There is a number of these Associations which work for the development of the inherent good qualities in these breeds and among them the following should be mentioned.

There is however, a central organisation in existence dealing with the various smaller Sheep Breeders. Societies chefly in the Island of Fy.

For the purpose of developing Denmark's export trade in live stock and live stock products several large organisations exist, the memberships of which seem steadily increasing. Among the most prominent

Livestock Breeding in Estonia.

Although the total area of Estonia is only about 18.362 square miles of which a proximately 41 /6 represents meadows and pasturage, the number of hyestock is relatively high-500,100 head of cattle, 333,100 pigs, 665,000 sheep and nearly 226,300 horses. Agriculture and cattle breeding are the mainstay of the population and solendid cattle have been reared for centuries by the farmers who are enterprising and born live-stock men The explanation probably lies in the circumstance that agriculture and cattle breeding have been conducted since mediæval times on West-European lines, and persevered on these lines also through the period of Russian rule under which Estonia passed from Sweden in 1721. Estonia regained her independence in 1918 and has since made great strides in the development of her economic life. The capital, Tallinn, formerly known as Reval, is the chief port of Estonia, from which regular steamship lines with England are maintained.

Estonia seems to forge ahead as a dairy country, where the co-operative spirit has permeated the whole population so that the production of milk is subject to a very active control in regard to feeding and performances, and it is stated that the 200 or more milk producers co-operative Societies have during the last ten years succeeded in weeding out between 27% and 30% of all less valuable dairy cattle, not a mean achievement indeed in a country that suffered very cruelly through the devastating war. In the year 1908 the first Milk Producers' Co-operative Society was formed and Estonia's milk production increases year after year. Surprisingly large quantities are to-day handled in mentioned hereunder.

the Estonian dairies, and there is no exaggeration in stating that Estonia dairy products rank among the best all the world over. The following number of Breeders' Societies is a sufficient testimonial to the high degree of development to which the farmers have reached, entirely through their own efforts and co-operation between high and low, rich and poor,

Among the forces contributing to the development of agriculture, the "Estonian Society for the develop-ment of Agriculture" should be specially mentioned. a very live Association of Estonian farmers and breeders, wide awake to the fact that only through the production of agricultural produce of unquestionably high quality is it possible for the farmers to obtain top prices for their products in the world markets where to-day the inscription "Pure Estonian Butter," etc., and "Under Government Control" are guarantees of the value of so labelled produce.

Not only do the Estonians breed valuable Landrace cattle, but their sheep and pigs are productive animals. and everything points towards Estonia rapidly creating a bacon industry. The pig stock is being graded up . and products, such as bacon and pork owing to the good qualities have received a ready market in England and Sweden As a poultry producer, Estonia has likewise made good strides during the last few years, and the poultry stock is being improved in every direction Live stock breeders desirous of entering into contact with Estonian stock breeders can best do so through the various Societies of breeders

Livestock Breeding in Finland.

By I IYSKE, General Secretary, Central Organization of Finland's Agricultural Associations

The Live Stock estimate for Finland states: cattle 1,866,000, sheep 1,552,000, pigs 383,000, horses 400,000.

Finland comprises some 33 000,000 ha of which | Finland in 1910 in quantities of 37 and 80 million 2 132 000 ha under plough and 580,000 ha pastures Arable land thus comprises six per cent of the total area Of this arable land, 37 2% produces cereals, 42% potatoes and roots, 40 4% grass and clover, and 26% other varieties of produce, while the remaining percentage is fallow, etc. Of the total area, forest covers 73 5% or 74 ha per inhabitant. The population of Finland was in 1925, 3 495,186, of which 83.2% lived in the country and 16 8% were town dwellers The number of farms is 250,749, of which 96 474 have an area of 0 5-3 ha , 98 258, 3-10 ha ; 41,199, 10 25 ha , 11 125, 25-50 ha , 2,136, 50-100 ha, and 937 100 ha or more arable land. It will thus be seen that Finland is a land of small cultivators

developed Thus in 1926 there were -

Other Co-operative Societies

The Co operative Dairies are managed by a Central Organisation, and the Loan Societies are likewise under a central management while egg producers, butter makers, and general trading in cattle, pigs, sheep, meat and bacon are all under organised management Agricultural machinery, fertilizers, manure and forest products are also handled by special organisations During 1925 Finland produced nearly 13 million kilos of butter, and 31 million kilos of cheese, and exported paper, timber and pulp of a total value of 8 000 000 Finn-Marks farmer are the "Journal for Cattle Breeding," and the Fertilizers and cattle food were imported into Finnish Agricultural Society's Publication 4 548 000 000 Finn-Marks

Agricultural Education is improving Thus there are now 40 Agricultural Schools, 35 Schools for Live Stock Breeding, 3 Schools for Dairying, I for Horse Management, 4 for Forestry, 5 for Gardening, 6 for Agricultural Survey, 1 Higher Institute for Live Stock Breeding and one such for Gardening Science is the topic in 34 Schools

There is a number of agricultural Associations and Societies which between them permanently engage from 800 000 instructors and teachers

The following Societies should be mentioned

There are now 543 Milk Control Associations embracing 11,000 Herds of a total of 159,250 head of cattle. The average production per cow in 1926 was 2,427 kilos of milk and 96 kilos of butter fat The milk is generally very fat, from 4-4 5 per cent

During 1926, 619 Bull Societies with 8,443 members, owners of 43 009 cows, were in operation The Finnish farmers have organised their various activities in several hundred local Associations, all of which are "The Agricultural Producers Central controlled by

Pig Breeding.

By A. SOLOKANGAS

Since the war strenuous efforts have been ! exercised for the improvement of pig breeding and the development of the native race. The work is only progressing very slowly and the annual pork produc tion is round about to kilos per inhabitant-35 000 000 blos pork products. The annual imports of American bacon reach some 2 000 000 kilos but are steadily decreasing Improvements in the breeding industry are chiefly in favour of the Yorkshire type which has been encouraged in Finland during the last 30 years based upon direct imports from England or from Sweden Denmark and Norway of the native race both types being suitable for the requirements of the country. The native Landrace pig is hardy prolific and remarkable for its tender care of the progeny. The colour is white the head long drawn and narrow and the body rather flat and very deep closely covered by rough hair It develops more slowly than the Yorkshire cross but at the age of 6 or 7 months it easily reaches a live weight of 100 kilos Well catered for the Finnish Landrace pg is an ex cellent pig for the small farmer producing that class of meat which is preferred by the people

The Yorkshire pigs already highly developed have proved the most suitable for Finnish conditions being splended mothers with large litters To-day the York shire my is mostly found in the south w stern and southern parts of the country owing to the circumstance that there is an abundance of skim milk always available at the existing dairies. In these parts of the country pig breeding is carried on for the purpose of catering for the export market chiefly in Sweden

the pure bred Landrace pig and 22 for breeding the Yorkshire pig These Breed Centres are under strict supervision of breed experts and some 700 breed animals are annually produced and sold all over the country The ability to produce large litters is given special attention and the daily increase in the live weight of the young pigs while still suckling is also controlled

The Finnish Pig Breeders Stud Book is kent at Kangasala where both the Landrace pig and the York shire pig entries are recorded. As indispensable con ditions for entry it is required that the animal is normally developed one year old that it has at least 12 teats and that it has produced at least one litter of which 8 must be alive As regards the Landrace pig. it is not stipulated that its origin shall be certified while for the Yorkshire pig Pedigree must be proved So far this Herd Book has been issued in 3 Volumes of which the last contains 595 entries of Landrage DIES and 1 310 of Yorkshires

Pig breeding control has proved immensely hene ficial for the industry The main point in the super vision aims at comparison between the Landrace pig and the Yorkshire type with a view of proving food consumption in relation to daily increase in weight Thus during the years 1926 1927 experiments proved that I kilo increase of weight has been produced on 32 food units the average figure for the York shire pig being 35 and for the Landrace pig 37

It will thus be seen that both these types of pigs have so far proved fairly satisfactory and it may safely be asserted that the interest among farmers for improvements in breeding and development has been Pig breeding Centres have been established all over maintained. It is therefore to be hoped that the Pig the country and there are to-day II such for breeding Breeding industry in Finland will steadily progress

Sheep Breeding

By THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE Helsingfors

During recent years great attention has been ! paid in Finland to the breeding of the native Finnish Several fore gn breeds were introduced in the past but these never thrived in the cold cl mate of Finland and under cond tions obtaining there An exception however may be made of Shrop shire sheep which can be seen to some extent in southern Finland There are some cross breds crossed with the native breed but the Landrace sheep consti | best sheep breeding districts-Kainuu I tute the majority

The Finnish Landrace sheep belongs to the northern (Finnish Scandinavian) short tailed sheen the original breed of the Scandinavian countries Sweden Norway and Denmark The colour is black grey or white but most popular is the white sheep some 15 200 are black. The head is fine the muzzle narrow and without wool the ears long extending right across the head The tail is short without wool In

The Finnish sheep is of short stature, the ewes between 55-60 cm and the rams 60 65 cm Full-grown ewes weigh about 50 kg, rams 60 kg, although a liveweight of 80 kg is often reached. The wool ranges in quality from fine and close to coarse and thin. The yearly production is often from 2 5-3 kg The fecundity is remarkable, twins more often than not being the excellent mutton and closeness of the wool

rule The ewes produce plenty of milk, are good mothers and suckle their lambs well Breeders' Association " has existed 10 years and records entries of Pedigrees The main points on which the Finnish Sheep

Breeders concentrate their attention are fecundity,

Horse Breeding.

By E SIHVOLA

The Finnish horse belongs to the North European I forest horse-races, and is related to the native horse in the Baltic Provinces and Poland, thus belonging to a breed which during the world war became celebrated for its remarkable endurance The Finnish horse, however, is considerably larger in size, measuring 158 cm in height Probably he represents an intermediary type between the light and the draught horse His head, ears and neck are not of the fine structure of the light horse, but not so heavy as in the draught horse The body is heavier and broader, and its depth is remarkable The live weight of the present day purebred horse varies in the same degree as its size. Thus the heaviest horses weigh 550 to 660 kilos. Chest and shoulders are relatively large The compass of the knee of the stallion is about 34 cms. The length of the fetlock is medium, occasionally rather short. Mane and tail are thick, hair coarse. In the shanks and fetlocks the hair is somewhat long. The colour is usually bay. varying from pink to bay and chestnut, and a dark line on the back is quite common. Other colours, such as black, roan and straw are relatively rare The foals are generally born in May In June the grazing time begins. the foals and young horses are turned out on the grass where they stay night and day until autumn Fullgrown horses are kept on pastures when disengaged and receive only one feed in the stable during resting time This can easily be done as the summer nights in Finland are very light and his strength is apparent by stating that he can easily pull the plough to a depth of 20 cm. His temperament is quiet and he is very energetic. As a pack horse over the often bad roads of Finland he shews great endurance, being able to cover 10 km per hour often 90 km in 6 hours

At the great Exhibition held at Petrograd in 1913 Finnish horses participated and were awarded, in competition with Russian horses, the highest prize for endurance The lifetime of this horse is remarkably long, more often than not his working days continuing until reaching 18-20 years

In the year 1907 the "Stud Book for the Finnish Horse" was commenced and to-day the breed is controlled by 19 Stud Book Associations, spread over 19 horse breeding districts, each district being supervised by a Breed director, whose duty it is to advise the small farmer in breeding and supervise the exact entries in the Stud Book The present horse population in Finland is about 400,000, and a great number is exported to Russia and Sweden This type of horse has proved the most suitable for the requirements of the country. chiefly in the forests where timber cutting and logging is one of the staple industries of Finland

The Stud Book is conducted in two different departments, one for the heavier type of draught horse, the other for the lighter type suitable for draught purposes as well as for riding and carriage use. The Finnish Remount Department draws all its require-The Finnish horse is chiefly used as a cart horse, ments of horses exclusively from the Finnish breed

Livestock Breeding in France.

The Live Stock estimate states cattle 14 938,000, sheep 10,710,000, pigs 6,017 000, horses 2,920 000

Resulting from the French Revolution, France | was divided into Departments in the year 1790, having previously been divided into Governments and Provinces From an agricultural point of view, i.e. in reference to what the country produces, the division into agricultural districts is practical Thus, the southern district, bordering on the Mediterranean is the olive district. The district, up to a line running in a north-eastern direction from the Department of Gironde to the Vosges, is the maize district, from the mouth of the River Loire to Méziéres in the Ardennes above which line the vine will not grow, the wine producing district extends, and the remainder of the country, beyond this district, is the farm staple product district, being chiefly devoted to cropping and live stock breeding Of the population, after the war life and work to agriculture and stock breeding. The soil is remarkable for its sub-division. France is to-day the largest wheat producing country in Europe. having prior to the Russian revolution been second Probably she is also the largest potato and sugar beet producer in Europe The production of wine from the grapes is, of course, the main agricultural product, and so far, no other country in the world has reached the position of France as a wine producer Some 1,800 000 hectares bear grapes A large area is unproductive, being marshes, swamps and moors The country is traversed by numerous rivers, few of which, however, are of any great importance. The climate is probably the finest on the continent of Europe Next to Great Britain, France is the largest Colonial Power, holding in Africa Algeria, Tunis, part of Morocco Senegal, part of the Niger Territory, Guinea, the Ivory Coast Territory, Dahome part of Congo, and the Soniali Coast Territory In Asia Cochin China, Cambodia Annam, Tonking Laos, Pondicherry, Karical and Chandernagor In the South Sea France holds New Caledonia, the Loyalty Islands, the Marquesas the Paumotu, the Gambia and the Clipperton islands In the Indian Ocean the islands of Madagascar, Réunion, the Mayotte, the Comoro Islands the New Amsterdam and the Kerguelen islands On the American continent Guiana, besides the islands of Martinique, Guadeloupe and Marie Galante, while the small unimportant islands close to the Newfoundland Coast, St Pierre and Miguelon are also under French sway Resulting from these many colonial possessions and their diversity from various points of view, France is fortunate in having this large field to absorb her manufactures and surplus hve stock

Owing to the diversity of soil and climatic conditions on the country, a great number of breeds of cattle and very little favoured in France are now making headway, sheep have evolved in course of time, and while some of these are not of any outstanding ments France of Black White Holland Cattle' domiciled at Lille, breeds several very aluable types of both cattle and is increasing its membership every year A number of sheep As a horse breeder France has always been good herds can be seen in this district. The white-prominent Speaking generally about the cattle breeds, it might be stated that the Dual Purpose breeds, with few exceptions are most popular among the agriculturists. The French are energetic farmers and live stock breeders, and while the various breeds and types undoubtedly locally suit a District's requirement, they have correctly a few comments, they have correctly a few comments.

and types undoubtedly locally suit a District's requirements, they have scarcely, so far, come up to the excellence of the British breeds. Therefore although obviously France has all the advantages in her own Colonies and Protectorates when introducing her own breeds, undoubtedly many of the British breeds would prove of greater utility.

Among the valuable cattle breeds in France, pride of place is easily taken by the magnificent Charollause breed. Among the world's beef producing breeds, Charollause cattle hold a very prominent of the position and it is remarkable that they are not more widely known outside France

These cattle are truly a product of the soil, having originated in the very district where they still chiefly and largely exist, the district of Nevers The actual stock of this breed is now well over 1,500 000 head The Charollaise Herd Book Association containing all the Pedigrees, was founded in 1887, and no animal whose progenitors cannot be proved, obtains entry The Herd Book Association arrange great sales every year at Charolles (Department Saone et Loire) St Amand, Nevers, and at Moulins (Department Allier) The outstanding feature of this breed is its great fecundity They are fairly good milkers, fatten easily. reaching a very heavy weight, and their milk white colour gives them a most pleasing appearance. The Limousine cattle are, likewise a prominent breed, good milkers, easily fattened, chiefly bred in the district of Limoges They are favoured by many breeders and of late years have met with a good demand Overseas The Salers cattle is another breed of outstanding merits, chiefly bred in the Aurillac district, Cantal The Maine Anjou cattle are very good milkers and a number of breeders in the Sarthe and Maine et Loire districts hold that the breed should be given preference as "Dual Purpose cattle The so called Flemish cattle—' Herd Book Bovine Flamande -are chiefly bred in the district round about Lille, in the Pas-de-Calais and on the Somme, and is a breed of outstanding merits, as is also the Normandy cattle, a breed likewise originating in the north of France These cattle are much in vogue, and also appreciated in several Latin American countries, and the Breed Society is developing its activities with a view of captivating foreign markets for breed animals The number of Normandy cattle breeders is now quite considerable The Friesian cattle, not so long ago, very little favoured in France are now making headway, and the French Herd Book Association of Breeders of Black White Holland Cattle' domiciled at Lille. is increasing its membership every year. A number of coloured breed known as "Tachetee de l'Est" are excellent cattle, large-sized, well developed and fairly good milkers. The black-white Vosges cattle are also good milkers and easily fattened. In the north of France an excellent breed called. La Race Bleu du Nord' exists, not so long ago on the point of The chief breed districts are in the Department of Avesne between Le Cateau and Solesme, and in Bavay, Le Quesnoy, and Maubeuge At a recent Show held at Cambrai a most remarkable collection of these 'Blue Cattle drew the admiration of every visitor A Herd Book was recently started in which every Bavay breeder is now registered Another breed very little known outside France, while even unknown to many a French breeder, the Montbeliarde cattle, certainly deserves to be better known, being excellent milkers and pronounced beef producers The average weight when fattened is for the bullocks 800 and for the heifers 600 kilos The breed district is in Doubs, some 45 miles from Besangon. The milk has a high fat percentage In the Cote d Or, Chatillionsur-Seme, a great number of breeders go in for the Brune des Alpes cattle, quite a good breed, chiefly suitable for the district

Excellent sheep of the Merino type are bred in France, such as the 'L lle de France' sheep, chiefly bred in the Eure-et Loire the breeders of which now enter their flocks in their own Flock Book Chatillonais sheep are likewise a good breed, and along the Marne La Manche excellent sheep are bred, particularly favoured by the butcher for their fine mutton Breeders of this sheep maintain their own Flock Book at Saint Lo In the Sainte Menéhould district another Merino type is bred, known as ' Merino de Champayne, and the "Merino du Soissonais, chiefly raised in the Soisson district, are undoubtedly fine sheep Among the various sheep breeds, the Rambouillet breed is however, the most remarkable, and all other Rambouillet sheep types in other parts of the world emanate from this breed. A number of other breeds with their own flock book Societies are favoured in different parts of the country, such as the Charmoise sheep and the Bizet sheep, mainly bred in the Haut Loire and in the Cantal where the average flocks run from 70 to 120 It is probable that this breed through proper breed material selection and strict control might develop in size and fattening capacity as the grazing grounds are among the richest pastures in France This interesting breed appears in two distinct types-black with a convex profile, a large sized animal, known among the breeders as Bains sheep, while the other type is much shorter, scarcely reaching more than 40 kilos in weight, and called Chilhac Bizet sheep, the mutton of which is held to be the finest existing in the whole of France. This is one of the most prolific sheep breeds on the European Continent, and its outstanding feature is its ability to exist on very rough, even scanty food. Very often these sheep are black with many spots of white wool, curiously enough. On many a farm in the breed district they are entirely maintained during the winter in the stables on dry leaves collected during the summer Probably the "L'Ile de France" sheep hold the pride of place. A number of British breeds have long been favoured in France where they have reached outstanding ments such as the Southdown, the Oxford Down, and the Hampshire sheep. The Karakul sheep is now being bred pure, but so far very little is known about this valuable breed in France. As regards pig breeding in France, although the French people are decidedly devoted pork and bacon eaters pig breeding has never developed in this country as it has among its neighbours, i.e., Spain, Italy, Holland and Germany Various breeds and types exist but only the following two breeds deserve to bmentioned The Bayeux pig, remarkably like the Ol Gloucester Spot pig in England is a valuable bree which however, during later years in many distric in France seems to deteriorate, probably owing to lac of supervision in the breeding district. It is a thrifty hardy animal, easily contented under almost an conditions of life, easily fattening on any kind of food of great fecundity, remarkably good mother with a average litter of twelve This pig is much in favou with the butcher everywhere in France as it has a larg proportion of meat with thin layers of fat The origin of the breed is interesting—through crossing the Noi mandy Landrace pig with Berkshire boars and, as ha in many instances been the case, admitting Yorkshir blood in the second generation, the hybrids obtained afterwards being crossed with each other, this procedur being continued until no more "throw-backs occurred Several breeders of this pig maintain, however, that it contains a considerable percentage of Asiatic blood, emanating from Tonking The Bayeux pig has long flanks with a long rather cylindrical The other pig breed, the Craonnaise pig, is probably an indigenous breed in France, as it has existed in the Avignon district since time immemorial It has been stated that it originally came from Italy and admittedly, a similar pig is bred in many parts of that This breed is not particularly reared in any district in France but some remarkably good herds can be seen in the Nievre district As stated as a horse breeder, generally speaking.

As stated as a horse breeder, generally speaking, the French breeder is promuent and in regard to heavy horses, the Percheron horse is now so well known everywhere that he scarcely needs any description. In the United States of America he holds the pride of place among America's imported draught horse breeds. Like the Charollaise cattle breed the Percheron horse is most distinctly a product of the soil as he originated in the same distinct where he has been so successfully bred since medieval times, the Perche district, Normandy, where the Horse Markets held annually at Martagne Laferte and Nogent le-Routrou are great events as there collect purchasers from most of the countries of the world. coloured breed known as "Tachetée de l'Est" are excellent cattle, large-sized, well developed and fairly good milkers. The black-white Vosges cattle are also good milkers and easily fattened. In the north of France an excellent breed called "La Race Bleu du Nord" exists, not so long ago on the point of extinction The chief breed districts are in the Department of Avesne between Le Cateau and Solesme. and in Bavay, Le Quesnoy, and Maubeuge. At a recent Show held at Cambrai a most remarkable collection of these "Blue Cattle" drew the admiration of every visitor A Herd Book was recently started in which every Bavay breeder is now registered. Another breed, very little known outside France, while even unknown to many a French breeder, the Montbéliarde cattle, certainly deserves to be better known, being excellent milkers and pronounced beef producers. The average weight when fattened is, for the bullocks 800, and for the heifers 600 kilos The breed district is in Doubs, some 45 miles from Besancon. The milk has a high fat percentage In the Côte-d'Or, Chatillionsur-Seine, a great number of breeders go in for the "Brune des Alpes" cattle, quite a good breed, chiefly suitable for the district Excellent sheep of the Menno type are bred in France, such as the "L'Ile de France" sheep, chiefly bred in the Eure-et-Loire, the breeders of which now enter their flocks in their own Flock Book Chatillonais sheep are likewise a good breed; and along the Marne, La Manche, excellent sheep are bred, particularly favoured by the butcher for their fine mutton. Breeders of this sheep maintain their own Flock Book at Saint-Lô In the Sainte-Ménehould district another Merino type is bred, known as "Merino de Champayne," and the "Merino du Soissonais. chiefly raised in the Soisson district, are undoubtedly fine sheep. Among the various sheep breeds, the Rambouillet breed is, however, the most remarkable, and all other Rambouillet sheep types in other parts of the world emanate from this breed. A number of other breeds, with their own flock book Societies. are favoured in different parts of the country, such as the Charmoise sheep and the Bizet sheep, mainly bred in the Haut-Loire and in the Cantal where the average flocks run from 70 to 120. It is probable that this breed through proper breed material selection and strict control might develop in size and fattening capacity as the grazing grounds are among the richest pastures in France This interesting breed appears in two distinct types-black with a convex profile, a large-sized animal, known among the breeders as Bains sheep, while the other type is much shorter, scarcely reaching more than 40 kilos. in weight, and called Chilhac Bizet sheep, the mutton of which is held to be the finest existing in the whole of France. curiously enough. On many a farm in the breed district they are entirely maintained during the winter in the stables on dry leaves collected during the summer. Probably the "L'Ile de France" sheep hold the pride of place. A number of British breeds have long been favoured in France where they have reached outstanding merits, such as the Southdown, the Oxford Down, and the Hampshire sheep. The Karakul sheep is now being bred pure, but so far very little is known about this valuable breed in France. As regards pig breeding in France, although the French people are decidedly devoted pork and bacon eaters, pig breeding has never developed in this country as it has among its neighbours, i.e., Spain, Italy, Holland and Germany, Various breeds and types exist but only the following two breeds deserve to be mentioned. The Bayeux pig, remarkably like the Old Gloucester Spot pig in England, is a valuable breed which, however, during later years in many districts in France seems to deteriorate, probably owing to lack of supervision in the breeding district. It is a thrifty, hardy animal, easily contented under almost any conditions of life, easily fattening on any kind of food; of great fecundity, remarkably good mother with an average litter of twelve. This pig is much in favour with the butcher everywhere in France as it has a large proportion of meat with thin layers of fat. The origin of the breed is interesting-through crossing the Normandy Landrace pig with Berkshire boars and, as has in many instances been the case, admitting Yorkshire blood in the second generation, the hybrids obtained afterwards being crossed with each other, this procedure being continued until no more "throw-backs" occurred. Several breeders of this pig maintain however, that it contains a considerable percentage of Asiatic blood, emanating from Tonking. The Bayeux pig has long flanks with a long, rather cylindrical body. The other pig breed, the Craonnaise pig. is probably an indigenous breed in France, as it has existed in the Avignon district since time immemorial. It has been stated that it originally came from Italy and, admittedly, a similar pig is bred in many parts of that country. This breed is not particularly reared in any district in France, but some remarkably good herds can be seen in the Nievre district.

As stated, as a horse breeder, generally speaking, the French breeder is prominent, and in regard to heavy horses, the Percheron horse is now so well known everywhere that he scarcely needs any description. In the United States of America he holds the pride of place among America's imported draught horse breeds. Like the Charollaise cattle breed, the Percheron horse is most distinctly a product of the soil, as he originated in the same district where he has been so successfully bred since mediæval times, the Perche district, Normandy, where the Horse Markets held annually at Martagne, Laferte and Nogent-le-Routrou are great events as there collect purchasers from most of the countries of the world. Although

Crusaders, it is well known that many of these brought may have been used. Other French horse breeds. Crissacrs, it is well known that many of these brought in any have been used. Other referen horse breeds, back with them from the Orient magnificent, grey-coloured stallions of colossal build, and it is probable heart building the orient of the Ardenne horse type, however, when the market demand often was larger | and the Breton horse is also a good breed.

The Shorthorns in Germany.

By HUGH NICKSON 23, Fleet Street London

Live stock breeders know that it is much easier to lay the foundation of a herd of prominent animals for the purpose of breeding a type of cattle in a certain direction than to maintain the herd at a high pitch of performance as the years pass by, and perhaps this applies even more to the Shorthorn cattle than to many other cattle breeds. The reasons are evident to all who have founded herds. In Germany, however, where the Shorthorn have only been bred during, comparatively speaking, a short time, remarkable progress has been made, and they have improved in quality from year to year while the number of admirers of this particular breed has been steady increasing so that the Shorthorns may now be stated to have become at least in certain districts, a permanent feature.

Shorthorn breeding in Germany is centred round about the towns of Eiderstedt, Husum and Tondern in Schleswig Holstein, a district which is interesting and notable in many respects as there to day a system of farming is in vogue which has developed on unique The land here is protected against the en eroachments from the sea through a most intricate, really marvellous system of dykes, trenches water sluices, canals, etc., and the fertility of the soil is very great During many hundreds of years cattle breeding was here the mainstay of the population, although disaster after disaster occurred as early as in the middle ages and with certain intervals ever since, time after time the sea rolled over these fair lands killing people and cattle by the tens of thousands, destroying the homesteads of the thrifty farmers Many tens of rullions of German money have been spent in building up this wonderful system of dykes, but to-day there is complete safety from further encroachments of the sea, and the large stretches of fertile land bear now permanent pastures such as one does not see elsewhere Constantly fighting against the elements, the people here have developed their capacity to rely on themselves, and thriftiness is one of the outstanding characteristics. In this district the breeding of Shorthorn cattle commenced some 80 years ago, and here, thanks to the wonderful pastures, these cattle have developed to a degree of perfection that often surprises the visitor who is unprepared to find Shorthorns of such size and quality as are here grazing during the greater part of the year in numbers of thousands mainstay, a large number is kept and calves reared to take their turn when the time arrives. In later years there is however, a tendency to combine arable farming with grazing, with a rotation of wheat, oats, beans and rape On such farms 80-100 head of cattle are kept In such surroundings the Shorthorns have developed and they may be classified as being in a category entirely unique in Germany It is probable that the Province of Schleswig and the west coast of Holstein may develop as a Shorthorn breeding district, and when this breed obtains a larger degree of approval in other parts of Germany, Schleswig-Holstein will be known as the district par preference from which prominent sires and dams can be acquired Next to Schleswig Holstein the largest district prior to the war for Shorthorn breeding in Germany was the Provinces of Alsace and Lorraine Shorthorns are also found in other parts such as the Province of Oldenburg where a well-known breeder (H Lubben. the Surwurden estate) for many years bred some remarkably good animals, and there are several promment herds in the Provinces of Saxony, Hanover, Silesia, East Prussia, Mecklenburg Pfalz and in the Rhine Province More recently herds have likewise been founded in the Provinces of Brandenburg, Brunswick. Pomerania and in West Prussia

The origin of the idea of commencing breeding Shorthorns in the Schleswig district was caused by a regular demand for fattened cattle coming from Denmark, and as the marshland breeders in Schleswig-Holstein could not as quickly as they desired fatten their own indigenous breeds for the Danish market. some far seeing men among them went to England and there acquired bulls for crossing purposes This happened in the year 1843, and when the imported animals shortly afterwards were exhibited and offered for service at the local cattle Shows held regularly at Eiderstedt, Husum, Tondern, and various villages. the farmers immediately recognised that here was a type of cattle that undoubtedly more rapidly than their own native breed could turn the grazing in the fat. marshy pastures into high-quality butchers' meat A further number of bulls were imported from England and crossed with the Eiderstedt cattle breed, and so successful did this cross breeding turn out that about eighteen years after the first imports, a "Shorthorn Breeders' Herd Book Association ' was formed (1871) Entries were accepted in the Herd Book under two different categories i.e. (1) for animals imported from England, and (2) for crosses The new Herd Book Association, however, carried on under great difficulties for some years but in 1884 when interest in Shorthorn cattle had spread a large number of breeders in Schleswig and Holstein decided to go in for the breed, and since then Shorthorn breeding has eased and never met with setbacks. In the year the Chamber of Agriculture for the Province of

Livestock Breeding in Germany.

Live Stock may be estimated at 17,350 non cattle, war, but agriculture and live stock breeding are a 100 000 shorp, $7,000 one pick and $000,000 better that the forement of all industries. The soil is splen-The remarkable strikes which German line stock (diff) subtrated and the crops are always boundful. breeding has made after the disastrous war years although multicent to meet the demand. More than signs will for the future, and the systematic weeding out of less valuable animals from the study, herds and flocks and the great amportance laid on the value of controlling the performances of the domestic animals forehodes that the German breeder will soon become a serious competitor in the commercial field for bread animals. Probably no other country has so rapelly developed at live stock industry during such a short space of time, and the best brains are continuously being attracted to the industry. The system adapted to the control of breeding is probably the most suitable for German requirements—the centralising of administraine power in the person in chief direction of the Association of Pedigree live stock breeders. In Germany this system seems to work worderfully well as the individual breeder, a member of his Society, is constantly guided and advised as to the best methods and animals to be chosen; and all over the country "Committee of Selection" appointed by the breeders themselves, is now wielding supreme authority in the selection of animals for breeding, excluding indiscriminate breeding and the use of valueless animals. The following series of articles written by a number of well-known live-stock men, all prominent in their spheres of activities, testify to the very high land to which German live stock breeding has been brought. Undoubtedly, within a short space of time the German breeders will rank among the foremost of the world's stock breeders, and German Pedigree strains looked upon as reliable in their functions in every respect.

Resulting from its geographical position, the German Reich, geographically and structurally, is very diversified, and the variety of soil and other agricultural conditions explains why within the country so many different races and breeds have during the space of time developed on distinctly different lines. The German Reich consists of Prussia, Bavaria, Wurtemberg, Saxony, Baden, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Hesse, Oldenburg, Brunswick, Thuringen, Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Anhalt, Lippe, and Waldeck, besides the Free Cities of Hamburg, Lübeck and Bremen, each of which is a Republic comprising the Town and surrounding country. Germany is naturally divided into three regions, Alpine foreland, with the South-German Tableland, a Central Highland, and the great Plains in the north which cover the entire sea front. Generally speaking, the climate of Germany is temperate and very healthy but differing considerably. The rainfall all over the country is on an average 28 inches. Owing to the enormously rapid increase in the population. Germany is no longer an agricultural

According to the latest common the appropriated country to the same extent as it was before the two thirds of the total are cultivated, and everywhere the erchards, smeyards, gardens, meadows, pastures and cereal bearing fields testify to the high degree of cultivation in this country. The absolutely unpredictive land probably only represents to a of the total area. Rie is the chief crop, the acreage bearing this certal being estimated at nearly 60,000,000 acres. while nate are cultivated on nearly 12,000,000 acres. as against wheat which is only cultivated on 4,800,000 acres and barley on 4,200,000 acres. The cultivation of the sugar beet is carried on on a very large area, and this crop has certainly been one of the chief instruments in cleaning the soil while furnishing the live stock with splendid feeding stuff. Agricultural education is highly developed and to many of the twenty-one Universities experimental farming and live stock stations are attached

The number of Associations of breeders of cattle, sheep, pigs, horses and goats is remarkable, and the co-operative spirit seems to penetrate into every sphere of agricultural activity.

One of the powerful instruments for promoting farming and live stock breeding in Germany, the "Deutsche Landwirtschafts Gesellschaft," works successfully for the benefit of the farmers Every year the Society arranges Agricultural Exhibitions, and the awards and prizes granted by the Society are accepted all over the country as the hall mark of excellence.

Livestock Breeding in Germany.

According to the latest errors the accordingal Live Sext may be estimated at 17,161011 cattle A 100 000 storp 17,000 000 pire and 3 000 000 horses. The remarkable strides which German line stock breeding has made after the disastrons was scars a cours well for the future and the systematic weeding cent of loss valuable animals from the study, herds and Books and the errat amportance but on the salar of controlling the performances of the domestic animals foreholes that the German breeder will soon become a serious competitor in the commercial field for Freed animals. An institution in Germans which might be taken as a pattern for what a chamber dealing with agricultural and live stock matters should be, is the German Chamber of Agriculture In the following list the leading chambers are mentioned, all of which for a number of years have exercised great influence on agriculture within the Province or district to which they have their activities confined. These chambers not only earry out their functions as promoters of the interests of the farmers living in their districts, but act upon their own initiative and look out for anything new in agriculture and live stock breeding which may be of interest to their members and worth examining. and are always prepared to answer any incourres addressed to them or to effect introduction of purchasers of livestock to leading agriculturists in their district

Shorthorn Breeding in Schleswig-Holstein.

By DR SCHATZEL, Bredstedt, Schleswig

Schleswig Holstein district during the last century Prior to the introduction of this breed a type of Landrace cattle was generally bred being a mixture of various breeds kept in the district. The reason why Shorthorns came in vogue in Schleswig Holstein was the demand for store cattle from England, and when the material obtainable in the neighbourhood proved unsatisfactory and quite insufficient to fill the steadily increasing import orders from England, the local breeders decided to create better material by means of imported Shorthorn bulls from that country. The reason why our breeders decided on the Shorthorns was the robust health of the breed, its dual utility qualities and its general appearance. Indeed, several among the larger breeders not only imported bulls but also heifers and cows with a view of breeding from the very best Pedigree strains This led to the foundation of a Shorthorn Pedigree Register in the year 1871 at Eiderstedt, and it further brought in train a general desire to take up the breeding of Shorthorns it happened that a number of local breed Associations were formed, all on the same lines as the Eiderstedt Breeders Association, which had been founded in the year 1883 With a view of consolidating the various activities of these smaller local associations a new Association was formed in 1880, under the name of Association of the Schleswig Shorthorn Breeders Societies with which all the small organisations were amalgamated Since then, this Association has worked ahead as will be seen in the following table The address of the Association is Husum where the Herd Book is kept

On January 1st 1900 there were seven Breeders' Societies in Schleswig Holstein with a membership of 525 and 1,124 registered animals In 1910, 43 local societies had been brought into being with 2 138 members and 5,407 animals entered For various reasons however, the number rapidly increased so that in 1915 68 local societies actually existed with 3 589 members and 12 067 animals entered in the Herd Book Since then as the result of the war, etc., the numbers have decreased the membership now being 1,861 with 6724 animals registered (1927) Prior to the war, the number of Shorthorns had been considerably reduced owing to the sudden appearance in the breed district of foot and mouth disease Since the war, however, the interest among farmers and breeders in the Shorthorn breed is steadily expanding, as proved by the fact that in the districts of Norder and Suder-Dithmarschen cross breeding by Shorthorn bulls on the local red coloured cattle is now much in vogue. In the year 1924 obligatory selection. was introduced in the breed district, and so the quality of animals bred is yearly improving. Some six years early maturity and remarkable fattening propensities

The breeding of Shorthorns commenced in the lago the Eckernforde District joined up by forming a Shorthorn Breeders' Association to which new members are steadily coming in

The two qualities by which the Shorthorn cattle are remarkable, t.e., fattening ability and early develop ment combined with milking capacity, are the elements in this breed which appeal to the local farmer. No other existing cattle race can show such remarkable ability in these directions, and in regard to milk production, undoubtedly the Shorthorn's performances are even better than their reputation. This is testified by the fact that in the Schleswig-Holstein district there are now seventeen Milk Control Associations in which 2.441 Shorthorn cows are registered. Among various Control Associations, those at Langenhorn in the Husum district, at Eiderstedt, at Tiebensee and at Meldorf should be specially mentioned The Langenhorn showed an average of 3,119 kilos milk with 3 43% fat and 107 08 kilos butter fat, while the Meldorf Control Association showed 3 764 kilos milk with 3 55% fat and 133 77 kilos butter fat The Tiebensee showed 3 425 kilos milk with 3 41% fat and 116 72 kilos butter fat

The purpose of introducing the milk control system in this district should not be understood as having been planned towards developing the Shorthorn cattle to become a milk producing breed rather than beef producers, but the system was introduced for the express purpose of demonstrating to the breeders how far they might conveniently develop the milking capacity without doing any damage to the breed's ability of early maturity and fattening. It is hoped and expected that through careful selection and breed ing it may be possible to increase the average fat per centage to 4% without damaging the breed's beef propensities It is generally agreed that whatever happens, the deep heavy body must be maintained

It has, perhaps, been a matter of regret that the Shorthorns in the Schleswig Holstein District could only develop on the basis of very few strains such as "Spicy Charmer 750, "Cotehay Solid Silver
"Fine Morning 924, "Edgecote Boxer 1019, Victor 617th 672, "Spicy Charmer 750, 895, "Fine Morning 924,

These animals Swinton Saint Clipper 1080 however, have proved themselves remarkable as progenitors, especially "Victor," Fraser Tytler and Spicy Charmer During the last few years English Shorthorn blood has been imported with a view of infusing the same in the already existing strains If the Shorthorns can develop towards an increased ability of consumption of the home produced food then certainly this breed must be accorded the pride of place as the foremost among all existing breeds as regards GEFYANY. 471

The reasons are evident to all who have founded herds. In Germany, however, where the Shorthorns have only been bred during, comparatively speaking, a short time, remarkable progress has been made, and they have improved in quality from year to year while the number of admirers tof approval in other parts of Germany, Schleswigof this particular breed has been steadily increasing so that the Shorthorns may now be stated to have become. at least in certain districts, a permanent feature.

Shorthorn breeding in Germany is centred round about the towns of Eiderstedt, Husum and Tondern in Schleswig-Holstein, a district which is interesting and notable in many respects as there to-day a system of farming as an vogue which has developed on unique The land here is protected against the encroachments from the sea through a most intricate, really marvellous system of dykes, trenches, water sluices, canals, etc., and the fertility of the soil is very great. During many hundreds of years cattle breeding was here the mainstay of the population, although disaster after disaster occurred as early as in the middle ages, and with certain intervals ever since, time after time the sea rolled over these fair lands killing people and cattle by the tens of thousands, destroying the homesteads of the thrifty farmers Many tens of millions of German money have been spent in building up this wonderful system of dykes, but to-day there is complete safety from further encroachments of the sea, and the large stretches of fertile land bear now permanent pastures such as one does not see elsewhere. Constantly fighting against the elements, the people here have developed their capacity to rely on themselves, and thriftiness is one of the outstanding characteristics. In this district the breeding of Shorthorn cattle commenced some 80 years ago, and here, thanks to the wonderful pastures, these cattle have developed to a degree of perfection that often surprises the visitor who is unprepared to find Shorthorns of such size and quality as are here grazing during the greater part of the year in numbers of thousands.

Farming is here carried on in three different ways-entirely grassland farming where the cattle are grazed almost the whole year round and then fattened and sold off to the large markets of Hamburg, Berlin, Frankfurt, Munich, etc., or mixed arable and pasture farming, and exclusively dairy farming. In the first category the size of the farms is as a rule from 60-150 acres, and generally only six to eight cows are kept while young cattle are purchased in the spring for grazing during the summer and early autumn, and when fattened, sold off. Where dairy farming is the chief

Live stock breeders know that it is much easier | mainstay, a large number is kept and calves reared, have developed, and they may be classified as being in a category entirely unique in Germany. It is probable that the Proxince of Schleswig and the west coast of Holstein may develop as a Shorthorn breeding district; and when this breed obtains a larger degree Holstein will be known as the district par preference from which prominent sizes and dams can be acquired. Next to Schleswig-Holstein the largest district prior to the war for Shorthorn breeding in Germany was the Provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. Shorthorns are also found in other parts such as the Province of Oldenburg where a well-known breeder (H. Lübben. the Surwürden estate) for many years bred some remarkably good animals: and there are several promment herds in the Provinces of Saxony, Hanover, Silesia, East Prussia, Mecklenburg, Pfalz and in the Rhine Province. More recently herds have likewise been founded in the Provinces of Brandenburg, Brunswick. Pomerania and in West Prussia.

The origin of the idea of commencing breeding Shorthorns in the Schleswig district was caused by a regular demand for fattened cattle coming from Denmark, and as the marshland breeders in Schleswig-Holstein could not as quickly as they desired fatten their own indigenous breeds for the Danish market. some far-seeing men among them went to England and there acquired bulls for crossing purposes. This happened in the year 1843, and when the imported animals shortly afterwards were exhibited and offered for service at the local cattle Shows held regularly at Ederstedt, Husum, Tondern, and various villages, the farmers immediately recognised that here was a type of cattle that undoubtedly more rapidly than their own native breed could turn the grazing in the fat. marshy pastures into high-quality butchers' meat. A further number of bulls were imported from England and crossed with the Eiderstedt cattle breed, and so successful did this cross-breeding turn out that about eighteen years after the first imports, a "Shorthorn Breeders' Herd Book Association " was formed (1871). Entries were accepted in the Herd Book under two different categories, i.e., (1) for animals imported from England, and (2) for crosses. The new Herd Book Association, however, carried on under great difficulties for some years, but in 1884 when interest in Shorthorn cattle had spread a large number of breeders in Schleswig and Holstein decided to go in for the breed, and since then Shorthorn breading I increased and never met with setlucks. In th

The Black-White Cattle in Jeverland, Oldenburg.

By BREED DIRECTOR HUTTINGER Jever Oldenburg Jeverland scher Herdbuch Verein e V

Domestic animal breeding and particularly cattle breeding has always played an important part in agricultural Jeverland where the aim as regards cattle may be expressed thus

Large milk production beauty of form strong body build firm muscles robust constitution These are the qualities required in the breed in the district where the Jeverland cattle are bred On such qualities it is held the foundation must rest on which success may be obtained. This heavy breed of milk and beef cattle broad ribbed broad framed yet not lacking in grace is to-day everywhere in demand Cattle of the Jever breed profitably turn homegrown food into milk and beef and they would everywhere prove splendid foundation animals for any herd

On a closer study of the build of the Jeverland cattle many indications of the perfect health of the The strong and above all I reed become apparent splendidly proportioned frame particularly not ce able in the setting of the legs the deep broad chest and the straight line of the back ending in muscular I cautifully levelled hindquarters create a very pleasing impression of absolutely perfect health The udder

is very large and very well formed

The leverland breeder lays great stress on the set ting of the legs-that the front legs should be abso lutely straight and the hock I road and strong His paying attention to these points makes for advantageous results and all Jeverland breeders adhere to these and other points the value of which was learned years ago

levetland blood can be traced in all herds of Harl white German lowland cattle and almost

The board of control of the Jeverland breeding district an influential body of breeders hold that control of milk production should not be carried out by their own officials but by the dairy institute under the Oldenburg Board of Agriculture and in this manner reliable performance results are certainly obtained Thus 10 Jeverland cows gave a yearly average of 4 225 kilos of milk with 3 4600 fat and 146 kilos of butter fat while kept stabled as against 6,200 kilos of milk and an average of 3 6300 fat and 225 kilos of butter fat on grazing One of the reasons for this remarkable increase is the adaptability of the Jeverland cattle to changing conditions

The average achievement under the notice of the Jeverland board of control for dairy cows during 1927 according to the Records of 31 Societies was 4.405 kilos of milk with 3 08% fat and 124 kilos of butter fat In 1926 a herd of 36 cows gave an average yield of over 200 kilos of butter fat while the 15 best produced between 223 and 264 kilos of butter lat on average quality grazing. The largest herd average was 6 428 kilos of milk with 3 010 o fat and 193 kilos of butter fat and the best achievement of any single cow reached 7 703 k los of milk 3.27% fat and 263 kilos of butter fat. These figures should be taken in connection with the fact that the year 1926 was not a good average year for grass feeding

Eleven Jeverland cows are for the time being under supervision and control of the Deutsche Rinder leistungs Buch (German Cattle Breed Performance Register) Among these there are an mals which have yielded 100 kilos of butter fat in 82 days not a

The Oldenburg Weser-Marsh Cattle.

By HERR FREISCHMIDT late Breed Director, Rod-nkirchen Oldenburg Oldenburgische Wesermarsch Herdbuch Gessellschaft '

This breed district lies in the north eastern l part of Oldenburg, mainly on the left bank of the river Weser although it only embraces a small area on the opposite shore It is mostly marsh land watered by the Weser, but there is also good pasture, drained and fertile Generally speaking, the soil is boggy or sandy. The district also holds some 100,000 hectares of cultivated land on which the cattle stock is counted at about 100,000 head Of these about 18 000 are at present entered in the Oldenburg Weser-Marsh Herd Book, and 15 000 head are matriculated as yong stock Up till now over 130 000 cattle have been entered in the Association's Herd Book

Although the soil is of greatly varying quality, the climate, so close to the North Sea, is very equable, cool summers and mild winters being usual, while the rainfall reaches 750 800 mm during the year and is of the greatest benefit to pastures. The main point, however, on which the Oldenburg Weser-Marsh lands score over most other marsh districts along the North Sea coast is its water supply Here is a veritable. most perfect network of ditches and canals by means of which any superfluous water can easily be drained off . and as the marshes extend further up river, past the salt water penetration at tide time, the gates can be opened to let in fresh Weser river water by means of dykes constructed for the purpose In this manner the cattle are always provided with fresh drinking water, which unfortunately is not always the case in other breeding districts so near the coast

The Oldenburg Weser-Marsh Herd Book Association was founded in 1880 at Rodenkirchen, in

Herd Book Two things are ruthlessly pursued-the absolute stamping out of tuberculosis and control and registration of milk production and other achievements The cattle stock of about 16,000 cows in 61 control areas, belonging to 1,410 herds is supervised and controlled The aim is to reach an average production of 4,000-5 000 kilos of milk of a minimum of 3 50% fat for the year, obtained by exclusively utilising home-grown food This average has already been reached by a large number of herds in several cases even exceeded During 1926-1927, 24 herds showed an average of over 160 kilos of butter fat, and 32 single cows performed over 200 kilos of butter during the lactation period

A ruthlessly effected breed selection is always th best guarantee, and in this district considered mor important than milk yield and fat % thus we ar aiming at an animal of great beauty of form, easy t feed, of hardy constitution early maturing, and th Oldenburg Weser-Marsh breeder loves the anima with a long-stretched body on short legs, plenty o bones, a broad back well rounded ribs, heavy flank and firm muscles A large, regularly developed udde is indispensable, and the milk and butter fat yield must be satisfactory. The Weser-Marsh cattle as nov bred certainly fulfil these requirements At the "German Agricultural Society's Hamburg Show in 1924, a Stuttgart in 1925, at Breslau in 1926, and at Dortmune in 1927 these cattle competed with other German Pedigree breeds and held their own well At four exhibitions the Oldenburg Weser-Marsh Herd Bool Society fetched for 92 animals shown in competition with the East Prussian the Ost Friesland and the Oldenburg, and has now 1,300 breeder-members | Jeverland Friesans, 4 Champion prizes 16 prizes of A similar number of small breeders who are not actual members are permitted to enter their animals in the Prizes 1 Fourth Prize and 22 Honourable mentions

Cattle Breeding in Pomerania.

By BREED DIRECTOR GAEDE Pomeranian Herd Book Association for Black White Lowland Cattle Stettin Kreck over Strasse 20 Pommersche Herdbuch Gesellschaft für das Schwarz weisse Tieflandrind

The Pomeranian Herd Book Association, the only t Association of breeders of black white lowland cattle in Pomerania, was founded in 1900 through amalga mation of the Baltic Herd Book Association of 1889 and the East Pomeranian Herd Book Association of 1896 Up till now 80 000 head have been entered in the Herd Book The ideal animals are the indigenous. healthy, medium weight cattle with excellent milk production, high fat percentage, easily fattened Only animals, which in the judgment of a special Selection Committee have beauty of form and good per-formances can be selected for breeding and entered in one for Pedigree bulls and cows, and the other for cows without known Pedigree Milk control is compulsory for every member of the Herd Book Association, and the organisation of the Board of Control for Pomerania rests with the "Association of Pomeranian Cattle Control Societies" under which at present 195 Control Societies with 95 000 controlled cows are enrolled te, 20 5% of Pomerania's dairy cattle. The best Pedigree herds yield an annual average of well over 5 000 kilos of milk Higher outputs are discouraged as injurious to health and robustness the Herd Book as such There are two Herd Books high percentage of fat in the milk as beneficent in butter making The choice of the bull for mating is dictated by his maternal ancestor's milk-fat percentage. The best performances among last year's herds were

All herds are subject to veterinary control under supervision of a "Sanitary Commission" appointed by the Chamber of Agriculture for Pomerania Bulls and female animals, especially herfors-in-calf, are yearly sent to the eight auction sales at the towns of Stettin, Stralsund and Belgard where Pedigree animals always are obtainable. Every year there is at least one show of Pedigree bulls at Stettin in the auction buildings erected in 1926 by the Herd Book Association. At this exhibition an excellent idea of the material bred by associated members and used for breeding can be obtained.

The Black-White Pomeranian breed has often brought home conspicuous success at the world-known Livestock Exhibitions yearly organised by the "German Agricultural Society."

The Luneburg Black-White Marsh Cattle.

By HUGH NICKSON, 23. FLEET STREET LONDON

The Lowlands Breeds of cattle in Germany far ! outstrip other cattle breeds, and the 'dual purpose' types seem to increase. Along the North Sea belt these lowland cattle certainly dominate, with the exception of the Shorthorn breeding district in Schleswig-Holstein, and the Black-White seem to slowly push out the Red White cattle One of the smaller, but by no means unimportant among these Black-White marsh cattle breeds, the Lüneburg Elbe-Marsh Friesians are certainly in the forefront, and the whole breed district, centred round about the medieval town of Lüneburg bears witness to what can be achieved through friendly and untiring co-operation between the Herd Book management and the individual breeder. Among the first of German Herd Book Assecuations to recognise the enormous importance to breeders of cattle of obtaining an accurate estimate of the value of a breed animal through a systematically conducted milk control, the Luneburg Herd Book Association has attained a remarkable level of uniformity in the breed district, as will be seen in the results shown in the Ta' le below. This Association whose membership is scarcely more than 2,300 consists chiefly of small freeholders breeding or maintaining an average of 10-12 cows on their small farms Early in the strang long before the north word his crused its 10 grip the cattle are taken to the marshes where they are kept until late in October, and during the wirrer the animals are chiefly fed on home-produced, rough lend, and only exceptionally on concentrated fred During a number of years the most runkess scrutime of the applications for entries to the Association's Register has taken place, and unless the Progenitors of an animal proposed for entry have been in possession of outstanding merits as high milkers with a high fat percentage, while otherwise of distinct qualities, the Herd Book is closed to the amplicant

One among several contributing causes to make the weeding-out process more popular, or at least less painful while promoting the co-operative spirit among the Lüneburg Herd Book associated members and stimulating to new efforts, is the system of "Consultation-Offices"—"Beratungs-Sedle "—established at various places within the breed duttient in clarge of officials who, each in their special duttien, are always at hand with expert advice on matters in reference to breeding, weeding and feeding when applied to. As a rule, these men are young University- and otherwise trained sons of farmers with a keep uniterest for their business.

The Lüneburg Breed Area is now divided into 65 Milk Control Districts in which the number of controlled members vary from 210 to 500, each Aussatten being regulate occupation, and if the report of the Difical to the field Book Aussatzen. The average milk fat percentage has been systematically increased from 308% in 1922 and 1923 to 313% in 1924 and 1925, 3.16% in 1926, 318% in 1927, and illustrates that a general level is achievable in a breed district when a suitable feeding Formula is based on, but variated in individual herds according to local experience, and regulated in accordance with the modern Feeding-Technique. With the passing of the year 1927, the Lüneburg breed district has entered the 3,000 kilos. milk per head per-annumminimum, as in no district the annual report shows less. Out of the number of 65 Milk Control Districts, 24 districts could show from 3,000 to 4,000 kilos milk. 40 from 4,000 to 5,000 kilos, milk and I district more than 5,000 kilos.

Quite recently the German Agricultural Association-" Deutsche Landwirtschaftliche Gesellschaft" -adopted the American system and founded the "German Dairy Cattle Performance Register"-"Deutsche Rinder-Leistungs Buch "-through which it is aimed to create, by means of an absolutely reliable control of performances, exact knowledge concerning the maximum milk production of German dairy cattle, so that, on the basis of this knowledge, trustworthy material might be obtained to serve for propaganda in foreign countries where it should be possible to market German-bred Pedigree live stock. The Organising Committee which handles this is now working in conjunction with a number of Animal Breed Institutions as well as with Universities and Agricultural High Schools. The scrutiny of these cattle performances is placed with a number of trained inspectors who con- kilos, milk and 3 58% fat.

stantly visit those herds which hold animals admitted to the Performance Register, on every visit subjecting these to a three days' test. It will thus be seen that this Performance Register has a national function to fulfil and that it should succeed, if co-operation proves popular, to bring out the best animals in the herds and, by degrees, the best herds in the country. It may, however, be questioned whether the system, as such, is the most effective, seeing that it rather works towards bringing out to the public gaze the individual animals in the herd which are remarkable for their performances, while, on the other hand, the value of the breed, and the breed district in which it is chiefly reared, can be better judged through obtaining a "fair average" of all the Herd performances in the district. Also, the cost of Performance Control seems excessivein the Luneburg district it has worked out at £50 (Mks, 1000) per animal.

In the Lüneburg Herd Book Association district five cows were admitted to the Performance Register. ie, "Bertha" (No. 5771-46,136) which during 365 days yielded 8,859 kilos. milk and 3.74% fat : "Annita" (No. 3468) aged 7 years, which in 305 days gave 8,032 kilos, milk and 3 34% fat; "Minka" (No 30,800) aged to years, which in 365 days gave 8 670 kilos, milk and 3 94% fat; "Stine" (No. 39,573) which in 365 days gave 8,377 kilos. milk and 4.04% fat; and "Krāhe" (No. 38 084) which in 305 days gave 7,418

Friesian Cattle Breeding in East Prussia.

By DR PETERS, BREED DIRECTOR, Kirlesberg and DR SCHMIDT, BREED DIRECTOR, Ingreshurg

Practically only one breed of cattle exists in the Breeding districts of East Prussia, the Dutch Black and White Friesians Some years ago a limited number of Red-White Schleswig-Holstein cattle and also the East Friesland breed could be seen, but they have been almost entirely supplanted by the Dutch breed which now comprises 9500 of East Prussia's cattle stock. These cattle were chiefly imported from Holland, and spannely from East Friesland and Oldenburg during the middle of the list century. The East Prussan breeders, however, found that their choice of a suitable breed could be best satisfied by selecting the Dutch Friesian carrie; and once they decided on these, they were determined on keeping this breed absolutely pure. Since 1550 when the last batch of Policier animals was imported, the breed has descriped in Last Prissia on independent lines

There are extensive pastures in the Province. especially in the northern and southern parts, and these enalle the farmers to graze their animals during the erester part of the year. During the winter there must be kept in the stable, but the natural a rough directe has developed hardiness and at the same time their breaking properation. There are no especial a milk-producing centres, and very few such for lattening purposes; and, therefore, the chief aim is to breed young stock of Pedigree strains for sale. The ideal animal must combine a rich milk yield with heavy but beautiful shape, and hardy constitution with easily fattening ability. Uniformity in shape and colouring is kept in view. Supervision and general management of the breed rests with three breed Societies, e.e., the Herd Book Society founded in 1852 at Kongsberg; the Herd Book Society founded in 1911 at Inverturg, and the West Promises Herd Book Society established in 1889 at Manesburg

an age of two years and passed a preliminary examina tion at an age of 10 24 months while cows must have borne one calf Great importance is attached to a satisfactory milk production and thus every herd must submit to strict milk control. Individual and herd performances are controlled by special officials every fortnight when milk yield percentage of fat and the quantity of food consumed are recorded The Dutch Friesians have a natural propensity for milk production and this of course can be greatly stimulated by adequate feeding. Thus during the years 1006 1010 at the series of tests of performance of the various breeds carried out by the University of Bonn at Poppelsdorf 12 East Prussian Friesian cows yielded during the first 365 days an average of 7 700 kilos of milk with 3 05% of fat and 235 kilos butter fat At tests during the years 1923 1925 carried out by Professor Hansen at Koppelhof near Berlin 12 tested East Prussian Friesians gave a yearly average of 8 378 kilos of milk with 3 69% of fat and 309 kilos butter These figures clearly demonstrate that during the last 20 years the milk yields of East Prussian Friesian cattle and especially the percentage of fat has steadily increased as a result of much improved methods of feeding. The best result was obtained from a cow. Hortensia Nr. 130760 who yielded 10 315 kilos of milk with 3.25% of fat and 363 5 kilos butter fat although still higher yields have been obtained from cows entered in the German Register of Cattle Performances founded as recently as October 1st 1926 Thus a number of registered cows did very well during a lactation period of 365 days as shown in the following table -

No of Cow 156 134 M k Yeld Fat °。 Butter Fat k los 9 020 k los 4.39 393.56 VK 51,285 361 96 328 96 303,28 9 102 3 98 153 678 137 732 9016 3 65 8 150 3 72 6980 135 736 451

Such yields of course only result when the feeding is correspondingly adequate. In the breeding herds in East Prussia on the pasture in summer and with scarcely any concentrated food during the winter months the breeders aim is healthy robust young stock from prominent parents showing excellent records of performance Consequently the animals are never forced to reach the highest possible standard of milk production

During the milk control year 1926 27 the average yield reached 3 540 kilos with 3.28% fat and 116 kilos butter fat The highest total of a single herd yield was 6,348 kilos of milk with 3,43% of fat and 218 kilos butter fat while

2 herds gave an average per cow of 6 000 k los . 5 000

.. 4 000 The East Prussian Friesians are good beef pro ducers. A very broad very deep body is systematically evolved as it has been proved over and over again that only animals so developed remain robust and healthy while kept at a high pitch of performance under the influence of East Prussia's rough climatic conditions and the full grown bulls weigh 1 000 1,200 kilos and the cow in good breeding condition 550 700 kilos often more

At yearly shows organised by the German Agricultural Society the breed has attained con siderable success At 17 exhibitions where 1,357 animals were shown the following 082 prizes were obtained -

Cattle Breeding in Bavaria.

By BREED DIRECTOR HEROLD Passau Das Hohenfleckvieh in Bayern-Passau, Witigasse, 2

The Cattle Stock in Bayaria comprises various | breeds of which some seven-tenths are Piebald Alpire cattle. These are to be found in all districts of Bavaria from the Alps and the Swabian Bavarian Plateau in the south, across fertile undulating country, up to the Spessart mountains and the lower reaches of the River Main. They exist at various altitudes, from 200-The Bavarian Piebalds are a strain of the German Piebald cattle, showing the character of the Simmentaler breed. It is the foremost breed in the neighbouring countries of Wurtemberg, Baden, Hessen and Thuringen. As is natural over such a large area. climate and the character of the soil vary considerably, Typical Piebald cattle are of broad and deep build. easily fed, robust and of medium height, suitable for work, milk and meat production. The weight of the cow is from 600-700 kilos, reaching, under favourable conditions, as much as 800 kilos The weight of the full grown bull is from 1,000-1,150 kilos. The colour is sellow or red piebald, i.e., white with sellow or red patches and spots in all shades. Head and feet are renerally white.

The calves temain 4 to 6 weeks with their mothers, bull calves often longer. After being weared they are fed on milk, or skimmed milk mixed with Imseed meal for a period of about 6 months. Choice hay, crushed outs or basiley, Inseed meal and phosphate of I me are piven dry. Bull calves set aside for birections are fed with special care. All over Hasaria opportunities exist.

Sheep Breeding in Westphalia.

No animals bred

This breed has proved most suitable

By BREED DIRECTOR EBBINGHAUS, Paderborn Westphalia
Provinz Westfalen

Since the middle of the last century the Blackfaced mutton producing sheep has been bred in the Province of Westphala. The present breed dates to 1850 when Southdown rams were imported to improve the indigenous landrace sheep. Crossbreds were now used as foundation stock for rams of Pedigree Oxfords and Hampshires, such having been bred since the year 1875. Through carefully interbreeding these the present breed of German Blackfaced mutton sheep was slowly evolved. It combines the massive, errly developing Hampshires with the close textured quality "Cr. wool of the Oxfords and is as it thrives on scrubby grass and on the stubbles, remains of roots and potatoes after the harvest, or on whatever else there may be left over on the farm

abroad are used

The principal breeding districts are in the mountainous parts of the Province of Westphalia, sometimes at altitudes of 800 metres above sea level, where the soil only produces scrubby, less nourishing grass Except during very cold winter months, the sheep are on the grass all day long driven into enclosures at night, which system demands robust constitution and indifference to weather conditions. As grazing in the mountains is often miles away from the farms, the sheep at an early age learn to walk long distances Management of breeding is controlled by the Flock Book Association for the German Black faced Mutton Sheep in the Province of Westphalia,' with an office at Paderborn Thirty Pedigree flocks from this Association with 19 321 rams and ewes are entered in the Flock Book, for which it is stipulated that a Pedigree Black faced flock prior to entry being granted must have existed at least 10 years The Flock Book Associa tion is now recognised as a Breeding Association by the 'German Agricultural Society, whose regulations are strictly observed in the management of flocks The aim is to breed a prolific, early maturing heavy, black faced mutton producing sheep of robust con stitution growing quality "C" wool

Feeding conditions differ greatly in this Province but in spite of this a very uniform breed has developed proving the adaptability of these sheep. The head is of medium size, without horns, with well developed ears. The neck is short, well set, and the fore quarters do not narrow behind the shoulder, a fault which precludes an animal from being used for breeding. The back is short, broad and level, and must not be curved. The loins are broad, low set and full, and the legs short, strong and exceedingly well set. Measurements

show the following average for all the flocks

Full grown Rams Full grown Ewes

The wool is of "c" quality, medium staple, of uniform elasticity, the length from 12-16 cm, colour pure white The yield of unwashed wool is uniformly 54 55%, great weight being attached to a fine quality "c" fleece great weight being attached to a fine quality C fleece. In the process of evolving this breed, rams and ewes from strains remarkable for fecundity, wool and mutton production have been used. The age of 18 months is considered suitable for pairing. Rams and yearlings are tested 2-3 times before entry in Flock Book is admitted. The lambs are under supervision from their fifth month onwards, in order to obtain satisfactory records concerning increase in weight, quantity and texture of wool, health and constitution. A special standard has to be reached, thus at an a of one year a ram lamb must weigh 60 kilos, with kilos of wool, and the ewe lamb 50, and 35 kilo respectively. Results of tests are entered in the Flot Book, and the lamb is now ear-marked.

The fecundity of the ewes is strictly observed and entries thereof made in the Flock Book On a average, or 5% lamb normally, but a flock average for the whole Association of 100%, is very often reached fourteen per cent of the ewe lamb twins. The average

may be stated as 115 lambs to 100 ewes The following table illustrates the relation betwee

live weight and wool production

		Live	Veight	Wool Pr
		Average	Max	Average	Max
		Kilos	Kilos.	Kılas	Kilos.
	Full grown Rams (2 3 years)	150	180	6	8
	Full grown Ewes (3.4 years)	65	93	39	65
	Yearling Rams (13 months)	85	110	4	5.5
Į	Yearling Ewes (13 months)	60	71	3.5	55
í	Ram Lambs (5 months)	42 7	545	15	24
	Ewe Lambs (5 months)	35	45	15	2.8

A live weight of 100 kilos should therefore correspond to an average wool production from a mothe ewe of 6.2 kilos and from a yearling sheep of 8.7 kilos.

The flocks generally hold 100 250 ewes, while one ram serves 40-50 ewes, but he does not run with the flock, as no mating is allowed until selection under supervision of the breed director has taken place July and August are considered the best months for pairing so that the lambs can be born in December-January by which arrangement the ewes can graze until the end When stabled in December, the ewes of the year are shorn before lambing Shearing is done once a year only The ewes are winter fed on grass andclover hay, straw and roots, but if with lambs 1 kilo of dry food-oats, cake, etc -is extra allowed for each lamb At three weeks old the lambs get oats, on reaching seven weeks old also cakes and dried yeast until they are five months. Salt is supplied in blocks In March-April the lambs are taken on the grass and when five months old weaned, usually in May-June Lambs not kept for breeding purposes are sold to the butcher on obtaining a weight of 40-45 kilos ram lambs selected for breeding receive while on grass a daily extra ration of \(\frac{1}{2}-1\) kilo of oats or beans. cake, etc

Lambs are generally sold to Berlin, Frankfurt, Hamburg and Cologne live stock markets where they fetch from Marks 1 40 to 2 per kilo live weight Yearling rams are sold at the Flock Book Association's auctions held at Paderborn, to which only animals of first rate quality are admitted Breeders from all over the country visit these auctions where the demand always is great Rams fetch here an average price of Mks 400-500 while choice animals often take from 3 000-4,000 Marks All animals are sold exclusively through the Flock Book Associations The wool is sold at the German Wool Company's auctions held at Berlin where the Westphalian product always is especially in demand, fetching Marks 130 per 50 kilos of unwashed wool. This is chiefly used in yarn manu-

of some 250,000 sheep, of which number some 50 per cent are Landrace sheep, while all have more or less drawn blood from the Black-faced mutton sheep race Then there are some 70,000 pure bred Merinos and about 60,000 pure-bred Black-faced mutton sheep . and of these, nearly all pure bred animals, two types are entered in the Flock Books Prussia there are two Associations of sheep breeders, one for the breeding of the Merino mutton sheep, and the other an Association of breeders of the improved Black faced mutton sheep The Merino mutton sheep breeder works towards developing an animal producing wool in the "A" quality while at the same time developing its mutton propensities. The breeder is also anxious that the lambs on reaching an are of six months should obtain a live weight of a Cent The fecundity is now in well kept flocks between 100", and 140". Every year in the month of April an auction for breed animals is arranged where as a rule 200 rams and from 300-500 ewes (scarlings) are exhibited. In the breed district there are many flocks of considerable standing and reputation such as the Traurel Ilich which has existed more than 100 years the Wiese Flick which was founded some usty years aco, etc. In these flixls well known and programent animals have been bred such as the ram "Kalirula" in the Wiese Mick, an animal that has set its stamp on numerous property, with many fromt word production of a fine staple, and beautiful body from. The Association for the breeding of the improved Black faced mutton sheep originated through the imports of Hampshire and Oxford Down sheep, and systematic breeding has developed with a view to combining the best qualities of each of these two breeds. The breeders have certainly succeeded in their efforts to create a prominent breed, as the sheep now bred in this district produces wool in the "C quality, even finer, while the quality of the mutton is excellent and the carcase percentage normal. As a point of fact, the mutton produced by these Blackfaced sheep is generally obtaining 5 Pfennigs per lb live weight more than other sheep. # Pig Breeding in Oldenburg.

By BREED DIRECTOR DR IMMLER, Bad Zwischenahn-Ammerlander Pig Breeders Association Ammerlandische Schweine Zucht Genossenschaften

At a little distance of the old Hanseatic city of Bremen in Oldenburg a comparatively small but exceedingly beautiful district opens up, called the Ammerland Here pig breeding, facilitated by excel lent feeding and rearing conditions, has reached a wonderfully high standard

As is the case in many other parts of Germany, the origin of the Ammerland pig dates back to the indi genous landrace pig a large-boned, long legged narrow-ribbed flat bodied animal with a long drawn head, whose most outstanding quality was robustness Some 80 years ago the Germans commenced to develop a taste for better quality meat, and the Ammerland pig was condemned as an impossible proposition Breeders in Ammerland, however, got together to see what could be done to their beloved pig, and decided that the quality of the meat had to be improved by means of introduction of new blood. Inter-breeding and crossing with Yorkshire, Lincolnshire and Berkshire Pedigree boars from England were resorted to, and gradually, after many disastrous failures much experimenting, and many cruel disappointments, a new pig was evolved to day known as the pure bred German large white pig

In Ammerland it was early evident that legal measures ought to be taken to protect and promote the breed Thus it came about that in 1886 only boars could be selected and used for breeding, while in 1891, at a great exhibition at Bremen, the Ammerland breeders could demonstrate a certain, if modest, degree of success In 1894, however, a great step forward could be taken, as the number of breeders had now increased, and so the "Ammerland Pig Breeders Association was founded. Since then progress has been continuous because the management of the Association has been in competent hands. Warned by failures elsewhere, no attempt was made here to breed a 'super pig, the aim being the breeding of a pig of fixed type combining all the requirements of the market, while retaining robustness and high fecundity This pig was evolved, and the 'Ammerland type' has now become the model type for the whole large white pig breed of Germany, while even further alield in many foreign countries the Ammerland prototype is followed In central Europe, even in other Continents this pig is now adopted as the best type for a native landrace pig The Ammerland pig is a splendid animal with its large frame long, beautifully broad back, well-rounded ribs short well set neck, a head of moderate length, slightly turned up nose, broad forehead, medium sized, upright ears, strong body build | 317 kilos at an age of 15 months and very low and very full hams. It rapidly develops and is ready for the market at a remarkably early age It produces excellent bacon-indeed "Ammerland Pig Products' such as bacon, mild-cured hams and sausages are to day renowned all over the world, everywhere, when exhibited, fetching prizes Accustomed from early youth to being turned out on grazing, the Ammerland pig is not susceptible to illness Epidemics are unknown in the breed district

Breeding is mostly in the hands of the peasants The breed of to day has been built up on excellent Pedigree male and female lines A considerable number of animals which have been proved to have passed on to their progeny certain outstanding qualities-beauty of form, fecundity, and fattening propensity-have become famous in Herd-book Annals in Germany As figures always "tell," may it be stated that many an Ammerlander litter has been sold at £150-£300 even more Tests of performance are compulsory in the breed district, and are under the control of the Husbandry Department of a well known University Every boar and sow must be selected for breeding by a special Committee elected for this purpose, and when selected they have to be shown at certain local centres where Pedigree animals compete for prizes At the annual Shows of the "German Agricultural Society the Ammerland breed is meeting with increasing favour and greater success year after year In 1926 300 litters were examined in Ammerland

It was proved that the best mothers are always the most prolific while their litters invariably show a higher precentage of survival Further, it was proved that the large litters invariably are individually stronger and capable of more rapid growth than are small litters Out of the "Experiment' mothers, 50% bred litters of 112 youngsters, and of these 98 survived, 10. a percentage of 88, with an average litter weight reaching at 4 weeks 66 5 kilos The average litter weight of these 300 "Experiment' litters obtained at the age of 4 weeks was 50 6 kilos Experience has fully proved that the Pedigree registered pigs in Ammerland show an average increase in weight of about & kilo a day, At an age of 6 months they weigh as a rule 100 kilos though very good specimens often attain this weight at an age of 4½ 5 months. Too rapid development is, however, more suitable for animals set aside for fattening

The Champion boar at Dortmund in 1927 weighed

Oldenburg Association of Pig Breeders.

Live stock breeding in Oldenburg is the mainstay of agriculture owing to climatic and soil conditions Breeding of horses, cattle, sheep and pigs is highly developed

The Oldenburg Association of Pig Breeders. domiciled in the town of Oldenburg, was formed for the purpose of promoting breeding of the Pedigree Landrace Oldenburg pig, and since its foundation in 1007 the Association has steadily grown in membership and activities and to day its breed district covers more than three quarters of the country Prior to its foundation, various smaller breed associations existed. the oldest of which was founded as early as in 1894 The present Association works in co operation with the Chamber of Agriculture for Oldenburg and is acknowledged by the "German Agricultural Society." Berlin

The breed district comprises an area of 3 600 square kilometres with a stock of about 200 000 Pedigree Landrace pigs of which about 3 000 animals and their progeny were entered several years ago in the Association's Herd Book The number of members is now 800, representing small, middle sized and large

farms

The Association works towards systematic improvement in the breeding of the Pedigree Landrace pig with a view of developing fecundity, early maturity. robustness, a well developed body, and ability of turning rough feed into meat Every year a Committee is appointed to select breed animals for the breed district, and the Committee acts also as Judge when inspecting and travelling through the district, and in this manner it has been found that breeding on generally adopted lines can best be carried out

The Association runs its own Herd Book and arranges for entries, and looks after its representation at the "German Agricultural Society s" many exhibitions It handles Pedigree sales through auctions and carries on propaganda on behalf of the members with a view of finding purchasers for their breed animals. As for educational propaganda, the Association arranges for experts to address breeders' meetings at various places in the district and to act as advisers on all matters in connection with breeding and feeding

The Oldenburg pig has developed to what it is to day-a large-sized, deep bodied animal with remarkable ability for food consumption, and of early maturity, chiefly owing to continuous grazing over large areas It is certainly one of the most prominent breeds in the country, and the demand for breed animals is sufficient testimonial to the value of this race, while the repeatedly granted Prizes by the "German Agricultural Society" as well as other Prizes testify to its popularity parties who would like to visit prominent breeders herds in the Oldenburg district can obtain any assistance on application at the Bureau of the Association in the town of Oldenburg Every year local exhibitions are arranged at which the best that is bred in the district can be seen

Pig Breeding in East Prussia.

By BREED DIRECTOR DAHLANDER, Councillor, Chamber of Agriculture Konigsberg

Some 70 years ago several wellin East Prussia known Pedigree breeds were taken up and most of them still exist, having lived up to their reputation Among such breeds the pure-bred German large white pig is foremost. Originating through imported boars and sows of the Large White Yorkshire breed, a typical East Prussian large white pig has been evolved through a certain system of in breeding, an animal of robust and hardy constitution, suitable to the climate of East Prussia and fulfilling all the conditions demanded by the meat markets of Berlin as well as what is required by the "German Agricultural Society" This breed is now everywhere well-known and appreciated

Besides the German large white pig. the improved German Landrace pig is extensively bred in East The first Association of pig breeders in East Prussia was founded in 1912 but there are now four such Associations, with headquarters at Kingsberg Allenstein Insterburg and Manenburg All of these are officially recognised by the "German

Pedigree pig breeding is quite an old industry [ Associations is in the hands of the officials, while matters concerning breeding rest with the Chamber of Agriculture

As regards regulations for improving the breed.

(1) The "Breed mark' must be affixed according to the rules of the "German Agricultural Society," by the control officer of the Association prior to dispersion of a litter to ensure indisputable proof of identity

(2) Selection for breeding has to be made on the responsibility of the officer, in his presence and with the approval of a Committee which must rest satisfied that the breeders' assertions concerning Pedigree are correct. The selection is then made, when beauty of form, health and performances are deciding factors The animals are now measured according to an adopted system; and it is the rule that before they are chosen they themselves, as well as their prozeny, must be carefully examined For this reason animals cannot be selected before reaching 12 years, and then only if Aericultural Society. The management of these they have progeny old enough to be rudged

Great importance is

Great importance is attached to the entries in the Herd Book in which there is a "Register of Breeding" and a "Register of Performances"

Investigations of Pedigree are carried out systematically, male and female progenitors equally considered, to enable correct judgment of blood com-

The first "East Prussian Boar and Sow Register." which happens to be also the first of its kind in Germany, was established in 1026 by me at Konigsberg In the future much more strict adherence to the rule that past performances shall be examined will be required There are now some 40 districts under control, where continuous system of weighing groups and categories of pigs is carried on under supervision of competent specialists. In this manner positive and accurate calculations concerning performances of individual animals, as well as of different Blood Lines can be made and examined For comparison, the average four weekly weight of the whole litter of a sow under the fathership of a special boar is recorded

The officials operating in these control districts are also instructed by the breeders Associations to give advice in matters of breeding and feeding and in general to report to headquarters how pig breeding is progressing in the district

Pedigree pig auctions which generally connende with the buil and heifer auctions held by the Herd Book Associations at Konigsberg, Allenstein, Insterburg and Marienburg These regularly held auctions are considered to be the best promoters of breeding as they show comparison between large numbers of animals The management of these auctions have to examine all animals sent, with right to reject such as are not up to standard of form, constitution and performance Obviously many hardships are thereby inflicted on breeders, but this system promotes better breeding and works in favour of the purchaser

The following classes of pigs are admitted to the auctions

Boars 5 6 months old Boars 6 8 months old Boars over 8 months, ready for service Pregnant Sows

Since 1922 East Prussa has sent animals to the annual Grand Shows of the "German Agricultural Society," and every year obtained greater success, Thus the East Prussaan Pedigree pig breeding Association took a number of Prizes at these Shows at Hamburg in 1924, at Breslau in 1926, and at Dortmund in 1927, and every time the first Prize in the Class for large breeding Associations

At the yearly show held at Konigsberg in August interested parties have splendid opportunities to convince themselves of the progress of pig breeding in

The German Moorland Pig.

Hildesheimer Zuchtervereinigung zur Zucht des Deutschen Weideschweines 3, Linkstrasse, Hildesheim

By COUNCILLOR NAUSS Hildesheim

The only existing Pig breed in Germany still [ entirely free from any infusion of blood through crossing with other breeds, the German "Grazing Pig," or as it is also called, the Black-White Hanover-Brunswick Landrace pig, is remarkable and certainly worth the steadily increasing attention now being paid to the same. The only other pure bred landrace pig. the Bavarian, once upon a time very prominent, is rapidly disappearing, and thus, of all the various indirenous pig breeds in Germany, only the Grazing pig remains. The main breed District is round about Hildesheim and part of Brunswick Here the breed has existed since time immemorial and it is worth mentioning that it is the only breed in Germany with which English blood has never been mixed. Lately this pig is becoming very popular on the great agricultural estates in the northern and eastern parts of Germany.

In type, general exterior and race features the

indeed, the great livestock man v. Nathusius has proved a close relationship between these two, easily demonstrated through the head which has all the features of the typical wild boar. The enormously long-drawn snout enables the pig to obtain its feed in field and forest where, thanks to a marvellously developed smelling instinct, it loves to feed on numerous small larvae living in the soil.

The ears are of middle size, stretching upwards whereby the face is free facilitating easy grangs. The tail is curiously long. The back is curved, but not in the razor-like manner. The legs are enormously strong, permitting the animals to unceasingly move over large areas, a point of great importance for a graing pig. The body is closely covered with rough hair through which the pig is better able to withstand bad weather. Speaking generally, it is one of the hardest existing pips, extraordinarily moveable, linely and wideawade, and a splendld forager.

When towards the end of the last century farming

became more intensive in Germany, it was found that blood infusion through English pig breeds could powerfully improve the existing landrace pigs and make them more suitable for an increasing demand for better pork, and this new movement towards improving existing breeds naturally threatened the existence of the grazing pig With a view, therefore, to preserve this breed, propaganda was started in the year 1899 to associate all the breeders, and thus the 'Hildesheim Swine Breeders' Association" was formed, the first among several such Associations in the Province of Hanover Thanks to this timely step it was made possible to preserve all the original qualities in this pig, chief among which should be mentioned its ability to withstand climatic influence, to exist on the roughest and scantiest of food, and to always remain sound and hardy A contributing factor for drawing breeders' attention to this valuable animal was found in the butchers preference for this pig on account of the exquisite taste of the meat, the fine hams, and suitability for the sausage industry With a general view of more systematically improving and developing the breed. certain 'points were adopted according to which breeders have paid more attention to strongly developed well-set legs . that the head must not be permitted to be too long or too narrow, that the back must be less round, and that the ribs must be strongly sprung With these points fixed, breeders soon succeeded in increasing the grazing pig's early maturity and ability to get fattened during a shorter time than was previously held possible In the year 1899 about 3,000 absolutely pure bred animals of this breed were rounded up and placed under observation, and since then the breed has been systematically developed without any admixture of other blood Crossings with the Bavarian landrace pig and the Perigord pig bred in the South of France had been tried but never proved to add to the value or development of the grazing pig Great importance has always been attached to rapidly fattened preventing the animals from breeding too early Particularly large litters are not desired, as experience has proved that a middle sized litter as a rule consists of better developed individuals. The sow as a rule breeds twice a year and these two litters generally number fourteen to sixteen The sow is kept breeding until reaching her seventh year. Great importance is attached to the proper development of the boar, and only animals of approved Pedigree and generally well developed are utilised Every year a Selecting Committee looks into the Performances of the individual herds when it is decided which animals shall be admitted for breeding purposes Every year an exhibition takes place at which breed as well as fattened animals are exhibited

This pig has now been exhibited year after year at the periodical shows yearly arranged by the German Agricultural Society, and more than 200 prizes have been awarded. At the recent Fat Stock Show in Berlin, the "German Grazing Pig was awarded first Prize in the Carcase Competition While not so very long ago many a pig breeder doubted the value of this pig and inclined towards treating it as of no account, the continuous success obtained by breeders who have exhibited the grazing pig at various Live Stock Shows has turned many a doubtful farmer into a warm advocate of this particular breed and caused a change of opinion This is proved by the fact that the demand for breed material is constantly increasing Especially after the war has this been the case, as during the war years the grazing pig proved itself one of the most valuable domestic animals owing to its ability to exist on next to nothing

The grazing pig is also in demand for crossing with Large White Yorkshire and Berkshire boars. the opinion being now generally held that the first cross matures at a remarkably early date and is more bred pure during hundreds of years. The value of this typical German horse was demonstrated during the trying years of the recent World war. German horses have always enjoyed good repute, but lately they have come to the forefront at the great international tests. These Light Horse breeds, bred pure through hundreds of years, are now bred to type and exterior without any throw-backs, while their ability to reproduce has become permanent Breeders early attached great importance to continuity in type. harmony in lines, strictly correct position of the legs and proper movements, while harmony in body form, body build and general appearance has now become 500 different places more than 4 000 P a permanent feature in the breeding of this type of Tests are conducted in which some

In Germany Saddle and Carriage Horses have been I horse. This being the case, the German pure-bred horse industry is now in a position of being able to supply horses for the most diverse uses quickly moving Blood horses, accurately jumping Hunters of every possible weight, first class saddle horses for tournament purposes, pure and healthy breed material, excellent carriage horses, and heavy cart horses suitable for agricultural and transport requirements. B) means of a well planned and well-organised system for testing of performances, it is now possible to examine and test a very considerable portion of the existing breed material stallions as well as brood mares and at horses; and every year all over Germany participate Thus stallions are tested at the Stallion Testing Establishment at Zwion by the Prussian Stud authorities in regard to the East Prussian breed, while the Hanoveranian breed is tested at Westercelle. where all the young stallions are subjected to severe tests in regard to endurance, galloping, jumping and pulling ability The German pure bred horse is remarkable on account of his many-sided qualities. Thus he is equally suitable for riding as for carriage and heavy transport purposes After the war years great importance has been laid on creating a generally stronger horse, with the result that greater strength in bone, body lines and build has been achieved. Breeders are anxious to satisfy every possible demand on this type of horse in the International Horse Market series of remarkable successes achieved in the great international horse tests at home and abroad speak volumes for the superior quality of the German horse . and the steadily increasing export demand coming from almost every country of the World has resulted in every year increasingly larger orders for many thousands of German horses for breed as well as for general utility purposes The German Blood horse industry now embraces five old-established, permanent breeds, re, those in East Prussia Hanover, Oldenburg Ost-Friesland and Holstein

East Prussia breeds an elegant, quick moving high class saddle horse, and the East Prussian Army horses have always enjoyed great reputation, while the splendid Trakehner Hunters are every year to be seen during the month of November when the Central Trakehner Stud holds its now world renowned auctions. The administration of this breed is in the hands of the 'East Prussian Stud Book Association for the Breeding of the Light Trakehner Horse the address of which is 15 Schuberstrasse, Konigsberg

Breeding of the Hanoveranian horses is carried on along certain blood lines evolved hundreds of years ago and centred at the two large Stallion Depots at Celle and Osnabruck Owing to the permanency of very large grazing districts in the Province of Hanover, the breeders there have created an elegant beautifully framed, strong saddle and carriage horse of elegant movements and magnificent gait, indeed a most remarkable horse Nowadays the Hanoveranian horse appears in the forefront in all horse jumping competitions all over Germany The Hanoveranian breed industry is organised and controlled through the Association of Breeders of the Light Horse in the Association of Breeders of the Light Horse in the Province of Hanover' from its central offices at 10 Leopoldstrasse Hanover Blood horse breeding in Pomerania Mecklenburg Brandenburg. Westphalia and part of the Province of Schleswig Holstein is to a certain degree arranged on the basis of Hanoveranian horse material

In the Province of Oldenburg a very strong, heavy horse is bred suitable both for carriage and agricultural purposes, excellent as a trotter, remarkable for strong bones reaching a body weight up to 17 Cent Oldenburg breeds the heaviest of all the Blood horses in Germany Whether for pair or four-horse carriage, the Oldenburg horse performs equally well Every year, early in February at the regular stallion Selections in Oldenburg, magnificent, well-bred heavy Oldenburg horses are put up for sale The control of the Oldenburg horse breed is in the able hands of the Management of the "Association of Oldenburg Horse Breeders." the address of which is 12, Pferdemarkt Oldenburg Town, Province Oldenburg, whose attention is mainly centred on the production of heavy elegant carriage horses. It should be stated that the Oldenburg horse nowadays is also bred in Schlesien, Thuringen, Sachsen Baden, Hessen and Bavaria

The Ost-Friesian horse breed is partly based on Oldenburg blood. Thus in this part of Germany, a type is bred very much on the same lines as the Oldenburg horse. These horses are of particularly outstanding ment on account of high stepping and somewhat dancing movements, and may be classified as remarkably strong bodde well-framed horses which generally reach a body weight up to 17 Cent. This type of horse is suitable for almost every use, and especially as carriage horses. Any enquiries concerning the purchasing of these horses, whether for breeding or any other purpose should be addressed to the "Ost Friesian Stud Book Association," at Norden, in Ost Friesland.

The Holstein-Marsh horses are in appearance and elegant movements most pleasing animals remarkable for harmony in build, and whether as saddle horses or for carriage purposes they are equally good. As a jumper, the Holstein horse is often seen at his best Wherever they appear they never fail to catch the eye on account of their elegance in appearance and movements. The management and control of the breed is in the hands of the "Association of Breeders of the Holstein Horse," at Elmshorn, Holstein.

Among the more notable happenings in the German horse breeding industry, the stallion selection with attendant Fair at Oldenburg, the stallion Fair for the Ost-Friesian breed at Aurich in existence for more than 150 years, and the stallion Fair for the Holstein breed at Elmshorn, all of which every year take place early in February, should be mentioned, while early in May every year the whole of a year's class of East Prussia's stallions is marketed at the East Prussian stallion Fair held at Zwion, Georgenburg During the middle of November the Trakehner Hunter sales take place by means of auctions On the other hand, perhaps the best materiel created through the skill and efforts of the German Blood horse breeders is to to be seen at the yearly, great International Horse demonstrations arranged by the 'State Organisation for Breeding and Testing of German Blood Horses, and held at Berlin, where performances under saddle and in jumping, trotting etc are particularly attractively demonstrated. It should be added that throughout the year Auctions take place all over the German breed districts where foals as well as utility horses and breed material are exhibited for sale

sandy, sometimes clayey, or boggy soil, but the good

breed results are everywhere the same

The Oldenburg horse grows and develops quickly and is generally used for breeding on reaching an age of 3 years He is capable of doing light work when 2 years old, and as his temperament is quite docile and easily controlled, he is amenable even in inexpersenced hands

He is a good feeder, and when working hard but receiving rations such as light horses generally get he retains his well rounded and sleek appearance At present, there are some 4 000 stallions and about 40 000 brood mares registered in the Stud Book of the Society The Oldenburg horse has been exported to all countries of the world, and wherever he goes he is liked For names of Oldenburg Horse Breeders, see pages 535 536

The Trakehner Horse.

By DIRECTOR JESSAT, Chamber of Agriculture for East Prussia, Konigsberg

as he is called Trakehner horse goes back to the year 1732, when King Friedrich Wilhelm I founded a Stud at Trakehnen in East Prussia Originally formed to supply the needs of the royal court, it soon grew beyond this as the Prussian farmers recognised the advantages of using Trakehner stallions to sire their mares, and the demand for these services assumed such proportions that it became necessary to establish depots for stallions all over the Province from which they travelled around the districts. In this manner the present five Studs in East Prussia gradually developed. They are still depôts for pure bred stall lions of Trakehner breed. For close on 200 years it has existed under conditions such as still prevail, but the type has undergone certain alterations rendered necessary by the demands of modern times

During this long period the East Prussian farmers have bred a horse suitable for their own needs and economic conditions Winter lasts from the first snow in October to middle of May. As the soil is excellent corn sown in May ripens at the same time as that sown elsewhere and therefore there is no time to waste, so that the horses have to work very hard, and they must move quickly, be healthy and possess great staying power During the long winter months following upon these 4.5 months of hard work there is much less work to be done but their feed is a heavy expense to the farmers, and for this reason a horse that can exist on scanty rations is required. All these points were always taken into consideration during the last 200 years, and the present day East Prussian horse is a strong, robust powerful and quick moving animal of great staying power, and a good feeder, of excellent health

East Prussia's breeding districts are very extensive and rearing conditions and type of horse are therefore varied—range of types for almost every taste—saddle and carriage horses horses that willingly pull almost at tournaments and often carried away the chief this breed

Systematic breeding of the East Prussian, or | prizes at competitions for jumping, cross country racing riding etc

> The Trakehner horse is remarkable for fecundity The mares often produce 20 foals in 21 years, while 18 foals all living, is not uncommon Their longevity is likewise remarkable, and the Stud Books afford testimonials in this respect. Many a mare has lived 28 years without having passed through a barren year

> The explanation is probably to be found in the circumstance that breeding is well managed thanks to the > Government, who select and possess almost every sire During 1927, 760 Government stallions were used for breeding. The brood mares are registered in the Trakehner Stud Book, and many a horse has Pedigree reaching as far back as 200 years The great qualities of these horses are therefore, > not the result of chance but the outcome of many years' careful selection and breeding under Government supervision

Breeders' associations work intimately and always hand in hand with the Chamber of Agriculture at Konigsberg which is the farmers own organisation This being the case, arrangements can always be made for sales of horses by the breeder direct to the purchaser. without the help of middle men

These horses are almost entirely bred by peasants all of whom use the mares for farm work Foals are sold after weaning and taken to larger farms with extensive pastures in which they are turned out day and night

At some of the larger Studs where the horses are bred, they are kept on and run in herds Among these is the already mentioned Government Stud at Trakehwhile among the large privately owned Studs are the Corneten at Lussenwalde, Weedern, the Lenken Stud at Birkenfeld K Darkehmen, the Juditten, and the Carben Studs

The Trakehner horse has often proved his good varied—range of types for almost every taste—saddle qualities in International competitions. Thus at any load, and heavy, very strong coach horses. Of all France Italy Switzerland Belgium Ireland Hungary these types, horses of excellent quality have competed and Holland Horsemen are increasingly going in for

The Rhineland Draught Horse,

By Ds. MEYER, Rhineland Chamber of Agriculture, Endenicher Allée 60, Bonn

As far back as in the year 1876 breeders in the Rhineland commenced breeding on uniformly adopted principles with a view of creating a draught horse of the Belgian Ardenne type as this type of horse had developed ability of early maturity profitable foraging and proved its adaptability under new conditions while of pleasant temper and suitable for all kinds of work Crossing the Belgian stallions on brood mares of the Rhineland native horse was now commenced although at first only on a comparatively small scale. Since then however, the breeding of the Rhineland draught horse has developed in this Province and the following figures illustrate the great popularity of the type

In 1878 the number of Government owned Stud Stall ons was 48 1890 and privately owned 111
1910 the number of Government owned Stud Stall ons was 206
and privately owned 12
1927 the number of Government owned Stud Stall ons was 100
478

To-day the greater number of first rate stallions is privately owned and no stallions are used for service which are not in possession of approved Pedigree

In the year 1802 the Rhineland Stud Book was founded The Stud Book Association arranges every year certain dates when brood mares and stallions can be entered prior to which however a Selection Committee must approve of animals for which entries have been demanded In 1924 certain alterations were decided upon in regard to such entries in accordance with a decision taken by the Government Associa tion of German Draught Horse Breeders It was then decided that two different Stud Books should be maintained of which one was to be called The Central Stud Book for Draught Horses In this only draught horses of the German Rhineland breed with indisputable Pedigree may be entered but for such entries certain conditions applying to exterior movement must be fulfilled In the second Stud Book other horses can be entered provided their parents are already registered, and thus entries are granted to horses whether their exterior and movement are approved or not By adopting this system a Register is created in which for all times the progenitors can easily be traced

Thanks to the Rhineland breeders unstinted efforts this breed is now being developed in the best The war of course, brought many possible manner obstacles in its train but what was lost during those years has now been made good thanks to strict selection of breed material The periodically occurring Horse Breeders Exhibitions have contributed in a remarkable degree towards developing this horse. and to-day nobody will dispute the immense value in accorded greater approval.

horse breeding accruing from only utilising the very best material through which it is possible always to breed true to type and in the progeny continue inherent good qualities

The Chamber of Agriculture at Bonn is actively interested in promoting horse breeding in the Rhines land With a view of stimulating general interest in local Exhibitions considerable sums of money are granted by the Chamber chiefly for Prize awards to one and two-year old Fillies The Chamber likewise engages experts to tour the Province for addressing farmers and breeders and verbally enlightening them on matters bearing upon horse breeding

Perhaps the most important function on the part of the Chamber is its control of selection of breed animals Since 1924 selection of stallions is centralised at Cologne Entry for selection is however not obligatory Regular meetings with animals for selection take place also in various parts of the country and prizes are awarded to 21 year olds but older stallions are also admitted for competition. Sales of breed animals take place on these occasions. The annual stallion selection is held every year in October, and has proved a great attraction for breeders and farmers from all parts of the country as with such a display of horse material every taste can be satisfied. The Rhineland breeder on the other hand has here a wonderful opportunity for demonstrating what he can do in the way of draught horse breeding

The Chamber of Agriculture maugurated some time ago a special organisation for the sale of Rhineland horses Resulting from co-operation between this selling organisation now a special department of the Chamber and the various minor local Breed Associations and individual breeders, the Chamber is always accurately informed concerning any horse material that at any time may be ready for the market Wouldbe purchasers can avail themselves of the Chamber a good services in this respect for which a minimum fee is charged Since this selling department was inaugurated its popularity has rapidly increased That strictly impartial treatment can always be counted on is recognised by all who have made use of its services

Commencing in the year 1909 the Chamber holds every year a largely attended Horse Exhibition where as a rule some 350 to 400 horses are exhibited. At the annual exhibitions arranged by the 'German Agricultural Society' the Rhineland horse is always represented and as a rule carries off distinctions. The Rhineland horse breeder has thus from a modest beginning through energy and co-operation succeeded in creating a draught horse which year after year is

Goat Breeding in Germany.

In Germany goat breeding was an established and prospering industry long before the commercial value of this domestic animal was recognised in other countries, and probably the largest percentage of valuable goat stocks in the world is reared in this country. The goat has been developed in Germany on lines scarcely conceived possible some fifty years ago, and the performances of the existing breeds are to-day nothing short of marvellous. The world's goat stock is estimated at os million of which 25 million are bred in Europe, while the stock in Germany may be estimated at about 3 500,000 The popularity of the goat is. however, not general all over Germany as is demonstrated by the fact that before the war there were only two goats per 100 inhabitants in East Prussia as against 26-32 goats in various parts of western Germany As a profit earner no other domestic animal beats the goat The various present types in Germany are the outcome of intensive breeding but probably none of these is indigenous Thus, it is probable that the Saanen goat originally emanated from Sweden, while the Toggenburg and the Guggisberg goats came from Switzerland which country seems to be the cradle of profitable goat breeding. Twenty years ago the annual milk yield per goat in Germany was considered good if reaching 450 to 500 litres, while to-day it is probably correct to state that the average is very near 800 litres Thus, the development in the goat breeding industry in Germany which has taken place since 1882 has brought about a steady increase in milk yield and milk fat percentage, while the types of the divers now existing breeds have become permanent. The white and the brown-coloured goats are now certainly bred true to type but it would appear that the first mentioned may slowly push out the dark-coloured breeds. The name of the white goat originated from the Saanen valley in Switzerland where some 35 years ago breeders of this type formed one of the largest Goat Breeders' Associations known to exist

The Appenzell goat, also white in colour, belongs to the Saanen goat race, although many breeders in Switzerland maintain that it is an entirely distinctive breed without any relation to the goats emanating from the Saanen valley Perhaps the Appenzell goats are somewhat larger in body, but it is reliably stated that to point out one of this beed among a grazing herd of Saanen goats is often beyond the ability of experienced soat breeders In Hessen, chiefly in the Starkenburg district. goat breeding has developed in a remarkable degree and the number of Breeders' Associations here is now considerably more than 100 The Chamber of Agriculture for Starkenburg has long supervised breeding interested parties can obtain any information desired by corresponding with the Chamber, address Darmstadt In the Frankfurt district a very prosperous

Association of goat breeders has existed during the last twenty-six years and one of the most comely goats is bred here and known under the name of "Frankfurter Saanen' The average milk production from this breed, it is stated, is 5 to 6 litres per day Every year in July or August the Association arranges an exhibition of breed animals where the best are registered in a special book of performance, and Prizes dis-tributed. This type of Saanen goat is pure white with very short hair, entirely free from horns and generally speaking of a very pleasant appearance The Chamber of Agriculture at Wiesbaden inaugurated some years ago a farm for the breeding of Pedigree animals In Hessen-Nassau an "Association of Taunus

Saanen goat Breeders" has been in existence for a considerable time, this type being likewise white and

In some districts of Pfalz, chiefly at Kaisers lautern, goat breeding has developed during the last twenty-five years and many a breeder in Germany holds the notion that the Pfalz Saanen goats are superior to any other breed The Association, whose address is Kaiserslautern, has now some 22,000 members and a registered stock of Pedigree goats running into 46 000 animale

In Baden goat breeding is likewise very popular, and a number of Associations look after the interest of members who regularly infuse their herds with new blood by imports from the Saanen valley in Switzerland The chief breeding district is round about Zuzenhausen, Sinsheim The demand for Baden Saanen goats is increasing every year and large numbers are being sent to other German Provinces and also to Austria, Hungary, Roumania Bulgaria etc

In Thuringen a type of goat is bred under the name of "Langensalza Saanen goats one of the most valuable of all existing strains in Germany It is probable that these goats originated in the German Landrace goat and by means of in-breeding and strict selection have developed to their present high degree of performance The Langensalza bucks have for many years been recognised as very promment sires and always held in high demand goats are of middle weight, without horns, and with astonishingly developed milking organs Perfectly white in colour, the hair is long and finer than most other Saanen goats, and their heads are remarkably long drawn, with large eyes looking sideways neck is very long and thin and speaking generally, these animals are beautifully developed. Their average and matters of importance to the local Societies, and I milk production is estimated at 850 to 950 litres

In Saxony in the Erzgebirge districts a strain of Saanen goats has been developed the milk yield of which is very remarkable. Probably these goats were originally bred from a Landrace goat on which Swiss Saanen bucks were crossed and the breed to-day is known as Sebritzer Saanen goats Accord ing to Herd Book entries a yearly yield of 1 200 litres of milk even more is not uncommon These animals are white in colour and without horns

Among Germany's coloured goat breeds most of which belong to the Toggenburg type in colour from pale brownish reddish to very dark brownperhaps the most prominent are the Thuringen Toggen burg goats bred in the Erfurt district Interest for goat breeding has always been very lively in Thurmen and this explains why as far back as in the year 1870 the goat stock here was then already very considerable 23 goats per 100 inhabitants as com pared with 34 goats to-day per 100 inhabitants. The full grown goat is 73 cm in height with an average weight of 82-83 lbs The average milk production is 837 litres but a very considerable number of animals yield more than I ooo litres

In Rhein Hessen a rather remarkable looking goat has been bred for more then fifty years the so-called Guggisberg goat chiefly in the Wintersheim

district. The colour of these goats is brown with variations in the lighter and darker shade and the animals are rather attractive. Of late years they have become very popular in Germany and are repeatedly accorded gold medals and first I rizes at Agricultural Shows Their size is of the average and their milk production is remarkably high. Thus several entries in the Herd Book show yields of from 1 050 to 1 170 kilos per 365 days lactation period The best Guggis berg goats are bred in the districts of Alsheim Lauben heim Einsheim and Guntersblum Breeding is under the control of the local Chamber of Agriculture and the number of breeders of this type is increasing from year to year

Among the various breeds the Harz goats have been known and appreciated in Germany almost since time immemorial The chief districts for the breed ing of these goats are round about Alfeld and Goslar in Harz but the Harz goat is bred almost everywhere in Germany owing to its general popularity The number of breeders Societies is very considerable and all of these have joined up in a big Association which is looking after the interests of the various local Societies As illustrating the general development of this b eed of goat it may be stated that before the war the average production was 350 to 450 l tres of milk, but after the war as a result of very strict supervision the average sield has been increased to 525-575 litres. A con-siderable number registered in the Ped gree Herd Book of the Harz Breeders Association produce as much as 000 litres during a lactation period of 200 days with a percentage of fat from 3.55 to 3.75 In the Goslar district the milk production is stated to be considerably higher on an average 25 to 3 litres of milk per day In this district goat breeding is certainly most remun erative as the animals early in April are turned out on the pastures and kept there until late in the autumn but as a rule taken under roof during the night

Another prominent strain of goats in Germany the Schwarzwald goat is also lately coming much to the fore on account of its steadily increasing milk yield The colour of this type of goat is a pleasant brownish often black and white and the average yearly production is 750 l ters. It is a rather elegant looking animal with very lively movements. The belly is often white and the head of the buck as a rule somewhat darker than the other part of the body Lately it is quite common to find goats belonging to this breed develop ing entirely new colours such as black black and white or reddish white The chief breeding districts are Tuttlingen: Wurttemberg and Spaichingen from where the Schwarzwald goat has spread over many parts of Germany These goats are generally hornless

Livestock Breeding in Greece.

The Live Stock estimate for Greece states · cattle 681,000, sheep 5,805 000, pigs 418,000, horses 175,000

In ancient times the reputation of the Greek live ! stock breeder was high and his skill held in great respect among the various nations populating the Mediterranean Basin, the horses from Hellas being considered among the best, and a great trade was long carried on between Greek breeders and the countries of Europe The Greek sheep were also considered of particular value, and some of the cattle breeds early enjoyed reputation as fine reproducers thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, most of their cattle were entirely white in colour, with large horns, not unlike the present day Park cattle in England The Greek goat was likewise considered one of the best in Southern Europe, and agriculture in Greece was long looked upon by her neighbours as particularly remunerative To-day her agriculture is in many parts of the country in a more or less neglected state Of the total area, about 25 500 square miles, one seventh is under cultivation. The chief products for home consumption are wheat, barley and rye and for trading purposes, tobacco and the current crop, which yearly reaches such large quantities as from 160 000 to 170 000 A considerable article of trade, the acorn from a certain species of oak tree, is prepared for tanning purposes, probably reaching between 6 000 and 7,000 tons every year, yielding a considerable source of income

Most of the territory is mountainous and most of the Greezin slands are disrupted parts of the moin land, where earthquakes are always threatening Between mountains and hills are fertile valleys where the olive, the fig, the currant grape, oranges, pomegranates and other fruits of exquisite quality grow, and where sheep breeding is remuneratively carried on along pastures of great luxuriance. The bee keeping industry, once upon a time of considerable value, has been more or less neglected for very many years. During the last hundred years the Greeks have considerably increased their maritime and commercial intercourse with other nations, and since mediæval times the Greek merchants have enjoyed world reputation for commercial and financial skill The population is now about 221 million, of which nine tenths are Greeks, the rest Albanians Having suffered considerably during the war, and afterwards, Greece has during the last few years enjoyed stable Government and indications point towards more tranquillity Up to a recent time one of the greatest drawbacks in the country was the lack of a proper road system, preventing access to more remote places Now, however, a system of new main roads, acting as arteries throughout the country, is being constructed, and the reawakening interest for live stock breeding bodes well for the future Greece is. however, still faced with serious problems resulting from the critical period following after the war, with her territory doubled, while the population seems to lack consolidation. In Western Thrace, a part of Greece, the population is mainly Moslem Agriculture in this part of the country has always been a remunerative pursuit, and thanks to the efforts of the Government, and through co operation with the inhabitants, several hundreds of new villages have lately sprung up, housing a population of small farmers, all of whom are now busily cultivating small holdings Thus probably nearly 150,000 new farms have been laid out, each of from 6 to 20 acres, and there will most certainly be a field for improved live stock breeding among these many new agriculturists, especially in regard to sheep rearing, and opportunities for breeders of Pedigree stock should be studied Regarding cattle, there is very considerable room for improvement, and the Government are contemplating a scheme through which financial assistance will be granted for inauguration of Bull Depôts in various districts Speaking generally, it may be remarked that Greece is now emerging from a very critical period and that all signs point towards permanency of improvement

Horse Breeding in Greece

By COLONEL V SOPHANIANOS Secretary Tockey Club Athens.

The question of Horse Breeding in Greece is controlled by the Bio Technical Section of the Ministry of Agriculture who for the last few years have been assisted in the improvement of the breeds of horses by the lockey Club which being established by Law in 1025 now exercises the practical function of control In conjunction with the Government the lockey Club likewise controls all the Horse Races throughout Greece and has the entire supervision of breeding of Thoroughbreds in its hands. So far experience has shown that horse breeding in Greece carried on on lines adopted by the Agricultural Department is in the right direction and it is hoped that during the next ten years or so better horses may be bred

From the outset the Government have aimed at creating a type of horse suitable for the agricultural needs of the country and taking into consideration the natural conditions pertaining it has been found that the ideal horse for the requirements of the Greek farm should be a rather small sized but strong one After having spent some time on coming to this decision the Covernment have now established Depots spread all over those parts of Greece where the best breed material is produced. At these depots fifty stallions are now being kept of which the majority are purehred Hungarians but a few cross bred stall ons are also used for service on the native brood mares Only a few Arabs or Anglo Arab horses are kept at these The annual production may now be esti mated at some 1 000 colts. In addition to these depots in Greece sixty Hungarian and Serbian cross hred stallions have been lately purchased by the Government and distributed among settlers in Mace-

During 1927 a Stud was established in the Calchidic Peninsula near Salonica for the exclusive service of the Greek Army Here are now stationed six Hun garian cross bred stall ons and twenty five brood mares likewise of Hungarian origin Among breeders of horses who systematically set about their business the following should be mentioned

The British Lake Copais Company which for many years has bred horses for its own needs chiefly for agricultural purposes Lately a Stud was established here and this now maintains two Arab stall ons and forty brood mares These are of various origin chiefly Irish Hungarian and Roumanian A type of Saddle horse is now being bred well proportioned. rather large-sized and the output is so far twenty five colts per annum

running at the Phaleron Horse Races and some of them have carried off very important prizes. This concern also breeds mules of a fairly large size used exclusively for agricultural needs

On the Zografos estate in Thessalv belonging to M L Malamidis horse breeding has taken place during a number of years Arab stallions have been used on Hungarian brood mares and a very good type of Saddle horse somewhat large sized has been bred Orloff stallions have also been used on cross bred brood mares not without success The management of this estate at present maintains five stallions one Thorough bred one Arab one Anglo Arab and two cross bred stallions from Hungary all of which are utilised for a number of brood mares of divers breeds chiefly Hungarian and a very good large sized Some of the cross breds Saddle horse is bred here are likewise running at the Phaleron Races so far with satisfactory results

At the Modi estate in Macedonia near the Bessykia Lake belonging to M P Stathatos three Arab stal lions and a number of Servian brood mares are yearly breeding strong agricultural borses of moderate size

Thus horse breeding has now been fairly satis factorily started and it is held that the Phaleron Races will do much good towards encouraging better types of

Among prominent stallions now in use the follow ing should be specially mentioned

Polychay by Polymdus off belonging to the British Lake Copais Company Off spring has so far been most satisfactory Killet by Honeyba off Lily Lightfoot belonging to M Malamidis Offspring have been sold to the well known horse owners M A Cambsa and M G Apalodimos

Onat by Nuage off Orkade belonging to M E Efessios a stall on of rare promise main tained chiefly for Thoroughbred brood mares M Cambas well known horse enthusiast is chiefly making use of his services

The most active horse breeders are A Cambas of 10 Xenophon Street Athens E Elessios of 24 Stadium Street Athens and the British Lake Copais Company of 3 Paparrigipoulos Street Athens besides L. Malamidis who is now very active in his horse breeding pursuits at the Zografos estate in Thessaly In the recently established Stud Book of Greece all Thoroughbred horses are registered During 1928, it is expected fifteen colts of prominent Pedizree will

Livestock Breeding in Holland.

In this remarkable country where the inhabitants have since time immemorial been battling against the encroachment of the sea, where the soil is naturally unproductive with some 20% of the surface waste land and 8% woodland by magnificent energy and endurance the land has been brought to a remarkably high state of production and agricultural grazing lands now probably count for almost two thirds of the entire area Wheat of high quality rve pats potatoes peas and beans are the main crops and the sugar beet industry in this country is almost a pattern of what next to live stock breeding the most productive crop of agriculture can be brought to yield. There was a time when the Dutch cattle breeds were considered the foremost of the world and still to-day as dairy cattle they hold a very high position. By means of milk production Holland has immensely increased her well being and strengthened her commercial position in Europe dairy products being one of her never ceasing sources of income The average Dutch farmer, through energy and endurance has brought his holding to a remarkable degree of perfection, and there is no branch of animal husbandry that is not highly developed By adopting a system of dykes - Polders -an interesting land winning plan has been carried through and the land reclaimed from the sea has proved of extreme fertility. The greater part of the country is now divided by dykes of which many reach up to 60 ft in height and on these dykes roads have been constructed Holland is divided into eleven Provinces-Brabant Gelderland South and North Holland Zealand Utrceht Friesland Overyssel Groningen Drenthe and Limburg which embrace a total area of about 13 000 square miles Although a small country in area it maintains a large population and is one of the great colonial powers. The history of the country is romantic. After centuries of turbulence and unrest a final settlement was brought about through France intervening in the year 1839 when the outstanding differences with Belgium were settled Since then Holland has forged ahead in every respect

According to the latest Live Stock census the estimated cattle stock is about 2 067 000 pigs 1 522 000

sheep 671 000 and horses 365 000 head

Live stock breeders in Holland arrange every year large live stock shows as a rule largely attended by stock men from all parts of Europe as at these shows the visitor has an opportunity of judging for himself of the high standard attained by the live stock breeder in Holland The cattle bred in the country are the Black White Friesland Holland breed the Red and White Meuse Rhine Yssel breed the Groningen cattle and the Black-White Friesian cattle bred exclusively in the Province of Friesland

As regards horses the heavy draught horse one of the best breeds of its type is chiefly bred in the Provinces of Zealand Limburg and Gelderland while a splendid carriage horse is bred in the Yssel

valley, in the Haarlemmer district in North Brabant. and in the south east of South Holland In the Province of Groningen a large sized carriage horse is also bred closely related to the Oldenburg East Friesian horse, and in the district of Drenthe a With regard to pig breeding two different breeds are encouraged, the improved German Landrace pig and the Large White Yorkshire Sheep breeding embraces two country breeds the Texel sheep and the Friesian milking sheep, and one imported the Lincoln Long Wool sheep As for goats the Netherland goat is now bred all over the country without infusion of foreign blood

The Netherland Cattle Herd Book Association has now a membership reaching 7 400 Breeders of the Black White Friesland Holland breed have during many years exercised the greatest care in breeding with a view of producing excellent cattle and an average of over 5 200 kilos of milk with 3 50% fat during a lactation period of 300 days although not yet attained is the point towards which the Association is working hard These cattle have remarkably long and well sprung ribs a straight back line broad and wide loins square hind quarters and generally illustrate a beautiful milking animal

The red and white cattle breed is chiefly remarkable for its dual purpose character being very good milkers and easily fattened Perhaps the most remarkable feature in this breed is the very short but strong legs and deep body. The average milk yield is very 7 000 kilos with up to 3 80% of fat The Groningen breed is more suitable for beef production than milk but as milkers they show a very fair average produc These three breeds now described, are con trolled by a joint Herd Book Association but with separate administration for each breed. The herd book has special entries for cows and bulls which have passed an inspection and found to be in possession of stipulated conditions in regard to outline and build

A special register accepts entries for animals without official Pedigree The register for young cattle accepts entries within three days after the birth of the calves when Pedigree and other particulars must be handed in A special register for preference bulls is maintained The herd book is issued every year containing records of all inspected and registered animals and their performances

The Friesland Cattle Herd Book Association consists of farmers in Friesland who are breeders and about one sixth of the number of stock owners in Friesland, possessing about one sixth of the total ! number of cattle in the Province, are members of the Association in which over 40,000 head of cattle are entered The Association guarantees absolutely the Pedigree origin of animals inscribed in the Herd Book concerning which in many instances the Pedigrees can be traced back twenty-one generations

The Groningen cattle, with an almost black hody and a white head, is also a dual purpose breed of very great value for its high milk production and capacity for fattening Groningen cattle are every year exported to overseas countries in an increasing degree, and the bulls have proved suitable for crossing purposes in many foreign The Herd Book is published every year

The Texel is the foremost sheep breed in Holland Its Flock Book is kept at the town of Alkmaar, address Landbouwhuis, Kerkplein This breed is remarkable for its great fecundity, early development, extraordinary vitality and its ability to adapt itself to various condi-The mutton from these sheep is excellent while the wool always obtains the highest market prices The Texel sheep is exported overseas and can nowadays be seen in many a foreign country The Friesian milk sheep is chiefly maintained for its great milk yield Of late years Stud animals of this breed have been exported to Latin American countries. The Lincoln Long Woolled sheep is pure bred in Holland where it has developed very favourably The control of sheep breeding is now centred at Arnhem where a Central Bureau for sheep breeding was formed some years ago by the various provincial sheep breeders' Associations, since when a steady improvement in these three sheep breeds has been registered Pride of place, of course, the Texel sheep take and they can be described as a remarkably good breed

The heavy horse, originally called the Flemish horse, has been bred for centuries in the North Sea district Although a breed with inherent good qualities, its comparatively speaking rapid development during the last thirty years has been brought about through blood infusion from the Belgian heavy Ardenne horses and since the Stud Book Association of breeders of this horse came into being in 1914 an amalgamation of the various provincial Stud Books, the improvement in type has undoubtedly been accelerated Association to-day has a membership of over 8 000 with 1,500 serving stallions, 28 000 brood mares and over 55,000 registered foals. No entry is granted a and no foal is registered unless its descent is documented Since the year 1921 annual Shows take place, and the steady increasing number of visitors at these shows from all parts of Europe, even abroad, who place their orders, testify to the increasing popularity of this beautiful horse

Breeders of the Carriage horse who are members of the National Society for the Promotion of Horse Breeding in the Netherlands are entitled to look back with satisfaction on many years of very successful work towards improving this type The Society has already issued more than fifteen volumes of its Stud Books embracing the Netherland Stud Book for Farm and Carriage Horse the "Stud Book for the Coach Horse, and the "Netherland Hackney Stud Book" In the Province of Groningen a very valuable horse has been bred for a very long time, as already stated very closely related to the Oldenburg horse. It is a horse with elegant movements and fine action, while as a draught horse it is, like the Oldenburg horse, suitable for all kinds of agricultural work. A medium sized carriage horse very much of the Groningen type. has long been bred in the Drenthe district where horse breeding has developed to a very high standard In this district some magnificent horses can be seen Among Holland's various breeds of horses, one is of a particularly outstanding quality—the Bovenland horse registered in the Friesian Stud Book Association. typically an Oldenburg horse, particularly suitable for breeding in the grassland districts While the Large White Yorkshire pig is chiefly prominent in the western Provinces of Holland, the improved German Landrace pig is favoured in the eastern part, including the Province of Friesland At the Central Bureau at Arnhem all Herd Books for pig breeding are kept, and since 1926 animals of these two breeds can only be entered if they closely conform with the standard descriptions and points adopted and now controlled through the Central Bureau Until the formation of this, Herd Books were kept in ten different Provinces where conditions were vastly different and Herd Book "points" vastly different and Herd Book "points" varied considerably By forming a Federation of these various Herd Book breeders, pig breeding has taken a turn for the better and the membership now reaches 1 800 actual breeders, locally registered under the

Livestock Breeding in Hungary.

The Live Stock estimate for Hungary states cattle 1 843 000 sheep 1 890 000 p gs 2 527 000 horses 886 000 CATTLE BREEDING by ADORIAN PAVLICSEK Breed Director Szekesfehswar Károly Király Ter 4 Hungary

Magyars who settled in what to day is Hun gary brought with them cattle from the Volga District These developed on the rich Hungarian soil and in the 17th century they obtained fame all over Europe on account of their excellent meat When Turkey's rule over Hungary came to an end the regular cattle exports to foreign countries ceased and the Hungarian live stock deteriorated The Hungarian cattle are at present bred chiefly on the great plainsthe Alfold-and in the north eastern part

The PodoLian Cattle are a breed of robust constitution but slow development kept in herds and therefore accustomed to scanty food They commence grazing in March-April and roam about until winter sets in They are of medium size the cows weighing 400-600 kilos and the oxen 550 620 kilos cattle are chiefly bred for their splendid ability to do hard work They are beautiful to look at lively in their movements very robust and satisfied while neither excessive cold nor extreme heat affect them Their endurance is almost proverbial. The head is long drawn narrow but well proportioned with very long yellow coloured horns longer horns than the bulls and the cows develop The eyes are black and bright neck long and thin The back is straight and long narrowing towards the tail The chest is very deep the shoulders strong well developed colour is a beautiful silvery grey tinge with black spots SIMMENTAL CATTLE This breed was first im ported into Hungary in the eighties from Switzerland and has proved most successful on account of its usefulness as milk and meat producers while splendid for work The most favoured colour in the Simmen talers is a yellowish tinge These cattle readily respond when fattened the daily average increase in weight during a five months period reaching 1-14 kilos while the meat is excellent with a good percentage of fat Only the well to do landowners in Hungary breed Simmental cattle

RED WHITE LANDRACE CATTLE By far the largest number of cattle in Hungary is of the red white Land race breed originating from Germany some 200 years ago Crossed with the Podolian breed the present type slowly evolved but about 1870 Symmental bulls were imported for crossing with a view of increasing body weight and milk propensities and so successful were these crossings that to day the present red white cattle are bred to type and have thus become a native Landrace

The average we ght of the cow is about 500 kilos and the general colour similar to the red white spotted Simmentaler Many a herd where breeding has been carefully conducted has at first glance a general appearance of being Simmentaler The average

Towards the end of the ninth century the | with 36-40% fat The report from the Milk Control Society for the Province of Feiar for the year 1925 26 states that I 548 controlled cows gave an average of 2703 kilos of milk and 388% fat while reports from the Cattle Breeders Society for the Province of Somogy state an average yield of 4885 kilos with 3 85% fat obtained from 62 cows under observation during 1926 27 The oxen at an age of 4.5 years weigh 500 600 kilos and when fattened increase daily from IOI3 kilos

The Bonyhader Cattle breed found in various parts of Hungary is closely related to these red white

Landrace cattle

The Swiss Brown the Montafoner and the Allgauer breeds are also very popular in Hungary

The Hungarian Agricultural Society renders great assistance to the Hungarian livestock breeders through its husbandry and dairy sections Experts lecture to breeders at meetings regularly arranged in connection with the yearly Shows of Pedigree stock held at Budapest and elsewhere while untiringly trying to induce the farmers to improve their breeds by blood infusion through high grade sires
The Hungarian Herd Book Committee is the general representative of the various associations for live stock breeding spread all over the country and act as their governing body In the Hungarian Pedigree Live Stock Register kept and controlled by this Committee, only such entries are made which after careful investigations have been proved worthy as reach ing certain fixed standards of performance for Simmentaler cattle a yield of 3 500 kilos of milk with 125 kilos of butter fat during a lactation period of 305 days for the Grey Brown mountain cattle breed 4 000 kilos of milk and 125 kilos of butter fat while for entries of Landrace cattle it is stipulated that beau tiful exterior of Simmentale cattle character and a minimum of 4 500 kilos of milk and 160 kilos of butter fat during 305 days lactation are indispensable conditions

The various Provincial agricultural associations are most energetic promoters of improved stock breed-ing by means of Exhibitions money Prizes and propaganda for sales of Pedigree animals at home and abroad while they assist in founding and organis ng milk control societies in such district where a sufficiently large number of farmers express their wish in favour of this scheme

During 1927 nine Associations of breeders decided to amalgamate and the outcome of protracted discus sions and meet ngs was the foundation of two large societies-the Society of Pedigree Cattle Breeders Upper Trans Danubia and the Association Breeders of Pedigree Cattle in Lower Trans Another association of cattle breeders Danubia is in the course of formation

All the Hungarian Pedigree Herd Book Societies yearly milk yields vary from 2 000 to 2,400 kilos work under strict control of the Ministry of Agriculture

Sheep Breeding in Hungary.

By PROFESSOR | SCHANDL Budapest

Sheep breeding was always an important branch i of Hungarian livestock breeding, and is still so in the great plains, the Alfold, where especially during spring and autumn grazing is plentiful. The sheep stock is estimated at 1.800 000 sheep. On the sheep breeding agricultural estates flocks as a rule number from 2,000-4 000 sheep, but on many a larger farm up to 20 25 000 are kept Several types of Menno sheep are bred, such as the Racka, the Tzigaja and the Karakul sheep. while here and there one can find Hampshire Down sheep

The present-day Merino sheep in Hungary originated from the Electoral-Negretti types, which have been greatly improved partly through careful selection, partly through infusion of Rambouillet blood It is a medium-sized sheep with straight legs and smooth skin. In some flocks the ewes never grow wool on the face or on the lower part of the leg. while in others they are completely covered The rams have curly horns and weigh 50 60 kilos, the ewes 30-55 kilos The clip averages 2 5-4 kilos for the ewes and 4-5 kilos for the rams, and the quality is

Merino sheep breeding became unprofitable towards the end of the last century and new Rambouillet blood was imported to increase size of animal and length of staple and thereby the wool production. A breed developed from this crossing of good proportions with wool of a fine quality, and was named French worsted sheep Their body is broad and low and com pletely covered with wool The ewes weigh 60-70 kilos, the rams 70-90 sometimes up to 110 120 The clip averages 4-7 kilos for the ewes and relative to the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that the same that t

Danube and the Tisza, and in the Provinces of Bars and Gonior The head and feet have black or reddish spots Breeders-chiefly in the Banat-prefer animals with black faces as this is supposed to signify fattening propensities, while in the Dobrudia spotted faces are more popular as the wool is finer is white sometimes red, brown or black are horned The clip averages 12-3 kilos, but when the Tzigaja sheep is well fed the yield reaches 45 kilos The wool is rather coarse The Tzigala lambs are weaned after 5-6 weeks when the ewes are milked during 150 180 days When crossed with the Racka sheep breed the wool of the first cross is known on the market as Stogos, and when crossed with the Merino it is called 'Polos

The Racka sheep is still to-day a very primitive breed It exists in two different types, ie, the "Alf-older" or sheep on the vast plains and the mountain type Both rams and ewes have brown coloured. corkscrew-shaped horns, reddish brown wool, brown head and feet. The skins of the new born lambs are glossy and black, with tight curls, and in great demand for fur coat making, and the lambs unless destined for breeding, are therefore slaughtered at the age of 2-3 weeks, as when older their skins lose the gloss and colour and the curls are no longer so tight. The rams weigh 50-70 kilos, the ewes 40-50 kilos, and the clip

averages 2-3 kilos

Hungary produces 65 million kilos of wool from which, after washing, 1,800 000 kilos of raw wool are obtained Speaking generally, the Hungarian wool is strong, elastic and soft, with a good length of staple for which qualities it is popular all over the world Mutton is not consumed in the country to any extent. the percentage being 4% only as against 63% beef

dustry in Hungary as the Maygars are great consumers of pork and bacon During the Middle Ages Hungary's enormous oak tree forests afforded food for their pigs, but when regular imports of maize from America towards the end of the 18th century became popular the pig industry developed, and in the 10th century the Industry assumed national importance The Pig stock before the war numbered six and one half million In 1925 the Stock Census showed a little over five and one half ruliion, the decrease, of course being explained by the dismemberment of the with a strain of the European wild boar in its

Pie breeding has always been a flourishing in- | country after the war. This means 27 t pigs per square kilometer and 32 5 pigs per 100 inhabitants

About one hundred years ago the Bakonyer pig and the brick-coloured Szalontaer pig lost their characteristics through crossing with the Servian curly-haired Sumadier pig

About 9400 of all pigs bred in Hungary are of the curly-haird Mangalica pig breed originating in Servis As its qualities fulfil the requirements of the Hungarran breeders and consumers it is now the national breed. It is a curly-coated animal of Asiatic

It is of medium size 75 cm high chest measuring 140 cm body about 90 cm length. The weight at an age of 6 8 weeks is 8 to kilos and at 6 months 26 28 kilos At one year old the weight is 60 kilos and when full grown 110 150 kilos The fattened pig The colour 13 2 years old weighs 150 180 kilos varies greatly but white is most usual with claws and snout black The head is well proportioned with black spots round the eyes the neck broad and muscu lar The ears are upright when the pig is quite young later they drop forward and reach half way down the snout The eyes are bright and lively

The Mangal ca pig is used for breeding on reach ing 12 years although full development is not reached until an age of 2 years Not particularly prolific the litters rarely exceed 5 6 As a rule the sows breed twice in three years The Boar is discarded for breeding purposes on reaching his 4th year the sows when 52-6 The Mangalica pigs are easily fed excellent for fattening and at an age of 5 6 months the weight is generally 90 100 klos. The killing loss is seldom more than 15%. These pigs are splendid feeders young animals increasing I kilo on every 4 kilos of grain when on the pasture while during the winter months 6 kilos of grain are required to produce I kilo increase

Among foreign breeds Yorkshires Lincoln Curly Coated and Berkshire pigs were early imported Later on German pure bred Large Whites and Landrace pigs became very popular in Hungary owing to their rapid fattening propensities and several breeders crossed the Curly Coated Lincolns on the white Mangalica

hoping to improve the fecundity

The Mangalica sows are as a rule kept in herds of 70 100 animals and pairing arranged so that they all breed within a few weeks. The litters remain 681

weeks with the mothers and when weaned put into herds of pigs of the same age on pastures From their fourth week onwards barley is added to their food rations In the autumn after having been on the stubble they are fed on maize bran roots and potatoes. The pigs are either fattened at a very young age or on reaching 12 years At the large pig industrial undertakings where a systematic fattening takes place-such as the Nagytetény Kobanya Gyor Barcs establish ment and similar such the regular supplies of live pigs are from 15 50 000 animals. As a rule near to these establishments there are large maize granaries and corn mills and at some places factories for soap making and drying of pig manure are in the vicinity

The fattening of a Mangalica pig requires 57 months the process commencing with a weight of 70 As a rule after a fattening period of 6 months a weight of 160 180 kilos is reached the daily increase being about 0 6 kilos It is calculated that from 450 600 kilos of food are required to obtain this weight During the first period bran and barley is generally given during the second maize and barley and towards the end of the period only maize. The food mixture is crushed and softened in water during 12 hours The pigs are regularly fed twice daily

The Government are anxious to develop Pedigree pig breeding. Thus to facilitate the importation of Pedigree boars the Ministry of Agriculture often pay a part of the purchasing price Shows are frequently held to encourage exhibitions of prominent Pedigree Association of Hungarian Pedigree animals The Pig Breeders was recently founded while the Society of Breeders of Mangalica Pigs likewise founded quite recently will probably become an institution of national importance

Horse Breeding in Hungary.

By PROFESSOR DR O WELLMANN Chief Veter nary Institute Budapest

The indigenous horses in Hungary were of pure bred Oriental breeds such as Mongolian Tartar Persian etc brought into the country by the invading Magyars more than 1 000 years ago. Among their many vicissitudes the Mongolian invasion was one of the worst and it had a bad influence on horse breeding Not until the end of the 18th century were steps actually taken to improve the breeds Several small Depots for stallions were established and the Govern ment Studs at Mezohegyes and Babolna came into being In 1853 a State-owned Stud was established at Kisber, in 1874 another at Fogares and in 1906 a third Stud at Sutveny In 1914 there were in Hun gary about two million horses and 420 privately owned Studs while the Government owned 3 784 stallions es compared with the 1926 figures-887 746 horses of which 7 84% were light and 21.50 , heavy horses

The Novius Horse is an improved Hungarian breed gradually developed at the Government Stud at Mezohegyes through the influence of the Anglo Norman Stallion Nonius bred at the French Stud at Roziére The Nomus horses are especially suitable on smaller farms being of light build in size of 166 172 cm They are generally dark brown with a Roman nose In 1882 the Nonius Horse Breeders Society was founded but owing to part of Hungary being lost through the war there is a marked decrease in numbers Only about 2 800 mares of this breed are now entered in the Society's Stud Book

The GIDRAN Horse breed is now more than 100 years old of Anglo-Arabian origin taking its name Engl sh Thor after the Arabian Stallion Gidran oughbreds have frequently been used to improve the breed and a light saddle and carriage horse of permanent features is the outcome. The height is about 165 cm

The LIPIZZAN is an Arab breed mixed with Spanish and Italian blood, taking its name from the Italian Lipizzan Stud near Trieste. It has been bred in Hungary during the last 100 years, and the stallions are frequently used to improve the Hungarian mountain horses It is a very popular horse, greatly in vogue as a carriage horse on account of its beautiful action.

Russian Trotters. There are 18 privately owned Studs where the trotter is reared, chiefly for racing purposes.

HEAVY HORSES Hungary has two such breeds, the Pinkafozer and the Muakozer horses, both of which originated in West Hungary many years ago and later on became influenced by Norish Pinzgauer stallions. The Pinkalo horse is a valuable animal, about 164-172 cm. in height, piebald, chestnut, or grey in colour. The Murakoz is a Trans-Danubia horse, 160-170 cm. high, brown, chestnut, or black. of very heavy build, with enormous hoofs, short, muscular neck and remarkably broad hindquarters. Probably this breed once upon a time was mixed with Percheron or Belgian Ardenne blood. In 1026 the "Hungarian Association of Horse Breeders" was founded. It is a very active organisation, with headquarters at 11, Szabádsagter Street. Budapest, to which correspondents interested in Hungary's horse breeding industry can address any enquiry on matters concerning breeds, sales or purchases of horses.

Among Hungarian State-owned Studs the following may be mentioned:

The Government Stud at Mezohegyes, founded in 1785, has evolved the Anglo-Norman Nonius type. the English Half-blood and the Anglo-Arabian Gidran horses. At present these breeds are maintained here with 170 Nonius, 53 Half-blood and 43 Gidran mares. and 15 Pedigree stallions.

The Government-owned Stud at Babolna, where pure-bred and half-bred Arab and Lipizzaner horses are bred. There are at present 100 Arab and 50 Lipizzaner mares, a number of stallions, and many foals.

The Government-owned Stud at Kisber, founded in 1854 for breeding English Thoroughbreds and Half-breds, holds 11 Thoroughbred and 180-Halfbred mares, a large number of foals, and a fairly large number of stallions.

The Government-owned Stud at Sutveny, founded in 1867, and is now managed by the Ministry of Agriculture. English Thoroughbreds and Half-breds are bred here. There are now 24 Thoroughbred and 49 Half-bred mares and 125 Stallions.

In 1927, 228 new State Stallion Depôts were established

Individual breeders may not use their stallions outside their own Stud without a Government licence. The Government support horse breeding in every way, but the active control and management of the industry is in the hands of the Horse Breeding Department of the Ministry of Agriculture.

There are now 10 Breed Societies in Hungary.

Livestock Breeding in Iceland.

The Live Stock estimate for Iceland states cattle 31 000, sheep 567 000 pigs ---, horses 53 000

It is not generally known that live stock breeding in Iceland is receiving the same careful atten tion on the part of the Government and live stock breeders Associations as in many other countries as the general conception concerning this far away ice bound country in the Arctic is not connected with the idea of live stock breeding. It is however the case that this important industry is there receiving great attention. Thus the Icelandic Agricultural Society with headquarters in Lackjargata 14 in the capital Reykjavik is aiming at promoting agriculture in all its various branches to hold and arrange Live Stock Exhibits at which Prize cups and monetary Prizes are given and generally speaking to publish notes on the progress of agriculture in other coun tries with a view of stimulating the interest of the Icelandic farmers The President of the Society is appointed by the Government and two other members by the agricultural population Experts men of good education and practical experience are maintained whose business it is to travel round and advise the farmers The Government assist the Association through an annual subvention of about £10 000 The Associa tion runs experimental Stations at various places such as a Grassland Experiment Station outside Reykjavik an Experiment Station in Rangar vallasysla where fertilisers and the influence of different manures on crops and soils are constantly receiving great attention and where also grass seed variations suitable for Icelandic conditions are being grown Then the Association maintains at four different places of the country centres for the breeding of sheep where the production of mutton wool the question of fecundity etc are constantly under the supervision of special observers. The question of feeding and the cost of food in comparison with the yield of wool and mutton is being particularly looked into and the outcome of these experiments which have now taken place for some time can be seen in the steady im provement of a breed of sheep that in Iceland is of greater national importance than the sheep perhaps is in any other country of the world Every third year the Association arranges local Live Stock Exhibitions where cattle horses and sheep of remarkable and out standing qualities can be seen Special teachers under supervision of the Association are travelling over the country arranging for lectures in the evenings to be held either on the premises of local farmers or in the school houses for the promotion of farmers interests. Among the activities of these associations are likewise experimental fields and experiment grounds where garden plants trees etc form the objects of interest

Numerous local Associations of farmers are to be

The Icelandic horse well known in the ancient Icelandic Saga an animal remarkable for its intelligence light footedness and ability to exist for days on end without food is now pure bred and exported in yearly increasing numbers. There are in all twentythree Associations of breeders of this horse and the Government are paying considerable sums of money towards the improvement of the breed

As regards cattle breeding there are likewise twenty three Associations of breeders who also have lately adopted obligatory milk control. Milk and butter fat yield are controlled food and feeding methods being likewise controlled and these associa tions maintain assistants who travel from farm to farm all over the Island to assist farmers. There are now 201 local associations for the promotion of agri culture and the milk control is being enthusiastically embraced in all of these At Reykjavik a Chemical Laboratory enjoying an annual subvention from the Government is doing much good by analysing agricultural products fertilisers etc at a very low cost to the Icelandic farmers and to look after the general welfare of the live stock in the Island a number of veter mary surgeons paid by the Government are exercis ing suitable control of conditions under which the Icelandic live stock exists At Holar and at Hyanners there are agricultural schools owned and run by the Government at which the farmers sons and daughters can obtain agricultural education the course every year lasting from 15th October to 30th April The Government grants to these schools every year is between £3 000 to £4,000 Then there are four other schools whose aim is to educate the farmer in live stock breeding all of which are overcrowded every winter dairy industry in Iceland is progressing. The cream owing to climatic and local conditions and the large distances between the farms and the dairy, more often than not intersected by icebound rivers and Fjords is as a rule separated from the milk at the farms and at intervals supplied to the daines which are in operation during the sammer months. There are thirteen such daines. At Reykiavik some years ago a "Milk Consumers Association was started on a co-opera tive basis stead by developing and now a commercial undertaking of no mean importance insiruch as it found all over the country called "Bunadarfelag manages the export of gran wool live stock etc... Islands with are really co-operative associations while importing processes flour carile food azor-

Livestock Breeding in Iceland.

me in Iceland is receiving the same careful attention on the part of the Government and live s'ock breeders' Associations as in many other countries, as the general conception concerning this far away. ice bound country in the Arctic is not connected with the idea of live stock breeding. It is, however, the case that this important industry is there receiving great attention Thus the "Icelandic Agricultural Society " with headquarters in Laekjargata 14, in the capital Reykjavik, is aiming at promoting agriculture in all its various branches, to hold and arrange Live Stock Exhibits at which Prize cups and monetary Prizes are given and, generally speaking, to publish notes on the progress of agriculture in other coun tries with a view of stimulating the interest of the Icelandic farmers The President of the Society is appointed by the Government and two other members by the agricultural population Experts, men of good education and practical experience are maintained whose business it is to travel round and advise the farmers The Government assist the Association through an annual subvention of about £10 000 The Associa tion runs experimental Stations at various places such as a Grassland Experiment Station outside Reykjavik, an Experiment Station in Rangarvallasysla where fertilisers and the influence of different manures on crops and soils are constantly receiving great attention, and where also grass seed variations suitable for Icelandic conditions are being grown Then, the Association maintains at four different places of the country centres for the breeding of sheep. where the production of mutton wool, the question of fecundity, etc., are constantly under the supervision of special observers. The question of feeding and the cost of food in comparison with the yield of wool and mutton is being particularly looked into, and the outcome of these experiments which have now taken place for some time can be seen in the steady improvement of a breed of sheep that in Iceland is of greater national importance than the sheep perhaps is in any other country of the world Every third year the Association arranges local Live Stock Exhibitions where cattle horses and sheep of remarkable and outstanding qualities can be seen Special teachers under supervision of the Association are travelling over the country, arranging for lectures in the evenings to be held either on the premises of local farmers, or in the school houses

Numerous local Associations of farmers are to be found all over the country, called 'Bunadarfélag Islends,' w'uch are really co-operative associations

It is not generally known that live stock breed- for the promotion of farmers' interests. Among the in Iceland is receiving the same careful attentions activities of these associations are, likewise, experimental on the part of the Government and live stock fields and experiment grounds where garden plants, ders. Associations as in many other countries, trees etc. form the objects of interest

The Icelandic horse, well known in the ancient Icelandic Sage, an animal remarkable for its intelligence, light footedness and ability to exist for days on end without lood, is now pure bred and exported in yearly increasing numbers. There are in all twenty-three Associations of breeders of this horse and the Government are paying considerable sums of money.

As regards cattle breeding there are likewise twenty three Associations of breeders who also have lately adopted obligatory milk control. Milk and butter fat yield are controlled, food and feeding methods being likewise controlled, and these associations maintain assistants who travel from farm to farm all over the Island to assist farmers. There are now 201 local associations for the promotion of agriculture, and the milk control is being enthusiastically embraced in all of these At Reykjavik a Chemical Laboratory, enjoying an annual subvention from the Government is doing much good by analysing agricultural products, fertilisers etc. at a very low cost to the Icelandic farmers, and to look after the general welfare of the live stock in the Island a number of vetermary surgeons, paid by the Government, are exercising suitable control of conditions under which the Icelandic live stock exists

At Holar and at Hyanners there are agricultural schools, owned and run by the Government at which the farmers' sons and daughters can obtain agricultural education the course every year lasting from 15th October to 30th April The Government grants to these schools every year is between £3 000 to £4 000 Then there are four other schools whose aim is to educate the farmer in live stock breeding all of which are overcrowded every winter dairy industry in Iceland is progressing. The cream owing to climatic and local conditions and the large distances between the farms and the dairy, more often than not intersected by icebound rivers and Fiords is as a rule separated from the milk at the farms and, at intervals supplied to the dairies which are in operation during the summer months. There are thirteen such darries At Reyljavik, some years ago, a 'Milk Consumers' Association' was started on a co-opera-tive basis, steadily developing and now a commercial undertaking of no mean importance inasmuch as it manages the export of grain wool, live stock, etc. while importing grocenes, flour, cattle food, cultural machinery, fertilisers, fencing material, etc., for the benefit of its co-operators, among whom is a great number of farmers.

By a series of well conceived Laws adopted by the people through their representatives in Parliament. no Icelandic mutton can be exported unless subjected The Icelandic horses. to control and classification. prior to being exported, must pass examination by veterinary officers, and only faultless and in every way valuable animals are granted a certificate for export. As a rule, no horses over ten years are exported. The trade in Icelandic wool, quite important, is likewise subjected to classification and control and supervision by experts Thus, no wool is admitted for export unless conforming with stipulations in regard to colour, staple and quality. Fertilisers and cattle food, both articles of great importance in the life conditions of the country, are not permitted entry into the Island unless subjected to the most stringent regulations regarding quality, packing, etc. by Government experts who exercise the necessary control. The killing of animals for meat supply is chiefly in the hands of "Slaturfélag Sudurlands," the largest abattoir in Iceland, based on co-operation between meat producers and consumers. It is operating all the year round. There are other abattoirs for sheep, chiefly for the benefit of the mutton packing Industry, in operation from early August until late in the Autumn. ### Livestock Breeding in Italy.

The Live Stock estimate for Italy states: cattle 6,242,000, sheep 11,791,000, pigs 2,342 000, horses 991,000,

In the matter of accumulation of capital the foundation of all economic progress is labour which indeed, constitutes the fundamental element of all prosperity and riches. Italy can boust an agricultural population which in a remarkable degree contributes to the well being of the country. The truth of this statement may be gathered from the following figures. Of a population of some 28 million, there ate

Casual Land Workers

Farmers with Small Holdings

Working on their own or on Relatives FATTON

Tenant Farmers

Peasant Tenant Farmers who nay their rent Ly working certain days weekly on Landlords Farms

Cow- and Sheep-herds

292 355 Men 89.238 Women 207 764 Men 29.241 Women

At the beginning of the nineteenth century Italy had probably a greater density of population than any other country in Europe -63 inhabitants to the square kilometre as compared with 20 in Spain, 50 in France and 60 in Great Britain, since when the population has enormously increased, so that in the year 1014 the population was 351 millions or 124 inhabitants to the square kilometre. As a result of new political boundaries, Italy's population is now close on 38

In Italy agriculture is more complex in its nature than, perhaps in any other country in Europe, as pas tures, arable land, and live stock breeding are to be found under the most diverse conditions sometimes 2,500 meters high up in the Alps, sometimes in the valleys below the shores of Garda and Maggiore, or in the valley of the Po on the slopes of the Appenines or on the shores of Liguria Herds of cattle, sheep, horses and buffaloes graze over the Tuscan Maremma. the Agro Romano and the Pontine marshes, while on the shores of the Adriatic the most varied cultivation At Barı and Foggia farming is more is to be seen in the style of gardening, while the extensive corn fields of the Apulian 'Tavoliere stretch far away up to the Basilicate in which district malaria drought and land slips put the population on their mettle in the constant fight against these. Sheep grazing in the Abruzzi is a steadily expanding industry, and in the Romagna, Emilia, and the Veneto, cattle breeding and the industrialisation of agriculture-cheese making. wine pressing olive oil production, etc ,-are steadily adding to the prosperity of the countryside Up in the Alps and the Apennines, and down in the valleys and on the plains, an extensive dairy cattle industry is handling large quantities of milk, and in the Val let the farmer obtain at his own door a practical d'Aosta and on the slopes of Etna, olives are grown of obtaining information, leading to improved and turned into an article of great commercial value It will thus be seen how diversified agriculture is in Italy

In 1864 the Italian agricultural production was estimated at three milliard Lire of which one third represented live stock breeding, while in 1885 the figures were five milliards. In 1000 the figures had risen to seven milliards. The area in Italy under crops is estimated at thirteen million hectares, and of this 4 700 000 are devoted to wheat alone Ploughing, always hard work in the very stiff, clavey soil of Italy, is now almost everywhere effected by steam ploughs, a great number of which is owned and run by small agricultural societies Chemical manures are now rapidly coming into vogue all over the country In the year 1900 three million quintals of super phosphates were consumed, in 1913 eleven million Among the various crops in Italy, perhaps the sugar beet is the most remarkable. Introduced by Cayour, the production has steadily increased and now occuties an area of well over 135 000 acres

Agriculturists in the country hold that owing to more extensive and accurate methods of cultivation. the annual average production of hav is steadily increasing, which, in turn, brings with it increased

live stock breeding

These figures are remarkable in as much as Italy is not within the region of pasture land, while her soil is as a rule remarkably dry During the last ten years a noticeable general improvement in the live stock has set in, partly through better selection, partly through crossing and introduction of new stock This can be seen in the case of horses, such now being bred of a far superior quality through Government stallions

Italy's dairy industry, as already stated is expanding Machinery of the most modern construction is exchanged for the old, and in the world's cheese export markets Italian cheese ranks among the best

One of the most active factors in stimulating agricultural pursuits and improvement in live stock breeding is certainly the co-operative movement this respect. Italy is far ahead if compared with many other European countries There are to day 1,123 co-operative societies handling agrarian industries. and 183 societies exclusively interested in dairying and cheese making At the agricultural colleges at Milan Pisa, Portici Bologna, Perugia and Acircale the annual number of students anxious to be theoretically instructed is steadily increasing. One hundred and twenty-five travelling professorships have been founded for the diffusion of instruction in agricultural and live stock matters by means of lecturing, and large field areas for crop experiments and demonstration have been set aside in very many parts of the country to

in his own sphere. The old-earth, hed Italian Arm cultural Federation with lead offices at Piacenza has now well over one thousand sub-associations spread all over the country time of which farmers small or lerge and others can sell their produce and purchase ther do h regisements at prices far below what the industrial would have to pay in the open market. A attention to the remarements of the farmers and stock b erders . and when the new movement for improving the exprome relations between Lindherds and land withers has had time to consolidate it is probable that re h now undereloped land will come under c. .nation Among other modern improvements, one is of particular interest i.e. a system of collective tem see financed by credit establishments with special propertors travelling about to advise the peasants on breeding and crop cultivation Italy is rich in chantable exception owners of much land and these societies 2 - row curbining with a view of renting their land direct to pealant associations

Pezular and well arranged competitions organised by agricultural and breeding societies have greatly contributed to improvement in stock breeding. The Government patronise all important shows and grant money Prizes Until a few years ago the judgment f rmed by rudges at these shows was as a rule formed in reference to beauty of form Now however, there is a zeneral conviction abroad that the performances of these animals mut be tested

As regards horse breeding a show for cart horses is held every year at Cremona and is of great im portance It is organised by the local Chamber of Azriculture in conjunction with the Society of Breeders of Italian Cart Horses with headquarters

In Lombardy and more especially among Cremonese farmers the heavy breed of the Belgian type introduced only some 20 years ago is now in great vozue and horses now bred in this district are not inferior to their Belgian ancestors The exhibitions held at Cremona are always excellently organised and visited by thousands of breeders from all parts of

Italy as well as from abroad

In the spring every year important shows take rlace at Salerno Grosetto Foggia Catania Chilivano ard Meran all of which are financially supported by the Government as being instrumental in furthering the improvement of the breeds in these different districts At Salerno Grosetto and Foggia a half blood horse of leautiful exterior with well set strong legs suitable for both harness and saddle is bred and at Catama in Sicily and at Chilivani in Sardinia very fine horses can be seen A well arranged horse market takes place twice a year in the spring and autumn at Verona and cattle shows are held in all parts of Italy where stock reeding and local breeds are of outstanding ment Among these breeds the Romagnole the Chianine the Maremma the Piemontese and the Sicilian cattle varieties should be mentioned Most important of breed. These cattle originate from the Piemortsena. and have been developed to a very high standard of perfection as beef producers. They are when colour with brown head and neck, of beautiful shape, and reach an average weight of 15-22 cwts. At the cattle fairs held at Cesena every year in September some 800-1 000 young bulls (Torelli) are exhibited, as a rule of good breed and great beauty of form . and a number are sold for crossing other breeds of PodoLan onca.

Regular shows of dary cattle are held in September at Crema where the dark-coloured Alpine cattle can be seen Lately Dutch Friesian cattle have corre mito vorue in Italy for their rulking propens has but accord ing to all reports this experiment has not produced satisfactory result, and it seems likely that they will be substituted for the splendid "Brown Swiss now bred everywhere in Italy In Cremasco these Swiss cattle have reached a high degree of development. The annual Cattle Shows at Crems are held unde

the auspices of the "Crema Herd Book Society fo Dairy Cattle and are splendidly arranged and manager in every respect.

There are no special shows for sheep and pigs but this kind of live stock is always extil ted at the above mentioned horse and cattle shows, while it various districts smaller fairs are held in conjunction with local markets and here sheep as well as pigs are regularly exhibited and sold.

The Milan Show should be mentioned as being of a general character and for the benefit of all the different breeds and races of domestic animals in last and deserves to be visited by all interested in hie

stock breeding

In southern Italy sheep breeding is still the main In north Italy the most common beed is the Bergamasco large bodied animals growing short wool of a coarse quality, 4-3 lbs per annum. As a nile they are shorn twice a year, and their chief character istic is their rich milk and the splendid lambs which new born weigh 48 to 58 kilos and when fattened constitute a great delicacy. These sheep are as a rule fattened off when reaching the are of 2-33 years when the live weight is from 60-65 kilos Every small farm in this part of Italy derives its maintaly from a flock of Bergamasco sheep In the central and south of Italy Menno sheep breeding is the che' hve stock pursuit The Menno sheep breeding is use with the stock pursuit The Menno sheep; under various local names such as Vissna sheep under various local names such as Vissna sheep. Most important of rams and the crosses have proved very successive all all as was in the cattle show at Cesena for the Romagnole regards wool production and many an expert dams that these new type sheep are superior to all other European Merino sheep. Another Merino strain, the Sopravissana, is also remarkable for its beautiful shape and large size, fine wool and early development, and at sheep shows during the last few years this breed has attracted great attention from live stock improvers. In the Tavoliere di Puglis large flocks of sheep are wintered but taken up to the mountain pastures as early as weather permits, and here in the Abruzzo the sheep quickly develop on the beautiful and nourishing herbage. This is a most interesting sheep grazing district, inter-communicating for miles and miles, pasture leading into pasture through mountain passes known only to the shepherds, the sheep does and the sheep themselves.

On the Roman Campagna and in the Tuscan marshes the Sopravissana sheep graze during the greater part of the winter and, like the Puglia sheep. are taken on the pastures in the Abruzzo early in the spring

Another sheep, very popular with the smaller farmers, is the Roman sheep, also called Lecce, as owing to its thriftiness, small size but wonderful mulk producing capacity even the poorest cottager can afford next to nothing, but its wool is of the coarsest quality. From these Roman sheep some other breeds have originated, such as the Sardinian and the Sicilian sheen. likewise small-sized but rich in milk production,

With a view of improving the native pig races. Berkshires and Tamworths have been imported from time to time, however, without finding adherents; but Large Black and Large White Yorkshire boars are reported as being wonderful improvers whenever utilised in crossing. They are in vogue with the larger pig breeders, but whether the habit to cross on the crosses leads to any result is very questionable. Probably the best development of the Italian indigenous pig races is on lines of careful selection of the very best among these, with in-breeding carried on to a certain point. There are several distinct types in Italy such as the Gangliano pig, also called Casertana. one of the best indigenous pig breeds in southern Europe, of great fecundity, and meat delicious in flavour and taste. These pigs fatten very easily. In colour they are slate grey, and the body is covered by a rich growth of hair. Other breeds are the Chiamina, the Piedmontese and the Romagnola pigs, certainly all to keep one or two. It seems to be able to exist on valuable and capable of considerable improvement.

Livestock Breeding in Jugo-Slavia.

The last Live Stock Census in the Serb Croat Storene Kingdom estimates the sheep flocks to number 7940 000 the pig stock at 2810 000, the cattle at 3710 000 head and the number of horses slightly over 1200 000. The present Jugo Slav country, resulting from the war through the fusion of the kingdoms of Serbia and Montenegro with the Jugo Slav portion under the Austro Hungarian Crown in pre war days now totals about 87 000 square miles in area with a population of about thirteen million people and is constituted as follows

Jugo Slavia is in many ways and respects a remarkable country where political activities and agricultural pursuits are the main occupations of the people. There is not too much love lost between the various races and personal disputes are more often than not settled outside the Law Courts in a forcible manner different nationalities now joined together under one crown are highly intelligent very industrious and passionately devoted to farming and stock breeding and Jugo Slavia is forging ahead as a live stock breeding country Serbia is one of the most fertile countries in Europe and in spite of very primitive methods of cultivation magnificent crops are constantly produced wheat and Indian corn being the principal grains Splendid fruit is cultivated and the plum orchards an interesting feature yield enormous quantities of fruit from which dried plums and the world known plum brandy (slivitza) are made Tobacco is exten sively cultivated and fairly good qualities are marketed Hemp is another article of importance The pastures are excellent abundant and capable of maintaining much larger numbers of cattle sheep pigs and goats than the present stock Most of the agricultural land is owned by small peasant proprietors all land being freehold Agricultural buildings are as a rule well kept and of a pleasant appearance. The Serbs still remain to day in main a pastoral people devoted to agricultural pursuits and live stock breeding intelligent hard working painstaking law abiding and very proud of their country and history

Formerly a Crown land under Austra Hungary Croatia Slavonia is a mountainous and very hilly country The Rivers Drave and Save cross the country with large level plains on either side of very fertile soil where large numbers of live stock are maintained Speaking generally the whole country is very fertile where excellent wine is produced although live stock raising is the main occupation of the inhabitants. Manufacturing industries are carried on in a small way Perhaps the chief income from farming is pig fattening in the oak forests of Slavonia Most interesting among the various portions of the present day Jugo Slavia Bosnia should be specially mentioned It is a well watered country with a great number of elevated valleys of peculiar fertility where live stock seems to thrive remarkably well reaching size and developing more rapidly than perhaps is the case in other parts of the country The country is splendidly watered as many very considerable rivers flow northwards joining the Save Probably almost half of the surface of Bosnia is covered by splendid forests where all kinds of game abound from which the fur trade obtains large contributions of fine skins The area under cultivation is not very considerable but the pastures in the fertile valleys are very valuable Sheep rearing and pig fattening are the chief occupations of the farmers but excellent cattle are bred prominent for their fattening propensities as well as considerable milk yield Like the other parts of the country, Bosnia is a prominent wine producer, excellent grapes being grown in many parts of the district During the winter the temperature is very cold even severe in parts while the summer is warm and pleasant Among the various races now constituting Jugo Slavia the Bosmans are the most interesting still in the main oriental in dress mentality and outlook The number of gypsies roaming about is considerable Bosnia in mediaeval days for a short time existed as a Slavonic kingdom the country was conquered by the Turks in 1463 since when numberless bloody insurrections have occurred The Bosnian is a born live stock breeder with a keen eye for this occupation and his love of beautiful horses and well developed domestic animals is remarkable. The chief export articles are grain live stock and animal products. The chief town is Sarayevo (Bosna Serai) and the other important towns are Tuzla Travnik and Bielina That Jugo Slavia has made material progress is indicated in many directions The town of Belgrade before the war more or less a straggling town has trebled its population railway construction is now actually carried on war debts have been funded and production is increasing the maize harvest in 1927 reaching nearly 42 million tons and the wheat crop 22 million while other cereals have increased by 50% to 90% in yield As stated Jugo Slavia is forging ahead and will some day be a large contributor in grain live stock and other agricultural products as the country is now with its area of 250 000 sq kilometres the largest of all the Central European and Balkan States with the exception of Roumania To day the country is racially much more compact than the other Succession States Poland and Czecho Slovakia as the Slavs now form an absolute majority constituting from 82% to 97% of the population in every part of the country It is entirely a State of peasants and these dominate the Skupshtina and with the exception of the three towns-Zagreb Belgrade and Subotica where the population is well over 100 000 and very mixed—the Slavs are everywhere in a ruling majority

Nearly 90°, of the population are agriculturists. Issue, by tilling the land and rearing line stock while 82°, of Juco Slava's export trade is made up of live stock line stock products and aericultural produce. When the country is better developed in resard to railway communications. Jugo Slavia may become one of the main factors in Central European politics. It is to be hoped that the constant struggle always fought on purely racial lines between the Croats the Slovenes and the Serbis through their political peasant parties may cease as the matter for dispute is more or less.

only a question of procedure and those who have some inside knowledge of the political questions agree that their really are fewer difficulties to be settled than Germany and Italy had and did settle during the last century. Apart from these political animosities there is perhaps constant fear of Italy but this has to a certain degree contributed to draw the Croats sloser to the Slovenes and the Serbs and when the country and the people become more knit together and the various races cease to distrust each other the prosperity of this rich and fertile country will rapidly increase

Livestock Breeding in Latvia.

The Live Stock in Latvia comprises about 920 000 head of cattle 1 127 500 sheep 534 600 pigs and 360 800 horses

The thrifty little Latvian country is remarkable | for the co-operative spirit which seems to have taken hold of all and sundry The visitor to Latvia anxious to get in touch with the individual live stock breeder is invariably informed that he can best do so through the society to which he belongs and it is through one or other of these many co-operative societies of which Latvia abounds that business transactions with the live stock breeder are carried out. One of the small countries in the world comprising only 25 000 square miles it has a relatively large population nearly 2 million inhabitants and thus is densely popu lated with more than 100 people to the square mile As is the case with Denmark a disproportionately large percentage of the population 400 000 is crowded in the capital Riga

The basin formed by the Daugava River round for breeders and far such as the following following the following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following following follo

The political system is a single chamber Assembly consisting of 100 members elected by universal adult suffrage. Next to agriculture in importance the fisheries yield a very substantial income

In the following list of co operative societies the diversity of purpose of these will be gathered and as a stock raising country Latvia will undoubtedly be able to influence the live stock industry in Russia when normal conditions once more obtain in that countries.

The banking system is highly developed and the thrifty live stock breeder can always count on financial assistance when required

Agricultural education is foremost on the programme of the Government and it will be seen that the country is well served in the direction of schools for breeders and farmers. The young Latinan farmer is wide awake to the necessity of bringing his land up to the highest possible production and convinced that the mens to attain this end is live stock breeding. The many hundreds of these young men who vearly attend the agricultural schools will in their time become breeders of good live stock and propasands among them my lead to an outlet for breeders anxious export their animals.

The average yearly yield of milk and butter-fat per cow is to be seen from the following table : Butter-fat kg

Milk kz. Berer-fat Percentare. Year. 1923 7 199 3 47% 1024 2006 3 53 . 7 200 3 58%

The final respective figures for 1927 are not yet available, but a fair increase of the average yield is noticed in all available Reports so far accounted for,

The average yield of butter-fat per cow of the best herds was . in the year 1924—120 8 kg ; in 1925— 131 7 kg and in 1925-164 kg. The highest butterfat records obtained by Lithuanian cows in the years 1921, 1925 and 1926 were 169.2 kg, 1991 kg and 2702 kg

Sheep are reared in Lithuania chiefly for meat production The prevailing type is the native Land-race sheep capable of existing on scant food. Of foreign breeds the Shropshire is to be noted Recently the Lithuman Sheep Breeders' Association" was formed with the purpose of improving the existing stock. The breeds of pigs reared in Lithuania may be and Middle White Yorkshires and Large Blacks. Pedigree stock of these breeds is imported from abroad, chiefly from England and Sweden, both for pure breeding and for crossing with the indigenous stock. During the year 1927 nearly 300 head of pies were admitted to the Herd Book of the "Lithuanian Pig Breeders' Society" which comprises the Large and Middle White Yorkshire breeds and the Large Blacks.

By means of subventions granted by the Ministry of Agriculture to farmers for acquiring Pedigree pigs. and by distributing Prizes, it is hoped to encourage the rearing of bacon pigs for export.

The Ministry of Agriculture in general is paying great attention to livestock raising and is encouraging this industry by various means, such as granting subsidies to importers of Pedigree stock, placing Pedigree brestock at the disposal of farmers; employing livestock breeding instructors, paving subventions to cooperative dairies, etc. Moreover, the Veterinary Department of the Ministry of Agriculture is carrying on very valuable work, such as campaigns against divided into three groups-Land-race, Crossbreds and infectious diseases, supervision of slaushter houses Pure-breds The last group comprises chiefly Large 1 and control of meat and meat products.

Livestock Breeding in Luxembourg.

stock at 83 000 head, and pigs about 91,000, horses at about 17,200 and sheep 3 650 It will thus be seen that the live stock breeding industry is very small, but so is the country, although from the agricultural point of view well developed. Splendid horses are bred, chiefly of the Ardenne type, and the cattle are all of the Belgian breeds. This miniature Grand Duchy is an exceedingly prosperous country, hemmed in by other countries without any outlet to the sea In ancient times Luxembourg was one of the greatest strongholds in Europe as the town is situated in a narrow valles on a rocky plateau, descending precipitously on three sides into the narrow valley traversed by three rivers, through which position an enemy could be held at bay The total area is about 1,025 square miles of which a portion includes the region of the Ardennes, Pastures and farming lands are watered through the river Moselle National riches are derived from the iron ore deposit through which an iron and steel industry of some considerable importance has always enjoyed the reputation of being a very good agriculturist and horse breeder, and in the middle ages European War Lords loved to draw their horse material from this country The value of the land is very high owing to its great fertility and the high yield in percentage derived from almost every crop In the Middle Ages when Luxembourg was a monarchy, it welded considerable sway over the destinies of Europe

The Live Stock Census estimates the cattle | but as a result of the Peace of the Pyrentes in 1659 when a considerable portion of the country had to be ceded to France the Duchy was compelled to adopt the name of French Luxembourg Shortly afterwards, in 1713, Luxembourg came under Austrian rule and remained as such until 1795 when it came under French rule The present Grand Duchy was created through joint action of the great Powers in 1867

Live stock breeding is generally conducted in connection with dairying The number of co-operative dairies in the Grand Duchy is now 147, the members of which are all cattle breeders

With a view of disseminating instruction concerning improved stock breeding the Government maintain an Agricultural Institution at Ettelbruck where likewise an Experimental Station is maintained for live stock breeding. Among the most noteworthy of these co operative dames are

Livestock Breeding in Malta.

The latest Live Stock estimate states 6 200 head of cattle, 18 500 sheep 6,500 pigs and 3 200 horses island only contains 118 square miles The soil is very fertile, and the quality of the stock bred herecattle horses sheep and pigs-is very good The main island Malta is the chief centre for stock breeding but live stock is also bred on a number of the smaller islands belonging to the Maltese Group-Gozo. Comino etc Malta is an interesting illustration of how the soil can be improved and made extremely fertile through the industry of the people Naturally it is thin and very scanty, but thanks to the continuous energy displayed by the island farmers through which the surface rock is constantly powdered up, the whole surface of the island has, in this manner, been brought into remarkable productivity. The agricultural crops consist of fruit, barley and cotton...

the year 1565 the Turks overwhelmed the country when, however, thanks to the heroic fortitude of the pig stock

From the live stock breeding point of view Malta | inhabitants the invaders were turned off Especially is, of course, a very insignificant territory, as the during the sixteenth century when the Mediterranean Sea was the centre of struggles between the Cross and the Crescent, Malta came into prominence through her Knights Resulting from Napoleon's invasion of the island in 1798 when he forcibly drove out the Order of the Knights the islanders applied to the British Crown for protection, and as England, ever since the time of Queen Anne had desired to establish a Base for her Mediterranean fleet at the island protection was guaranteed since when undisturbed prosperity has ruled in this little self-contained land

The cattle in Malta are of the Piemontese type Through inbreeding their natural propensities for easy fattening have been developed and undoubtedly a further improvement could be brought about through The island has passed through many vicessitudes a gradual grading up process. The sheep are mostly resulting from its geographical position. Thus in of the Gentile de Puglia breed, and fairly good There is a great need of fresh blood infusion in the

Livestock Breeding in Norway.

By J BAASHUUS JESSEN Government Live Stock Officer Oslo (Statens Stambokskontor)

The last Live Stock Census (1927) estimates the agricultural live stock of the country at 1 210 000 head of cattle 300 000 pigs 1 610 000 sheep and 183 000 horses

The sanitary conditions at the farms speaking generally are satisfactory

Diseases do not exist

Foot and mouth disease is entirely absent

CATILE Norway is a land where the natural pastures are always in a state of excellence. In many places owing to insufficient pastures in the immediate vicinity of farms and homesteads the live stock early in the spring or summer moves up to the mountains and its lept there over the summer and the milk products butter and cheese gained day after day are stored and at the commencement of the autumn when the stock is taken down to the villages in the valleys transported to the towns for sale. Norway has several indigenous breeds of prominent;

qualities such as the red Polls on the Eastland side and the Dole cattle and the red Tronder cattle all of which are double purpose breeds inasmuch as they are easily fattened after lactation periods besides being good milkers. Whether these indigenous breeds are still quite pure is impossible to say as possibly during the course of time foreign blood may have been added

THE TELEMARK CATTLE one of the most ancient breeds in the Telemark county valleys from where it has spread all over the country is prominent. Now bred absolutely pure much care being devoted to selec tion the yield has been considerably increased during the last ten years According to cow testing state ments 5 100 lbs production with 3 7 % butterfat was the average some seven-eight years ago while the average from a number of cows under control in care of six control Associations recently showed 10 000 lbs milk with 3 41% butter fat but it is not uncommon here and there to find cows of this breed producing 13 000 or more lbs milk with a butter fat percentage of 356 The long and well curved horns peculiar to this breed give the Telemark cattle a picturesque appearance Here and there polled strains may be found but on the whole the breed is characterised by its very big horns The colour is red with a broad line along the spine the belly white or brindled These cattle have a certain likeness with the Longhorn cattle in England Few breeds have been subject to such intensified in breed ng as is the case with the Telemark cattle owing to the fact that for many years the various local breed Associations only kept one bull and owing to the distance between the villages and the severe winters one bull had thus to be utilised over and over again on his own progeny The recently founded Telemark Herd Book Association issued its first Herd Book in 10.6

THE RED POLLED CATTLE emanate from the Akers heaver than the Telemark cattle cows weighing from 880 to 990 lbs. As regards yield of milk and butter fat the performance is very like the Telemarks. Gen erally speaking the red polls are not grazing in the mountains like the Telemarks and therefore perhaps are producing heavier carcases when slaughtered Volume 1 of the Red Polled Cattle Breeders. Association was recently published containing entries of 1 107 bulls and 1 770 cows

THE DOLE CATTLE are chiefly bred in the Gud brandsaa valley dark brown shifting into black colour a somewhat heavier breed and vielding an excellent carcase The annual milk production varies from 4 000 to 4 500 lbs with 4% butter fat

The TRONDER CATTLE are chiefly found round the Trondhjem Fiords and probably the breed con tains admixtures of Scottish and Swedish Ayrshire blood Indeed it is often stated in Norway that the Tronder cattle of the present day are closely related to the Ayrshire cattle in those countries owing to the blood infusion of imported bulls The annual milk yield is round about 5000 lbs with 37% butter fat The average live weight is 790 lbs for cows and from 1650 to 1560 lbs for bulls

THE RORGS CATTLE a very ancient breed widely spread over the country but thefly found in the north and probably related to a similar looking cattle breed in Sweden and Finland is also remarkable for good per formances and outstanding beef propensities. The colour of these cattle varies from sometimes complete white with black ears and muzzle to deep black with a white broad line along the spine and totally white belly. This breed is mostly hornless although horned individuals may be seen. The live weight for cows is on an average 660 lbs and the average m lk yield from 4 000 to 4 500 lbs with 3 8% butter fat.

THE WESTLAND CATTLE is a breed somewhat undefined in appearance and general qualities as local conditions and other factors seem to have moulded them into a multitude of special varieties. The Depart ment of Agriculture is however now anxious to limit the number of these varieties with a view of creating a more uniform breed type. As a rule these cattle are red coloured sometimes brindled and almost without exception hornless. The annual milk production is estimated at 5 500 lbs with a butter fat percentage of 45 Many cows however are reported yielding 8 800 to 0 000 lbs with a butter fat percentage of 5 or even more Breeders of these cattle have recently formed an Association known as The Lyngdal and Westland Red Polled Cattle Breeders Association and for the time being 1,400 bulls and 500 cows are registered. Whether the cattle breed known as the

Westland Fiord Cattle to be found in the counties of More Sogen and Hordaland are descendants of the Westland cattle or not it is difficult to say although it is often stated to be the case. These last mentioned cattle however are horned and in some places deep black in others entirely red In the Herd Book recently published by the Association of Breeders of this type 750 bulls are registered

Pics Although pork is widely consumed in Norway and the pig a cherished animal pig breeding does not seem to have developed to such a degree as cattle breeding The ancient Landrace pig, slate grey in colour with upright ears seems to slowly disappear giving way to a new type of Landrace pig with the ears drooping and generally in appearance reminding of the Landrace types now pure bred in Sweden Denmark and Germany The stock of this pig is however very uneven as may be seen if one travels over the country but great efforts are certainly being made by the Department of Agriculture as well as by the various breed associations to encourage more uniformity in breeding. It is an excellent type which undoubtedly may be developed into a valuable national pig bably through selection and great attention to district breeding the size may be somewhat increased and more rounded and fuller hams developed The Landrace nig is remarkable for its b g litters and general fecundity and recent series of experiments have fully proved that the pig is capable of performances comparable with those of the Large White Middle White and Berkshire pigs

Various English breeds are also to be found in certain parts of Norway originally imported chiefly Tarrworth the Middle and Large White Yorkshires The Large Whites are much liked and seem to prove suitable for the Norwegian climate and conditions

It is probably correct to state that SHEEP among the various domestic animals in Norway the sheep is one of the greatest outstanding national value as it can utilise the grazing in the mountains as no other animal in Norway can do Thus it is explained that the sheep stock all over the mountainous parts of Norway is increasing while in districts where arable land is utilised for dairy cattle and pig breed ng the stock seems to be decreasing from year to year ing the long winters when snow and ice cover the pastures the sheep have to be kept in stable and for this reason it is often the rule to kill off whole flocks and of great endurance. The Government r towards the end of the autumn causing an unnatural overstocking of the mutton market in the capital and elsewhere. The indigenous type of sheep that has existed in Norway since time immemorial is a valuable breed cherished by the peasants all over the country and is chiefly remarkable through its appearance-a stumpy tail very large horns chiefly in the rams As this breed is exceedingly hardy able to exist on the scantiest of food it is recognised that through selection of rams to be mated with ewes of outstanding quality the breed can be very much improved and probably meet an export demand from countries where local and natural conditions are similar to Norway's These sheep climb the mountains like goats consuming almost anything from the bank of trees to heather and exist and yield mutton wool and milk on food that seems almost valueness fertility is remarkably developed twins being rather the rule than the exception The percentage of new born lambs dying is less than 0 to While obviously such conditions of I fe do no tend to high meat and wool production the cost of upkeep on the other hand is so low as to be almost insignificant and therefore those attempts now being made in various parts of the country to improve the breed through crossing with imported strains may not be the very best policy

Among imported breeds now found in many parts of Norway the Cheviots are most commonly met with and in many districts this breed has impressed its salient features on the local stock of sheep. Along the coast of Norway Black faced sheep are every where to be seen while in the Eastland districts the Oxford Down sheep seems to be much in favour In the Rogaland county the Border L-icesters and Leicesters are much liked and have been utilised for the improvement of the Norwegian Ryggia and

Dala' native breeds in the Hordaland County These types of Norwegian sheep reach a life weight of from 140 to 246 lbs for the rams and 05 to 180 lbs for the ewes In the North Trondelag county the local breeds seemed to have been crossed by Merino rams as one can distinctly trace features of that breed but how and when such crossing took place is unknown

Sheep Dogs Then in Norway a remarkable type of sheepdog is bred generally known under the name of Buhund whose instincts as a flock shepherd is fully comparable with the sheep dogs of the best strains in other countries. It is maintained that this dog has either inherited its qualities from the Icelandic dog or from time to time has been crossed by that type This dog is now bred pure and accorded its own section in the Norwegian Kennel Club through which he is being shown every year. The height of the dog at the withers varies from 10 in to 18 in colour black fawn red and grev

The Norwegian so called Gudbrandsdal horse-or Eastland horse of a brown sometimes bay or black colour is a remarkable animal intelli gent elegant in appearance and movement easily fe

nising the inherent qualities of this horse, maintain large breeding establishments in various parts of the country, supported by local breed associations

The Westland horse, sometimes known as the 'Frord' horse, is chiefly bred in the western or coastland districts of Norway, in the valleys of Rocaland and surrounding counties, and is said to be the present day's survival of the primeral horse of Norway The general appearance is rather striking owing to a stripe, beginning over the chest stretching over the vertebral column and ending at the tail. The height (tape measure) varies from 55 in to 62 in horse is much preferred by farmers to any other horse. and breeders need never wait long for epportunities to sell their animals to small holders, market gardeners milk merchants and all such people who require cheaph-fed quick moving hands little horses. Sweden and Denmark import certain numbers, and even such far-away situated countries as the Balkan states now and then import stallions. So far back as the year 1861 even England imported these horses as was stated in The Field in that year (page 431) For sure-footedness and lightness few horses in the world can compare with these Fjord" horses, and in the days before the motor car made its appearance everywhere many thousands of them every year caused tourists in Norway to marvel at their ability to exist on scanty food while constantly pulling the mountain carriages, so peculiar to Nor- was formed with a view of improving this type wegian conditions, from morning to evening, almost without resting. This horse is generally pure bred. very rarely crossed with other breeds. Comparatively high prices are paid in Norway for prominent stallions of this breed, from £250 to £500 being generally paid for animals of outstanding qualities. The Norwegian Stud Book Association was founded in the year 1002 by breeders of the Eastland horse, and in 1910 a Stud Book Association to protect the "Fjord" horse was inaugurated These Stud Books are now kept at the Department of Agriculture, Oslo, under the supervision of a Director of Accoulture

In the neighbourhood of Oslo, the capital the breeding of light harness and saddle horses including remounts for the army is carried on under supervision of the 'Norway Association of Breeders of the Light Horse' "The Norwegian Horse Race Association" with headquarters at Oslo, with which a number of local Clubs spread all over the country is affiliated, is doing much to improve the horse breeding industry in Norway and the breeding of a light horse suitable for Norwegian requirements These light horses are probably the descendants of Hanoveranian light horses Crossing has, of course, also taken place, English Hackney stallions having been used When the Norwegian Parliament sanctioned the Totalisator, an important impetus was given to the breeding of light horses, and the Norwegian officers riding club

Livestock Breeding in Poland.

By PROFESSOR JAN DE ROSTAFINSKI, Director, Institute of Animal Husbandry, Warsaw

Live Stock in Poland suffered heavily during the war, in numbers as well as in quality

The improvement of our breeds is in the hands of individual breeders and breeders Associations. Encouragement and assistance is rendered by the Government as well as by Provincial authorities. Live stock matters are under the control of the Department of Animal Husbandry Ministry of Agriculture. The following table shows Polands Live Stock.

The following lable shows Polatid's Live Dlock

According to estimates for 1926, pigs increased by 500,000 and cattle by 150,000

HORES The present native breed ongunated through crossbreeding the native, rather small-bodied horse with Thoroughbred stallions or with Oriental "Anglo Arabs" The Polish horse seems to be remarkably edanted to local conditions.

The breeding of pure Arab horses, prior to the War centered in the Russian Provinces of Volhynia, Podolia and Ukraine, is now limited to Polish territory—East Galicia—and is partly a Government undertaking, partly in private hands

At the Polish Government Stud for Arab horses at Janow 18 Arab mares are kept The Polish Stud Book for Arab horses contains entries of 107 mares marked as first class animals, and 300 mares as second class There are altocether some 50 Arab stallions

The breeding of Thoroughbred horses has always been popular in Poland According to the Polish Ministry of Agriculture, there are now in Poland 642 Thoroughbred mares, 516 stallions over three years and 381 under 3 years, or a total of 1,520 head registered

Poland exports many horses especially a local type called "Merzynek," a strong and enduring pony, much in demand in France and Belgrum. Polish exports of horses amounted in 1925 to some 33 000, and during the first 6 months of 1926 to 32,500 A number of this total represented cavalry remounts During 1926 one of the neighbouring States covered its entire requirements of cavalry remounts by import of Polish horses.

The horse bred in Pozen is the object of organized betterling activities. It is a cross between the Thoroughbred and the East-Prussian horse. In the northesistern part of the Province, the Kujawy district, the pre-valling breeds are Oldenhurg and Hannover which types are also found elsewhere.

Pomerania is not important as regards horse breeding The prevailing type here is a cross of East-Prissian and Belgian horses, a heavy type much liked on account of clayey soil in a large part of the Province Grazing conditions in Pomerania are better than in

The districts along the Vistula River, such as Garwolin, Warsaw, Lowicz, Kutno, Wocawek, favour the breeding of horses of heavier types and there is no permanent type in these sections. West European blood is often in evidence. The Eastern districts, especially round Siedlee, breed only small native horses. The southern districts, more especially the districts around Kielee, Sandomierz and Lublin, excel in the breeding of Thoroughbreds of heavier types. In these sections and in the adjoining Vollymai there are also many horses of crossed Thoroughbred and Oriental blood, or Orientals crossed on the native Breed, often with prevalence of Oriental blood. The Province of Lublin possesses horses crossed with Thoroughbreds.

The western section, up to San River, has been and Oriental horses. The eastern section, and the adjoining parts of Volhynia and Podolia possess an old local breed known as "Komk' in the mountainous part of the country known as "Hucul' horse, a small but hardy strain

In Silesia the prevailing type of horse is similar to that found in Pozen, sometimes with evidence of Belgian blood

The Vilna district, before the war under the influence of Russian breeding methods, has a horse stock bred from a native horse called "Zmudzki," often mixed with Belgian or Russian stallions

In the central section of Polesie indigenous horses seem to prevail

The southern section, Volhyma favours Thoroughbreds

Breed stallions are selected to correspond with the local taste. The number of stallion depôts is arranged according to the development of breeding in each district, such depôts being more numerous where breeding activities are more developed and vice-versa. The total number of breed stallions in CATTLE Breeding of cattle in Poland is not differentiated as to purpose. It is principally aimed at developing the dairy types, but dual purpose features are also desired Breeding of pure-bred beef cattle is almost unknown. In developing dairy characteristics, attention is chiefly paid to high butter fat content.

Poland has two National breeds of cattle—the Lowland Black-White cattle identical with the Holstein-Friesian breed, and the Red Polsh cattle, a native breed highly valued by the rural population. Besides these two breeds, several English breeds are reared. Such activities, however, are isolated, and not encouraged by the Government or agricultural Associations which strive for breeding only the two breeds already mentioned. A notable exception are the Simmentaler cattle, chieff bred in the Carpathians.

Since 1921 a very active educational campaign is being carried on by means of lectures and exhibitions with money Prizes, partly financed by local agricultural Associations. The results of these activities are evident in better control of animal diseases, in improved methods in breeding and stock feeding and increased milk production. Progress is also observed in the organization of the various breel Associations all of which co-operate and forming larges Federations. There are numerous Milk Control Societies which aim at increasing milk and butterfit production through scientific breeding by selection of bulls.

The work of these organizations is illustrated by the following Control Society statistics:

Province		Number of Societies,	Number of Cows Registered
In Pomerania .		19	6,700
"Pozen "Little Poland	::	8 11	4,400 1,872
"Central Province "Upper Silesia		70 12	23,000 4,500
" Opper Suesia	•••	• ••	4,700

A steady increase in the number of societies of the above kind is reported. There is also considerable development of co-operative darnes which now pay for the milk on the basis of butter fat content. Built depots are everywhere available even for the small farmer with only one or two cows; and the services of pure-bred dairy builts from dams with high production records are now generally appreciated by farmers.

The prevailing breeding policy aims principally at development of dairy qualities. In the Provinces of Pozen and Pomerania, cattle of a type approaching the standard of beet cattle are bred.

	20021	Fat Percentage,
In Central Province . Province of Cracow	2,562 kg 2,350	3 7% 3 8%

The Ministry of Agriculture and the large association of breeders aim at preserving this breed in all its originality, cross-breeding being avoided. Selective breeding is at present making considerable progress Cattle are graded up by breeding and selected on the bass of milk and butterfat production.

Breeders in the Province of Pozen while under Yorkshire Boars were then import German administration specialised in supplying beef and now the Large White has been at to Berlin, and accordingly bred from heavy Oldenburg bulls. In the Province of Pomerania where East-fecundity and grazing propensities, Friesian cattle were bred, beef propensities were desired in combination with milk production. This was possible owing to excellent pastures in this Province. The Central Province—formerly Russian Poland—breed a large, heavily boned strain, somewhat deficient in flesh. The bulls were imported from Friesland. Speaking generally, all these features have been maintained, except that in the Province of Pozen efforts are made to unprove the darry qualities of local strains.

In Poland there are many very large estates where live stock breeding is conducted by experts, and these estates as a rule act as breed stations for the surrounding districts, a practice that is beneficient to smaller breeders.

For experimental breeding a Station has been inaugurated by the State Agricultural Institute (Panstwowy Instytut Naukowy Gospodarstwa wiejskiego) at Pulawy.

Breeding of beef cattle is sufficient to cover domestic requirements while a considerable number of head is exported to Austria, Czechoslovakia and Germany.

Pics. Pig breeding in Poland aims at fat pork A distinctly fat type of pig is found in the north-eastern districts where transportation facilities are scant. In the southern and eastern districts there is no established breeding policy, nor are there any dominant types

The Central Province favour the Large White Yorkshire pig, while in the Western Provinces, besides this breed, there is a crossbred type of pig called

" Zulawska

Considerable interest in the bacon type of pigs has recently been aroused by successful experiments in bacon production for the British market. At present there are four bacon factories in Poland, while two more are in the course of construction. Interest in special bacon breeds, such as Tamworth or Yorkshire, has not yet greatly developed but seems to be comming.

General interest in the pig industry is increasing, owing to a steady demand for live pigs in Czecho-slovakia and Austria.

Farms where pigs are bred to any considerable extent are stated to be overwhelmed with requests for Stud boars, but the existing supply of breed animals in Poland is inadequate to cover any larger demand.

Pig breeding forty years ago aimed at improving the native stock by crossing it with the Middle White Yorkshire Boars were then imported from England, and now the Large White has been adopted as a Target and a series of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the stock of the st

Experimental pig breeding is carried on with the native long-snouted Polish Landrace pig at the Agricultural Institute at Pulawy. Under the auspices of the Agricultural High School at Warsaw investigations in pig breeding are conducted on privately owned estates The Central Agricultural Association at Warsaw established during the autumn of 1026 a breeding station on a Stateowned farm at Koscielec, funds having been provided by the Government

The increasing export trade in live pigs and recent improvements in the grading of Polish bacon seem to testify that improved breeding methods have produced more satisfactory results

There are no national associations of pig breeders

in Poland, but the Central Agricultural Association at Warsaw is devoting attention to pig breeding, while many local farmers' associations and branches of agricultural organizations in various districts likewise show greater interest for this industry, During the war the quality of Poland's pig stock deteriorated as a result of reckless slaughter, but subsequently the farmers improved it by cross-breeding SHEEP. In the eastern, central and southern Provinces of Poland the prevailing breed of sheep is the indigenous Central-European type, now bred in two distinctly different species the "Swinarka" sheep, a long-woolled sheep, white, brown, or black coloured; a good milker The districts in which sheep are milked for cheese making are the Carpathians, Kielce, Siedlice and Vilna As a rule, sheep bred for this purpose grow long but coarse wool, about 4 inches staple. The black variety is crossed with pure-bred Astrakhan sheep to produce the so-called Astrakhan, or Caracul breed.

The other type of native sheep is the "Wrzosowka" (Heather) sheep characterised by long light-coloured wool mixed with dark hair. Head and feet are dark brown. The skins are mainly used by the peasants in sheepskin coat making and Pozen, the "Vagas" sheep are bred On the larger well conducted farms the most popular breed is the Merino which is bred in a number of varieties Merinos are chiefly bred in Pozen. The type of sheep known as "Elektoral-Negretti" is gradually disappearing. The type at present in vogue is the "Merino Precoces" remarkable for early maturity and very fine mutton, besides excellent wool. The yield of wool from the various breeds and types raised in Poland is shown in the following table of production of unwashed wool per head :-Rambouillet Merino "Precoces" .. 3-4 kilos. English Breeds ... 25-45 kilo Native "Swinarka" Sheep 20-25 .. 3-5 ., .. 25-45 kilos.

The average loss of weight after washing is from 60% to 67%.

The very low prices for wool during recent years have caused a set back in sheep breeding. turn has affected breeding activities, and many breeders are now reported discontinuing breeding pure-bree sheep. During 1927, however, there was a tendency to revive sheep breeding. Government asistance to sheep breeding is limited to occasional subsidies for purchases of Stud rams. Experiments in cross breeding from the native sheep with Romney Marsh rams are reported to be in progress, but the results are not yet on record. The War Department, in co-operation with the Sheep Breeding Section of the Central Agricultural Association and the Society of Animal Husbandry contemplates a series of experiments in cross-breeding native sheep with English breeds, and possibly also with Roumanian Tzigaia rams. There are at present two sheep breeding experiment stations in operation, one at Pulawy and another, conducted by the Torún Chamber of Agriculture, at Dzwiesna, near Torún. Among Poland's numerous Associations and

especially interested in improving their SHEEP & PIG STOCKS. in various Parts of POLAND would be glad to receive offers of Breed Animals of Flocks and Herds of 'outstanding

Merit and Pedigree. For further particulars apply Editor, International Directory of Pedigree Stock Breeders, 23, Fleet Street, London, E.C.4

Livestock Breeding in Portugal.

The Live Stock estimate for Portugal states cattle 742,000, sheep 3 857,000, pigs 921,000, horses 165 000

The breeding of sheep is the main source of income of the smaller farmers and a local census estimates the present stock at about four million head Next to sheep breeding the breeding of pigs is of some importance and the number of the existing stock is estimated at about one million. Cattle breeding has been much neglected but is now given more attention. Speaking generally existing live stock breeds are indigenous not particularly valuable, and there is room for improvement. Horse breeding is needligable.

Portugal has passed through hard times since the war and the situation of State finances remains serious Recently a number of social laws were promulgated but without effecting any amelioration in the life of the peasants of whom more than 70% are still illiterate Farming is likewise passing through a serious crisis and as the country is chiefly dependent on agriculture the effects are felt among all classes of the people Portugal's chief export articles are wine cork, oil and live stock, but many markets, firmly held in pre-war days. are being lost owing to lack of organisation in trading methods and transport The Portuguese exporter is hampered on every side while export taxes and a number of ad valorem dues make trading almost impossible at times The steadily rising taxes and the enactment of new rules and regulations hamper everybody, and the interest on war debt and the permanent bad condition of State finances cause a feeling of uneasiness all over the country

expenditure, bad administration and the practice of presenting fictitious estimates showing small deficits where such are often stupendous, combined with lack of moral authority on the part of the Government Under such circumstances, agriculture cannot properly develop. For years it has been the rule to draw up budgetary estimates with a view of cajoling public opinion and repeated recourse to fictitious estimates has caused lack of confidence in the Government's ability to overcome difficulties The administration is constantly overstalled The recently adopted Wheat Law seems to continue to disorganise agriculture the prime industry of the country

More than 90% of the live stock breeders in Portugal are small latmers and while there is a large number of land owners who could easily increase their income through improved stock breeding, all of them are content to carry on in the old fashioned manner. Lately several farmers who seem anxious to improve conditions have imported live stock from U.S. America and the impression in the districts where they live resulting from improvements thus brought about is undoubtedly drawing attention to the possibility of obtaining better market prices through breeding better stock of cattle as well as of sheep and pigs. Breeding from Pedigree stock would be more general if the Government and local authorities dealing with agncultural matters would devote more attention towards enlightening the farmers. Although there is lack of propaganda and encouragement, stock breeding however, will probably become an important branch of agriculture as the soil is very fertile but the transport of agricultural and live stock products, now excessively expensive owing to exorbitant rates charged by the Railways, ought to be cheaper than in most countries of Europe as Portugal has a number of navigable rivers The climate is particularly suitable for live stock breeding owing to the proximity of the sea and the height of the mountains The winter is short and mild, and early in February vegetation is in full vigour summer heat is often very depressing, and as rain falls very irregularly, the fields easily assume a parched appearance In September, however, when rain is abundant, a second spring sets in and the fields are again in full verdure Although Portugal ought to be self supporting, the country does not raise cereals in sufficient quantity to meet its own consumption The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and flax of which abundant crops could be harvested if the soil were better worked Two per cent of the area of the country comprise vineyards, seven per cent are covered by fruit trees, thirteen per cent cereals and three per cent are forest A considerable live stock export trade is carried on with the Portuguese Islands, Africa, even Brazil The principal seaports, such as Oporto, Lisbon, Vianna, Setubal, Faro and Figueira are suitable for handling imports and exports of live stock and here facilities are available for the live stock trade

facilities are available for the live stock trade While organised live stock breeding does not exist in Portugal and there are no Societies for the purpose of promoting breeding from Pedigree strains, there is a great number of Associations of farmers locally interested in the improvement of their stock Lately a number of co-operative Associations for insurance against losses through disease have been formed and it is probable that these would be interested in the purchasing of Pedigree stock if their attention were drawn to the value of such. There is a tendency armong these agricultural Associations, all of which are co-operative in working, to appreciate modern methods in farming and breeding. The largest of these Associations are

The ISLAND of Madeira

BREEDERS of PIGS, SHEEP and POULTRY who would be interested in participating in the formation of a "LIVE STOCK BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION in MADEIRA," where Stock Breeding is neglected and Market Prices for the Products of these Animals excessively high, are invited to communicate with the London Representative of Madeira Farmers, the Publishers of "International Directory of Pedigree Stock Breeders," 23, Fleet Street, London, E.C.4, through whom further information is available.

Livestock Breeding in Roumania.

The Live Stock estimate for Roumania states cattle 4 810 000 sheep 13 600 000, pigs 3 200 000 horses 1 880 000

Roumania is an agricultural country a land of peasant farmers who constitute in fact the chief national asset Without exaggeration it may be stated that Roumania is still almost undeveloped but that her future as an agricultural producer seems almost unlimited The total area is about 13 13 million hectares of which 2 76 million hectares are forest Sugar beet cultivation and wheat constitute the main commercial crops Natural pastures only occupy a very small area but over the whole country grazing is plentiful The cultivation of the soil is still most primitive a mere scratching of the surface Fertilisers are scarcely used and the manure from livestock more often than not burnt or wasted but in spite of these old fashioned methods the crops as a rule are plentiful and heavy if sufficient rain has fallen. The wheat is of excellent quality and the export of this contributes enormously to the well being of the country The soil is speaking generally of wonderful fertility Land is still cheap although conditions and prices as they existed before the war are rapidly changing as a result of the new system through which enormous stretches of cultivatable land have been acquired by the Crown and cut up in small farms Prior to this new system some 4 000 000 hectares of agricultural land were owned by 5 450 larger estates and of these 3 000 had an acreage of over 1 000 acres while four million hectares of land were farmed by 11 million small peasants Some thirty years ago the co operative movement was started in Roumania, and a great number of Agrarian Banks working on the German Railfeisen system commenced financing the smaller farmers Hundreds of small credit organisa tions sprang up organised on the Schultze Delitzsch principle the idea being an organised battle against the long existing veritable pest the agrarian money lender To day the number of these credit associations is considerably over 3 000 and the membership over 700 000 and the capital in circulation over £100 000 lent out in sums of £5-20 to ennumerable small borrowers at a minimum of interest

Once upon a time when Roumania was still under the Turkish rule there was a saying in Turkey that with a Moldavian horse there was no limit of distance as in those days the fastest runners were to be found among Roumanian horses While horse breeding has immensely improved during the last twenty years and the horse material certainly is of excellent quality there is still room for much improvement

The same may be stated concerning cattle breed The indigenous cattle breeds are without exception splendid material but a grading up movement is Pig breeding is likewise scarcely developed but the native pig the Mangalitza breed is developing and when selection is more generally carried out there is no reason why Roumania should not become a considerable breeder of pigs

Sheep breeding is the mainstay among smaller farmers Cross breeding has taken place in a rather haphazard manner through imported Rambouillet merino sheep from France Texel sheep from Holland and Bukhara sheep from South Russia Of late years Karakul sheep breeding has developed and everything points towards Roumania becoming the chief centre in Europe for the breeding of these highly valuable and interesting sheep

The Roumanian peasant farmer is an excellent type of agriculturist hard working painstaking careful and willing His conditions of life are very primitive and he is willing to work for a mere pittance. Most of these small farmers live in one family houses as a rule built by themselves neat and tidy looking but in which there is very little in the way of comfort to be seen The Russian invasion during the war years was disas trous as when these hordes had to evacuate the country they burnt everthing that came in their way. In very many instances these buildings on farms and estates have not yet been rebuilt but conditions are slowly improving

in Europe with excellent soil and climate where live stock breeding is the chief mainstay Visitors from and where live stock is everywhere moving about Although Roumania is still in the stage of a pastoral | desire to improve the existing horse cattle sheep and pig

By nature Roumania is one of the richest countries | country undoubtedly it will not last long before she becomes an important country for live stock rasing Resulting from the war Roumania was fortunate in abroad who happen to travel through the country being able to incorporate several Provances formerly generally express their astonishment at the enormous belonging to the Habsburg Dynasty to Transplant belonging to the Habsburg Dynasty to Transplant stretches of fertile land where grazing is abundant the Banat and Bucovina in all of which live stock breeding has always been flourishing There is a general races and as prosperity is returing to the country after the devastating war years Roumania is undoubtedly developing on sound and practical lines as a live stock raising country par preferance In regard to the various breeds the following are the most important

Horses -There is an indigenous pure bred land race horse of excellent material of which different strains have been true to type for many years Among these types should be mentioned

The MOLDAVIAN horse in which there is much in character reminding of the European horse. It is a lively highly intelligent animal of beautiful shape and much valued by the Roumanian farmer His body weight is from 300 to 400 kilos only and he is easily fed and handled and therefore of particular use on the small farms

The Dobrudga horse slightly smaller in stature than the previously mentioned strong and easily fed a fast runner splendid as a cart horse while useful in almost every direction

The Transsylvanian horse is somewhat heavier 400-450 kilos in weight a strong horse but not so elegant in appearance and movements as the Molda vian horse. The chief breed district for this horse is on the Plains of Valachia chiefly in the Ialomitza

district

The MOUNTAIN horse a beautiful little horse scarcely weighing more than 300-320 kilos is chiefly bred in the Carpathian district. He is a favourite among most farmers being quick in his movements easily satisfied even on the scantiest of food and of a pleasant temperament Another indigenous horsethe HOUTZOULE—is chiefly bred in Bucovina and largely exported to Poland and Galicia

The Bessarabian horse is an excellent horse for various purposes and is the product from various cross ings with Belgian and Orlow horses This horse is highly valued everywhere owing to his ability to do almost any kind of work besides being suitable as a

coach horse

Among horse races originally imported should be mentioned English Thoroughbreds Arabian purebreds the Ghidran and the Nonius horses The Percheron horse is also bred in various places and the Pintzgau horse has many adherents chiefly in the Banat

CATTLE -Among the indigenous cattle races in Roumania probably the most interesting are the MOLDAVIAN or Steppe cattle in colour red white with a silvery tinge Full grown they reach a weight of 600-650 kilos although when fattened a weight of 1 000 kilos is very often reached. They are however rather poor milkers seldom yielding more than I 600 litres per annum but the fat percentage is high 4-41%

The Boucsan cattle are rather like the Moldavian although much larger of a more compact build very poor milkers but easily fattened and they yield

delicious meat

The IALLONITZA cattle chiefly bred in the southern parts of Roumania likewise not unlike the Moldavian cattle are mostly remarkable for their beef propensities The TRANSYLVANIAN cattle are chiefly bred in

Transsylvania and on the Hungarian border and in appearance and characteristics a Steppe breed

The BESSARABIAN cattle mainly reared in Bess

arabia are not a particularly developed breed but certainly capable of considerable improvement through selection

The MOUNTAIN cattle are probably one of the best among the many local breeds as they have proved very amenable to improvement through crossing while they are splended milkers as a rule yielding to litres milk or more daily during the lactation period. When crossed with the Swiss Brown cattle the first cross as a rule turns out a great improvement. They are rather small bodied seldom reaching above 350 kilos their skin is very soft and their horns short and beautifully curved. The general appearance is an animal of pic turesque features

Among imported foreign cattle races the Swiss Summental and Brown mountain cattle are very much in vogue and will probably develop rapidly and push out all other foreign breeds. Shorthorns have been imported for trials but so far not given entire satisfac tion. The same may be stated concerning the Dutch

In Roumania two indigenous sheep breeds have existed from time immemorial—the Tzigaja and the TZOURCANA sheep The first mentioned are white with red spots on head and legs but black wooled sheep are sometimes bred. As regards the second the Tzourcanas they are cherished for three qual tiesas wool producers for their fine mutton and for their milking propensities Various most apetising cheeses are made from their milk. The Tzigaja sheep also yield very fine mutton and being chiefly reared in the Dobrudga district they are sometimes called Bulgarian sheep Both of these sheep breeds are now and then crossed with Karakul rams with a view of obtaining black woolled lambs for the fur trade It may he stated that both of these breeds are valuable and deserve to be improved

Among imported sheep the Merino and the Karakul sheep are much in vogue and seem to suit local conditions. The Karakul sheep are chiefly bred in Bessarabia and probably they will here develop and become a national breed in this important part of Rou mania English sheep of various types have from time to time been imported chiefly for their mutton pro pensities but after the war very little has been done in this direction

Goat breeding has so far not taken on in Roumania to the same extent as in the neighbouring countries and while Saanen goats have been imported the number of the existing stock is very small

flanks and generally speaking an animal from which not much can be expected There is another type of indigenous pig. the BAZNA chiefly bred in Transylvania deep black in colour with a white stripe of better quality than the previous mentioned and sometimes used for crossing with the Mangalitza breed

The MANGALITZA DIG is of the same breed as exists in the Balkan countries and Hungary and is certainly an excellent meat producer It is bred in Roumania

in two different varieties

Among imported pigs the most popular are the Large White Yorkshire and the Berkshire pigs generally bred on the farms in Bessarabia

All matters relating to stock breeding are dealt with by a special Department of the Ministry of Agri-There are special sections dealing with horse breeding cattle breeding and sheep pig and poultry At the following Studs the here mentioned horses are chiefly bred

Among prominent breeders the various Stallion dep ts established all over the country are mentioned It is the rule that suitable stallions belonging to the specific breeds of horses favoured locally by the farmers in their own districts are stationed for service

As regards cattle breeding various breeding centres have been inaugurated the principal of which are

A general demand for better qualities of beef pork and mutton has acted as a stimulant to better breeding and the consumption of these articles is on the increase It is estimated that 1,000,000 head of cattle of an average live weight of 350 to 400 kilos are killed every year

In regard to Roumania's sheep stock, the yearly increase through lambing may be estimated at 2.500 000 head of which a considerable quantity is killed for the butchers' trade. The live stock is estimated at 13 600 000 sheep yielding an average production of 2 kilos wool Roumania's total production of this article can be estimated at 20 000 000 kilos Roumania exports a certain number every year of her surplus stock production-about 150 000 head of cattle, although without great efforts the country should be able to export double this number and yet maintain the necessary stock for feeding the popula-Improvements will undoubtedly take place in years to come when a more general appreciation of the necessity of only breeding from better class animals

The general supervision of live stock breeding in Roumania as far as the Government are concerned rests with a board of Supervision dealing with all matters appertaining to sanitary, veterinary and zootechnic questions A number of trained live stock experts supervise breeding in the outlying districts of the country under the direction of a Committee appointed in January 1926 in accordance with a new law The Government intervene in matters of breeding both directly and indirectly, i.e. as regards horse breeding through the various national Studs the names and addresses of which are mentioned in the table of breeders below At the above mentioned prominent stude excellent breed animals are maintained most of which are of first rate Pedigrees As regards the service of stallions no less than ten Depôts have been inaugurated in Bessarabia in Dobrudga and in the district of Ialomitza etc. The various breed centres for the encouragement of better cattle breeding as already mentioned are exrecising considerable influence towards persuading the smaller farmers to discard scrub as at these a number of cows and bulls are kept from which calves can be acquired

The national sheep breeding centres as already mentioned are run on strictly economic lines each centre disposing of an agricultural property where a considerable number of ewes and rams are kept. As particularly interesting among these the Karakul sheep breeding centre at Doulbanou in Vallachia where 120 breeding ewes and a number of excellent rams are stationed and the Domnitza farm, also in Vallachia for the breeding of the Tzigaia sheep should be mentioned

Indirectly the Government exercise considerable influence on live stock breeding through the Zootechnic Department which arrange live stock shows held in various districts. Generous grants are given and diplomas and medals accorded to those who exhibit meritorious animals. During the last few years this Department arranged interesting and instructive shows, such as at Jassy for Moldavia, at Bucovina for Bessarabia, and at Clus for Transylvania,

The Roumanian Stud Book is run under the auspices of the Jockey Club at Bukarest, exclusively for English Thoroughbreds At Braila a Stud Book is kept for entries of Half-breds under the supervision | breed.

of the "Society for the Encouragement of Half-Bred Horses," and another Stud Book is maintained at Bukarest by the "National Society for the Encouragement of Horse Breeding," chiefly for Trotters At Braila in Transylvania the "Society of Breeders of Simmental Cattle" work for encouragement of this

Livestock Breeding in Russia.

While reports are issued from time to time from Russia concerning remarkable development of her Ive stock industry the information received direct from trustworthy correspondents has a different tale to tell and undoubtedly the industry is in the same deplorably neglected state as every thing else is in to day's Russia

The present population of Russia may probably be estimated at 133 000 000 inhabitants. How many millions succumbed during those terrible years between the ascendancy of the Bolshevists and the present day is impossible to state and considerable numbers are constantly escaping from the country across unprotected frontiers. It is probably correct to state that of the present population about 41 million belong to the Kulaki is the once well to-do peasant free holders to day living in great distress and to the smaller peasant category. It is also probably correct to state that in the present year 1928 there are about 24 000 000 peasant farms of which 1950000 are unin habited and now deserted owing to the buildings having been pulled down for firewood.

The present live stock may be estimated at 21 000 000 horses of which 172 millions are draught horses the rest being of a wretched type of skinny half starved horse utilised for all kinds of purposes. The cattle stock may be estimated at 26} millions the sheep stock nearly 37 million and the pig stock between 3 800 000 and 42 millions The goat stock before the war very considerable is scarcely more than 500 000 In comparison with these reliable estimates the Russian official estimate for 1926 mentioned 51 200 000 cattle 77,200 000 sheep 16 900 000 pigs and 24 600 000 horses In fact the official report received stated that the number of head has increased so rapidly during the last few years that it is fast approximating to the pre war figures in regard to pigs and sheep while in the case of cattle the number is even higher Further the report stated that no Branch of Soviet agriculture has suffered more from the effects of the war and the civil war than live

Before the war the cultivated te agricultural area was relably estimated at 96 000 000 despatines. In 1916 for obvious reasons this area had not been maintained and the figures were 82 500 000 despatines. In 1920 as an immediate result of the truly shocking conditions in Russia the area decreased to 64,400 000 while in 1925 only 25 000 ood despatines were cultivated. It should however be remarked that Bessarabia was lost to Russia in which country live stock breeding and agriculture was fairly developed. Part of Poland Finhand Latva and Estonia were likewise lost to Russia and this would of course explain to a certain degree the decrease in the area. As to the rentability.

of the soil while the production was 54 poods of corn per designation in 1913 the crop result in 1922 was 23 poods and in 1925 173 poods (One pood—163 kilos)

As regards live stock breeding at a time that a

As regards live stock breeding it is true that a certain number of cattle horses sheep and pigs have been purchased in the United States in Canada in Sweden and perhaps elsewhere during the last ten years with a view of filling up the terrible gap in the country's live stock population but the official figuressuch as were issued in 1927 concerning Merino sheep and coarse woolled sheep acquired in the United States—are pure invention One of the few still existing live stock societies in Russia the Raisers Corporation Moscow is apparently trying to revive the sheep breeding industry but as any measure taken in Russia to day to improve any thing only leads to a more violent and distinct set back it is probable that the propaganda which was some years ago effected in the United States of America and in Canada in favour of Russia's sheep breeding industry was merely words and nothing else. It has recently been stated from the Statistical Bureau at Moscow that for the time being 33 000 000 acres of land in Russia eminently suitable for sheep raising are available and that the Government are agreeable to accept foreign settlers conversant with sheep breeding together with flocks for both of which satisfactory guarantees would be made Probably nobody in his right senses would now after all that has happened in Russia feel inclined to accept the sincerity of such invitations

During 1913 the last normal year when Russia could freely pursue agriculture manufacturing and trade she produced 47 700 000 000 poods of grain and 1 605,400 head of cattle Of Russia's exports in 1913 aggregating according to the National City Banks of New York estimates $760 000 000 one third went to Germany alone while in the same year Russia exported calf skins in value of $10,000,000 cattle hides $4 000 000 horse hides $2 000 000 sheep skins $1 500 000 and wool for carpet making $3 500 000 During the same year Russia imported binder twine at the value of $1 450 000 agricultural machinery etc $7,200 000 Pedigree live stock animals $5,350 000 etc -figures from which it may be deducted that when the present system comes to an end in Russia and normal conditions once more rule this vast country will rapidly again develop as one of the world's largest agricultural producers The Delegation of Members of Westminster Parlia ment which not so long ago visited Russia reported that under present law all land belongs to the State divided among the peasants Holdings vary from 21 acres in the north to 80 acres in the lower Volga the average size being 30 acres The ultimate ideal of the Soviet Government appears to be communal farming on a large scale, and great efforts are being made to improve the yield and the types of stock, both by agricultural institutes throughout the country and by the co-operative movement consisting of 50,000 primary organisations and 450 unions, while the cooperative societies are endeavouring to inculcate the communal use of agricultural machinery, and are supplying the villages with good sires in order to improve stock. Much trouble is devoted to butter making for export purposes In 1925 the agricultural output was about 93% of the 1916 figures, or about 84% of the pre war average As these statements most certainly never corresponded with facts. this wonderful improvement could only have existed in the imagination of those in Russia who supplied

One of the most remarkable co-operative organiaations ever founded existed in pre war Russia where, from small beginnings, a gigantic business had been built up, with more than £140,000 000 capital invested, 250 000 people employed and a membership of over trestore to a large degree her pre war prosperity

5 000 000 of which the large majority were wage earners. This huge organisation, with all 1st assets and working machinery, etc., was seized by the Bolshevists, plundered and turned to their own uses, and then destroyed. When in the year 1921 the Bolshevists were compelled to admit shocking failure and mistaken attempts they had, in the short space of a few years, succeeded in creating economic ruin all over the country which then, to cite the words published by the "International Labour Office" was "ruined financially and disorganised."

All who have travelled in Russia and are conversant with the truly enormous areas of most fertile soil will, however, agree that when the present misrule comes to an end, the requirements of the country in live stock to rebuild this industry must be very considerable indeed. Unlike a manufacturing country where the industrial activities have been destroyed owing to war or other reasons, Russia is an agricultural country, and two or three years successful crops will probably restore to a large degree her pre war prosperity

Livestock Breeding in Sardinia.

Prior to the foundation of the present kingdom of Italy, Sardinia was a kingdom of its own-in fact it may be stated that this island was really the nucleus of the present-day Italy It was long ruled by the House of Savoy It is the largest island in the Medi terranean Sea next to Sicily, and now belongs to Italy Together with a number of smaller islands the area is over 9,000 square miles Sardinia was long well known for the breeding of cattle, sheep and goats, and it is still to-day one of the few places in Europe where the wild sheep Moufflon -exist Remark ably good cattle are bred all over the island of a high mulk production and fat percentage and the Sardinian butter is highly appreciated in many parts of Italy The sheep are likewise a good breed but the wool is somewhat coarse Wheat is extensively cultivated The cultivation of grapes, oranges olives, lemons and tobacco besides live stock rearing forms the mainstay of agriculture Although the island is to a very great degree covered by mountains, there are large plains where the cattle and sheep graze one of these extremely fruitful plains the Campidano stretching straight across the island from Cagliars to the Gulf of Oristano A number of powerful rivers traverse the authorities and in island While the soil is very fertile, the methods I Italy, is unknown of cultivation are still extremely primitive owing to the fact that there are no large farms in existence, the whole country being divided up into very small holdings. No attempts have been made to educate the Sardmans to adopt more modern methods of farming, but during the last few years farmers have commenced the system of Bull and Ram Depôts to prevent too much inbreeding and undoubtedly a survey on the spot of existing conditions by interested live stock men might easily result in opportunities for selling stud animals. Sardman is divided into two provinces Cagliari and Sassan The population is probably over 1,000 000. The origin of the people is shrouded in mystery as the island successively was over run by Greeks Vandals, Saracéns, Genose, and for a lengthy time the Pisans held the island In the year 1377 it came into the possession of Spain, and later on of Austria.

No special live stock census for Sardinia has ever been effected and whether the number of cattle, sheep, pigs and horses which is not inconsiderable, comparatively speaking, is reported to the Italian authorities and included in the live stock census for Italy, is unknown

Livestock Breeding in Spain.

The co-operative movement seems to have completely taken hold of farmers and live stock breeders in Spain, and the measure of self help that of late years has been created through co operation is surprisingly large The Association of Live Stock Breeders-"Asociacion General de Ganaderos,' Calle Huertas, 30. Madrid, has a membership of over 500,000 active members, each of whom is a breeder of live stock. Thus, this Association is probably the largest of its kind in the world With headquarters at Madrid, the Association has local offices under direct management at no less than 47 different places. In the following article. written by the Association, the scope of its various activities is described. Among other Associations for promoting agricultural live stock breeding, dairying and poultry breeding the following are the most

The activities of the various breed societies and syndicates formed for co-operation are often remarkable for the results obtained, and indisputably the Spanish peasants have a sure eye for hvestock breeding These societies are powerfully supported by the Spanish aristocracy, and it should be noted that a very considerable portion of rural Spain is owned by the nobility Among the most active of these associations for stock-breeding the following should be mentioned

is probably unique. Besides being the oldest among breed Associations in the World it is certainly the most many sided, the most really helpful to the members and its guiding hand is everywhere noticeable As already stated one among its many activities is the arranging of agricultural and livestock shows held all over the country Among these Shows where the student of stock breeding is always sure of seeing very good animals exhibited by their actual breeders the following are perhaps the most instructive

Spain's Livestock Industry.

By THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION OF LIVE STOCK BREEDERS Madrid (Associación General de Ganaderos 30 Calle Huertas Madrid)

Horses The Horse stock in Spain totals some ! 000 000 head classified according to breed and purpose Of saddle horses the most important breed is the native Spanish in existence since time immemorial par ticularly in the South Agricultural development sport and the natural inclination of the inhabitants of the southern Provinces have conduced to the extra ordinary popularity of the saddle horse of which fine specimens were early bred Numerous Studs provide horses for the Army for private use and for agriculture To-day this branch of live stock breeding is however not so flourishing as it was nevertheless measures are in train to maintain and improve this breed partly by means of the Spanish Stud Book instituted in 1883 and Shows throughout districts in which there are saddle mares capable of producing good speci There are Studs at Castille and Leon for breeding saddle horses but generally speaking, the horses are smaller and lighter

Several breeds in measure under m 115 or Ponies are bred in the Galicia and Pyrené districts Louinian ponies noted for their extraordinary power of endurance are bred in the Province of Burgos In shape they resemble Arabs Arab stallions are travelled all over the country with excellent results and when mated with Losinian mares, produce a cross bred horse somewhat larger than the native horse well proportioned quiet and able to endure hard work

Spain has made conspicuous progress in breeding Arab horses and possesses to-day magnificent mares This revival of the Arab is chiefly due to the enterprise of the War Office which established a

Stud of Arab mares and imported a number of excellent stres

English Thoroughbreds have always been popular in Spain and from these good specimens of Anglo-Spanish Anglo Arab and Spanish Anglo Arab horses are bred

The typical draught horse in Spain is bred in the Provinces of Santander Logrono Navarre Saragossa and Teruel and in the pastoral districts of Murcia and The War Office horse breeding Depart ment travels stallions in various districts and these have everywhere effected improvement in the stock The breeding of Hackneys once assumed considerable proportions in Spain but it was confined to the production of high class carriage horses and those who devoted themselves with obvious success to the develop ment of this breed seem now to have ceased operations

CATTLE The Cattle stock numbers 3 918 189 head of the types which have been indigenous breeds in Galicia Pyrené Tudanca Leonesia Samorra Salmantina Avilena the Spanish Highlands Estremenia Andalusia and Murcia. Of these the Galicia, Asturia Pyrené Tudanca and Leonesia cattle are bred in the North and are dual purpose cattle-or rather cattle without any special dairy attributes but if milked regularly produce a fair quantity of milk rich in fat. In the Provinces of Asturia and Leon a number of up-to-date darries absorb most of the milk produced The steers of these breeds fatten easily and consid able supplies of beasts are slaughtered at the larg

with the largest cattle stocks are Coruña and Asturias in the North, each with about a million head. In Castille the Samora, the Salamanca and the Barqueria breeds are found, all of great size, bred solely for meat, while the bulbecks are famous as draught oxen.

In the South, the Estremena and Andalusa breeds have developed under good grazing conditions. These are excellent draught cattle and good meat-producers but more intensified cultivation and the demand of the big towns seem to stimulate the breeding of dairy cattle.

N In Galicia Asturias Santander, Vascongadas Navarre and Cataluna the breeding of Swiss and Friesian cattle has made extraordinary strides, and the General Association of Live Stock Breeders is at present engaged in establishing a Herd Book for Spanish bred Andalusia and Swiss cattle

As the improvement of these cattle can only be effected by means of milk recording to ensure the use of the best cows and their male offspring for breeding purposes, the Association has established a "Register of Milk Records hoping to obtain within a short period the benefits thus achieved elsewhere for the cattle industry Up till now this movement has not received much attention in Spain, but there is reason to hope that the recording of Pedigrees will become much more widely spread and extend to other breeds and species

PIGS There are about five and-a half million in Spain The indigenous breeds are the Celtic pigs in Spain and the Iberian pigs The Celtic pig, of very strong constitution has been completely absorbed through crossing with the Yorkshire breed. It used to be bred by the peasants in the North where every farm bred two or theee for its own requirements The Yorkshire cross rapidly came in favour owing to early maturity and relative proportion of lean meat to fat An example of successful crossing may be seen in a breed in Alava which, strictly speaking should not be termed crossbred since its characteristics have become so constant as to become regularly reproduced Breeding boars of this breed are everywhere in great demand. The Craon pig has also been used for crossing purposes though on a smaller scale

The Iberian pig, bred in the South, is admirably suited to the agriculture of the Provinces of Estremena and Andlaisa It feeds on the fallow-land and thrives on acorns and nuts in the large oak and corktree forests, a source of wealth to the South of Spain It fattens quickly on acorns, maze and barley Crossing experiments are in progress with a view to solving the problem to pig breeders of developing the Iberian

Up to a few years ago the high mortality due to cholera was a source of heavy losses and caused a considerable number of breeders to go out of the business. The problem has however, been satisfactorily solved by the use of vaccine and those who innoculate their stock find themselves freed from this terrible emderance.

There are very big centres in Spain for the commercial handling of pigs, employing modern methods and freezing plant Breeders have recently erected an Abattor at Merida where a large proportion of the country's pig production can be commercially handled This seems to exercise a stabilising effect on the market

SHEEP—Among the Sheep in Spain, 20,221,677 in number, the Merino the Andalusian and the Churra breeds are the most prominent. The Spanish Merino is the foundation stock of all the Merinos in the world it retains its outstanding ability to produce mutton and wool. It is reared on a migratory system—the flocks taking advantage of the summer pasture in the Pyrenees and later transported to central and southern Spain where the winter temperature is mild. By this means the flocks make use of natural resources which otherwise would be wasted, since their feeding grounds are not susceptible of cultivation and the grass in consequence never attains such a growth as might be eaten by other species of stock, nor can it be mown and preserved as hay

The Churra sheep, also called the large sheep because their fleece more nearly approximates to hair than wool by reason of closeness, are a very prominent breed. The wool is chiefly used for the manufacture of mattresses. Hardy and impervious to cold, the breed has a highly developed milking capacity, and from the milk various kinds of cheese such as Burgos and Villalon cheese are made. This breed, however, is losing ground to the La Mancha Menno typed Sheep. The Aragonese, the Castilian and the La Mancha sheep are all Valuable breeds. The last named have sheep are all valuable breeds The last named have attained high development, their chief characteristic being great milking capacity, "La Mancha cheese," made from the milk of the ewes is well known

Sheep play a very important part in Spain as milk producers and supply annually in round figures of 320 900 gallons of milk, as compared with the famous Murca, Granada, Costena and Malsas goats which produce about 46 315 500 xallons. The annual wool clip is estimated at 110 275 000 lbs and leaves a surplus for exportation

The General Live Stock Breeders' Association whose address is 30, Calle Huertas, Madrid is a Corporation of great antiquity the origin of which can be traced to the Middle Ages It represents the live stock breeders in Spain and interests itself in all problems inseparable from live stock breeding and agr

Its central organisation comprises a permanent Council consisting of a President appointed by Royal Decree, thirty ordinary members and a General Secretary, and the administration of the Association is in the hands of this Council. With a view to ensuring methodical development of its activities the Council si divided into Special Committees to each of which are allotted certain objects of study. Thus there are Committees to deal with sheep breeding, Shows, competitions and stock development, with cattle breeding, co-operative services, with the purchase and sale of securities, seeds, corn, machinery and stock, public slaughterhouses, dependent industries tarriffs, commercial relations and economics. These Committees and the Association as a whole are assisted in their work by agricultural, veterinary, etc. experts.

In order to keep in close touch with breeders, to learn their wishes and to co-operate with them, the Association has organised a very well-functioning provincial organisation. In some districts there are Commissions which maintain the necessary contact with the Association, and in every Province there is a Provincial Council, while in the villages there have been in existence since time immemorial so called local Councils which collect first hand information from the breeders as to their ambitions and desires, thus constituting an organisation which renders possible a safe-guarding of the various agricultural and stock breeding interests.

The General Association is responsible for all livestock Shows in Spain Every fourth year a National Exhibition is held at Madrid where all the National breeds and products connected with live stock are exhibited

One of the most important sections of the Association is devoted to the milk industry. It has an advisory centre and arranges courses of instruction travelling search the chief carter of production.

centre and arranges courses of instruction travelling round the chief centres of production The sanitary section performs useful work in its sphere by answering enquiries as to diseases and

The very active animal nutrition section has assumed an extraordinary importance, reflected in greater attention paid to feeding problems. It supplies in large quantities corn, cake and offals as well as other native or imported products such as beans beet pulp, and maize The Association maintains for this section a laboratory for the testing of seeds, The Association is organised as a co-operative society, buying the materials produce, machinery, etc which its members require, and selling stock and commodities of which the breeders desire to dispose For live stock sales it relies on its own slaughter-Provincial and district councils, syndicates and societies send their animals to the Association which undertakes sale slaughter, etc. The Association runs a wool cleaning establishment, fitted with all modern improvements through which breeders can sell their wool to weavers and eliminate the middleman

The Association's loan office has materially assisted in the development of live-stock breeding by offering effective assistance to members in difficult times. Loans are granted to individual breeders as well as to stock breeding societies the limit for the former being 3 000 pesetas and for the latter 10 000 pesetas at 4% per annum. The Association accepts as security personal or joint bonds, wool-clips, and the produce of live stock in general, and is making efforts further to extend and improve this service which contributes much to the live stock resources of the country.

Livestock Breeding in Sweden.

The Live Stock estimate for Sweden states · cattle 2,553,000, sheep 1,562,000, pigs 720,000, horses 718,000

The breeding of stock has always received encouragement from the Swedish Government. In the year 1844 Parliament granted money "for the encouragement and development of cattle breeding on the understanding that Pedigree breed animals were imported with a view of improving the existing native breeds In the following year it was decided to establish Breed Centres for cattle at which the farmers could obtain the services of suitable sires and during the following two years a number of herds containing bulls as well as cows were imported from England and Germany In the year 1881 the Government devoted considerable sums of money for the imports of cattle as well as sheep and since then encouragement has unceasingly been shown to the live stock breeding industry Inshment of Breed Centres-"Avels Centra"-all over the country has assisted in drawing the breeders attention to the value of Stud animals of acknowledged Pedigrees and performances, and the various now existing breeds greatly benefit from these Centres Among these there are such for the Swedish Highland Cattle. for Avrshire Cattle, for Black-White Lowland Cattle and for Shorthorns, and as regards sheep breeding several Breed Centres cover the requirements of breeders of Shropshire, Oxford Down and Cheviot sheen besides the native Swedish Landrace sheep For the benefit of the pig breeding industry many Breed Centres exist, all of which with few exceptions are in support of the breeding of the Large White Yorkshire pig and the now greatly improved Swedish Landrace Good draught horses are being bred in the country where, owing to climatic conditions a very strong and hardy Landrace horse has been developed Much attention is paid to the breeding of the Swedish horse of the Ardenne type and through the considerably large number of Studs magnificent stallions of this breed are slowly improving the horse stock in the respective districts As for Blood horses, the Association of Swedish Blood Horse Breeders year after year extends its activities The influence of blood imported from England is now visible and the number of prominent stallions maintained for service at a nominal fee at various Centres has proved a step in the right direction A number of Blood mares of exceptional Pedigree has been bred during the last few years The Swedish Jockey Club publish a Stud Register arranged in accordance with the Bruce Lowe system

As regards the Swedish cattle stock, the Association of breeders of the Red-White Cattle, an amalgamation of the Swedish Red Cattle breed and the Swedish Avrshire cattle only a short time ago, is a very live Association of breeders who publish their own monthly Journal, and have actively proved that the Swedish Ayrahire cattle have now obtained a very high level of perfection

over the country and are spread to the number of nearly 1,650, many of these being quite important in their activities, often spending considerable amounts of money on the acquisition of first rate breed animals

Sheep breeding, curiously enough, is not developing as it ought to do in a country where the grazing is abundant Government employed experts advise on questions relating to the breeding of the various live stock

The Pig Breeding Associations, in number exceeding 800, enjoy particular encouragement from the Government and publish a National Herd Book in which the Large White Yorkshire and the Swedish Landrace pigs are entered

Agricultural education is highly developed and, speaking generally, the Swedish live stock breeder understands his business

Apart from Associations of breeders of Pedigree live stock a considerable number of Associations of live stock breeders for control of milk production and performances are actively contributing to promote the milk yield and to regulate the consumption of food in reference to production, with a view of eliminating wasteful animals a such which cannot adequately These Associations have paved pay for their keep the way for better understanding of the value of recording progenitors capacities in reference to the marketable value of the progeny The number of these Associations is steadily increasing now considerably over The development of milk control activities has led to the formation of Societies of dairymen, sc

Mjolkbedomningsforeningar aiming, on the basis of the fat percentage of the milk, to group the milk

delivery in the various districts

The "General Agricultural Society' is a powerful body of farmers and breeders, originally formed for promoting the farmers' interests. Its activities are numerous-farm supervision regulated and up-todate book-keeping, agricultural house construction etc. Then the number of Co-operative Agricultural Societies, locally of considerable standing have recently been amalgamated into one Central Federationthe Swedish Farmers' National Association (Svenska Lantmännens Riksforbund) whose address is Stockholm For the purpose of assisting the Swedish dairymen and to promote their occupation a "Central Establishment for Agricultural Experiments" has been in being for some time and is reported doing a great deal

The inherent good qualities of the Swedish Landrace horse. Red White cattle and Landrace pigs have earned for them a very good reputation in several neighbouring countries such as Finland, Norway, Latyra and Estonia and the export of prominent Stud animals is a not unimportant branch of Swedish acriculture. With a view of disseminating informa-Bull Associations' Depots are very popular all tion concerning Swedish live stock a very

Livestock Breeding in Switzerland.

According to the latest Live Stock Census, the cattle I stock is estimated at about 1,600,000 head, the pig stock at 640,000, sheep at 250,000 and horses at 135,000.

Switzerland is in many respects a remarkable country. Although of a very small area—16,000 square miles—of which lakes and unproductive mountains cover a considerable portion, enclosed by other countries, without an outlet to the sea, without coal deposits. she has been able to develop her manufacturing industries which to-day are brought to a very high degree of perfection, her live stock industry and other agricultural pursuits, so that she not only ranks among the most highly industrialised States in the world, but as one among the best developed dairy and stock breeding countries.

Switzerland is divided into 25 Cantons in which the total population is over 32 million Physiographically the country is divided into three zones—the lura mountains, the Alpine lands in the centre, and the Swiss plateau lands at an elevation of from 1,000 to 3,000 ft . extending from Lake Geneva to Lake Constanca Mountains comprise almost half of the country, with ever-intermingling valleys, and the river and lake system is, with the exception of Sweden and Norway. almost unique. Of the total area, 71% are productive. and more than one third of the 71% consist of pastures and meadows. Thus it is explained why the chief agricultural industry in Switzerland is converting the continuously large quantities of the milk produced into dairy products, such as butter, cheese, condensed milk and milk-chocolate. In the southern parts of the country, bordering on Italy, olives and figs grow abundantly. The main source of income is, then, the live stock industry which derives its mainstay from the splendid pastures, excellent everywhere, but probably best in the district where the Simmental, the Brown-coloured and the Fribourg Black-White cattle are bred.

The railway system is well developed, but the everywhere extending road system is simply a marvel of well-thought-out planning and construction. In reality Switzerland consists of a federation of many diminutive Republics, each under its own Government and laws. The history of Switzerland is a thrilling romance; and when her people, after having been subjected to encroschments and hardships on the part of dominating neighbours, at last threw off the yoke. this emancipation could only be effected through self-restraint, courage and ardent love of country, and since then the Swiss have continuously developed their native resources and brought their country to a very high degree of prospenty.

Cattle breeding in Switzerland is nowadays a highly organised industry. Most of the breeders are small pessant Free-holders. With a view of discarding indiscriminate breeding and bringing the three prom- These two types are now bred pure in inent cattle breeds to a high degree of perfection, a movement was started towards the end of last century aiming at organising the breeders in their various districts into Syndicates; and these, when formed, were federated into great Associations. In this manner better breeding methods could be adopted, even be made compulsory; prevention from selling unsuitable breed animals for export effected; and, last, not least, the exportation of Swiss Stud animals to various countries where the climatic and physiographical conditions correspond to Switzerland's could be promoted and by degrees developed by means of effective co-operation. The measure of success that has been achieved is most remarkable, and Switzerland's export figures, as here mentioned, testify that the adopted system is right. The Swiss cattle breeders Associations are now grouped in seven Unions and these comprise over 1,000 separate and independent local Societies of breeders, with a total membership of nearly 102,000 who between them, possess a very considerable number of cattle These Unions organise and control the breeding of the Swiss "Spotted Cattle"; the "Simmental Alpine Spotted Cattle"; the "Swiss Spotted Cattle un East Switzerland"; the "Swiss Spotted Cattle un East Switzerland"; the "Swiss Spotted Cattle un East Switzerland"; the "Swiss Spotted Cattle un East Switzerland"; the "Swiss Spotted Cattle un East Switzerland"; Black Spotted Cattle", the "Swiss Brown Cattle"; the "Swiss Brown Cattle in East Switzerland," and the "Eringer Cattle." Pig breeding in Switzerland is another illustration of how an industry can be created out of material originating in other countries There is no indigenous pig breed in Switzerland, and so the country had to create a national breed through obtaining the breed material from abroad. The various pig breeds in England and Germany were studied, examined and considered with the result that for Swiss conditions Large White Yorkshire pig and the German Im Landrace pig were found to meet the r indigenous breed never attained any importance Not long ago it was, therefore, decided to create a Swiss sheep breed, suitable for the country's requirements, and the Oxford Down type was found to be the most desirable. This breed seems to have developed quite well under conditions very different to its original home, and Switzerland is already exporting stud animals Swiss sheep breeders are co-operating through a large organisation under the name of 'Union of immemorial, but owing to various circumstances, the Swiss Sheep Breeders' Societies" at Grafenscheuren

The Swiss Simmental Cattle.

By THE COMMITTEE OF SWISS HERD BOOKS at Muri Berne Commission des Féderations Su sses des Syndicats d Élevare

The Swiss Simmental cattle derive their name from the Simmen Valley in the Bernese Alps, their original home and from there they have spread over a large part of Switzerland. No other cattle are bred in the Cantons of Berne, Soleure, Bâle, Schaffhouse, Vaud, Neuchatel and Geneva while the "Swiss Brown cattle are also bred to a certain extent in the Cantons of Lucerne, Zurich, Argovie, Thurgovie amd Values In the Canton Fribourg, the Simmental cattle are found in larger numbers than the blackspotted indigenous breed The Simmen Valley (Tal) with its excellent pastures, has always been reputed for its cattle breeding It has constantly supplied other Cantons and countries with excellent breeding material, known the world over under the name of Simmental cattle

These cattle, the heaviest existing mountain breed, thrive best on rich mountain pastures, but can easily be adapted to the plains and even to permanent stabling

They are white with red or yellow spots Strawcoloured or golden-yellow coloured animals are Entirely yellow or red, with a white preferred head, are to be seen, but only rarely The head is generally white, except in certain strains which have coloured spots around the eyes and on the cheeks Richly coloured cattle, especially with well defined spots, are preferred to paler coloured, and unlyspotted cattle are considered defectful
No other "Dual Purpose" cattle—milk and beef

besides suitable for work-show such thriftiness and early maturity, qualities that signify good feeders. No other cattle combine in such high degree beauty of body

form with high milk-and beef propensities

Full-grown bulls of the Simmental breed exhibited at the National Agricultural Exhibition at Berne in 1925 averaged 5 ft 31 in at the withers and 211 inches depth of chest, while 'dry cows averaged 5 ft 1 in at the withers and 201 inches over the chest. The live weight of fully developed breeding bulls at 4 years and over varied between 2,140-2,855 lbs with an average of 2,520 lbs. The average weight of the exhibited cows reached 1,663 lbs , and for the dries, 1,830 lbs Obyously, such heavy cattle are large-sized. Thus their size varies according to the local soil and feeding conditions, and the greater the productiveness of the soil and the possibility for growing clover, the heavier the animals But in spite of their heavy weight, the Simmental cattle are certainly not coarse, on the contrary they combine rather light bone constitution with . elegant forms so that their general type is a breed of pleasing appearance Bred for dual utility purposes, the Simmental cattle are easily fattened and produce a large percentage of meat of excellent quality Owing to their adaptability, they can easily be developed towards either milk or beef production

Since the war the milking capacity of the Simmental cattle has been much developed owing to cow testing being generally adopted by Breeders' Syndicates Here are some figures illustrating the present high level.

Simmental cows abundantly demonstrated their milking capacity during a contest recently held at the Agricultural Exhibition at Berne when 15 cows were under control The daily yields ranged from 4 53-6 59 gallons Maximum butterfat percentage reached 4 52°

Under the able direction of experienced breed and others interested in the Canton Berne and Cantons, the Simmentalers have been spread large areas and are now a highly developed first rate breed and trading in this class of livestock is annually increasing

Thanks to highly satisfactory performances robust constitution and general all round adaptability Simmental cattle have found their way into countless European and overseas countries where they are used both for pure breeding and crossing with indigenous breeds few other breeds giving such good results in this respect as the Simmentalers

The principal foreign markets for these cattle are southern Germany and Austria Hungary Poland the Balkan countries and Russ a while France Italy and Spain import considerable numbers of head. Among overseas countries to which Simmental cattle are exported may be mentioned the Americas particularly Brazil Arzentine Uruguay Peru and Chile British South Africa the Netherland Indies and Japan have lately placed orders for bulls and cows

The improvement of the breed rests chiefly with the various Breeders Syndicates of which some 650 are spread all over Switzerland These Syndicates have recently united in forming 3 large Federations of which Swiss Herd books

one alone counts 560 Sub-syndicates—the Federation of Swiss Breeders Syndicates of Spotted Cattle with headquarters at Muri near Berne This Federation exhibits every year in August or in September a wide range of breeding bulls at the age of from 7 months to 3 years The Federation of Alpine Simmental Cattle with headquarters at Bolticen and the Federation of Syndicates of Breeders of Spotted

Cattle in eastern Switzerland with headquarters at Homburg (Thurgovie) likewise arrange every year towards the end of August much visited Shows at Thoune and at Winterthour where many hundreds of head are exhibited and quickly sold

These Breeders Syndicates maintain complete and up to-date records of all the Herds under their control Financially assisted by the Committee of Swiss Breeders Federations large sums of money are devoted to the promotion of Pedigree cattle breeding

In 1920 offices were established at Berne fo registration in the Simmental Cattle Pedigree Herd book which was published in two Volumes in 1929 under the supervision of the General Committee of ## Agricultural and Livestock Experimental Work in Switzerland.

By DR A SCHMID General Adm n.s rator Swiss Agricultural Stations, Liebefeld Berne

that experimental and Research work in animal breeding lass more than ever behind Research work in plant breeding due as Dr F A E Crew points out to economic conditions and the present state of those sciences—physiology and biology—on which animal experiments rest. Of course this is also due to complicated hereditary factors and the environ ment of the subject on which experiments are carried on Moreover Genetic experiments require much time and proper installations besides comparatively speaking wide knowledge and ability

The backwardness in real Research work in animal breeding has been more apparent lately as the science of judging livestock progresses the use of Pedigree and of certificates of performance being generalised by practical Breeders Organizations with financial help of the Government of almost every breeding

These branches of Livestock breeding activity have been established almost exclusively on empiric principles and they remain stationary in many places while elsewhere the choice of right methods to be adopted in order to further the internal development of the often wretched methods of breeding proves increasingly difficult

Scientific as well as practical Breeders agree other factors in relation to appropriate feeding and care of pure bred livestock. Such measures among which the practical breeder feels almost lost when he has to rely on his own experience materially affect the economic results of breeding

Owing to these circumstances the Swiss breeders as is the case in many other countries slowly but systematically arrived at the conclusion that practical livestock breeding at least in countries where pure breeding of stock is the rule has now reached a point where it cannot go further ahead without injury to itself unless it can be based on qualified accurate and scientific facts This is the more true in the case of the European breeder as the North American breeder now knows how to apply scientific knowledge to his prac tical activities often greatly to his personal advantage

Those who are conversant with the natural and economic conditions under which the Swiss breeder works will easily understand that experimenting in livestock breeding has been more restrained in this small country where the financial means at our disposal for such technical activities are very limited. We also lack such special establishments for experimenting in animal breeding which are to be found in the United States in England and some other countries However during recent years quite a number of series of experi These matters are complicated through numerous ments in livestock husbandry and breeding have been made the results of which have provided our breeders with many new view points in various directions. These experiments were especially made at the Veterinary Faculties of the Universities at Berne and Zunch, at certain agricultural colleges at the Institute for Livestock Nutrition attached to the Polytechnical High School at Zunch and at the Federal Experimental Stations at Liebefeld Berne under the direction of the writer and with the collaboration of the Federal Station for Agricultural Chemistry and the Station for Darry and Bacteriology

The experiments carried out at the Federal Establishments at Liebefeld where fundamental research work is only a side line as time and means are chiefly devoted to the study of actual and practical problems have been especially done in relation to stock feeding breeding, and care of the livestock

As regards feeding the here mentioned Federal Establishments work in co-operation as far as is practical with a view towards saving of cost and energy The Institute for Animal Nutrition at Zurich undertakes the basic experiments in reference to digestion while the Station for Agricultural Chemistry at Liebefeld-Berne is occupied with basic analyses of fertilizers and foods The Station for Dairy and Bacteriology specialises in the qualitative analysis of milk and milk products Finally, the Central Administration of the Agricultural Experimental Stations undertakes technical matters concerning feeding experiments and conducts tests of groups periods and individual experiments besides working out results from the practical and economical point of view To carry out these practical tests in cases where they cannot be undertaken at the privately (or publicly) owned farms under its direction the Central Administration disposes at Liebefeld of a small experimental farm of the size of an average Swiss homestead run as a practical model farm to show the farmers how to work scientifically even with limited means and under very small conditions

The following Table gives an idea of some of the special tests and experiments carried out among a considerable number of others of a more general character.

The Conservation of green food vegetable refuse and silaging grain by the use of the usual American or the new electrical methods with and without addition of chemical preservatives

Use of fish meal as food for live stock and of other foods rich in protein for pig fattening Feeding calves on milk and on additional so called supplementary foods

The physiological influence from commercial mixtures of mineral salts on the development of the body and the bones of young animals The influence of jodin-containing fertilizers upon the influence of foun-containing fertilizers upon the fodine contents of the foods and of the milk and on the sexual activity of the cows

The economic importance of feeding dairy cattle with citrous fruits and husks fresh and preserved Practical research work concerning the food requirements of dairy cattle for the production of milk, and definicent feeding or lack of mineral elements in the food

Feeding of horses and dairy cattle with straw disintegrated through treatment with caustic soda

The importance of fermentated offals such as bran etc., to pigs and dairy cattle

The influence of modern methods of hay making on the fermentation process in the hay stack, on the loss of nutritious elements, on nutrition and the quality of the marketable products accruing from livestock bushandry.

Series of experiments have also been made at Liebefeld to determine as far as possible the influence on the yields from special measures in animal husbandry such as frequent changes of feeding places the method and number of milkings per day, by hand or mechanical the sudden changes of food the temporary use of a milk cow for draught purposes, etc.

The construction of the dairy cattle stable at Liebefeld and its adaptation to individual feeding clean milking and up to-date production and conservation of manure has enabled us for the sale of general practice to undertake experiments and study results of observations previously gathered during a length of many verse.

Long drawn out experiments with goats and with tests on rats are still going on experiments which ought to prove the influence of progressive and hygienic in comparison with old fashioned stable keeping on the wield and the quality of the milk

As regards Lavestock breeding it may be stated that nowadays the leaders of practical breeders organisations anxious to acquaint themselves with matters concerning conformation and ancestry require in points of scientific breeding first of all exact methods to enable them to determine how to breed true to type while preserving individual characteristics in the breed subject. They also need more exact information regarding the transmission of the chief elements favourable or detrimental as economic factors as well as better knowledge of the limits of variability An indisputable solution of these and other biological basic problems can only be obtained through basic experiments undertaken at special research institutes such as those which were first created in America and later on in several European countries. Lacking such special establishments in Switzerland we have endeavoured during the last few years at Liebefeld to undertake some preliminary work towards solving interesting breeding problems. Among these experiments the following perhaps deserve to be mentioned. Experiments stretching over several years with a large number of animals for the purpose of determining the physical development of Simmental cows with a your of studying individual animals. herd of ten Simmentaler cows are now tabled and systematised for the benefit of the practical breeder, such conclusions having chiefly a bearing on matters of health, conformation, Progenitors, and the inherited ability of reproduction in breeding

Other experiments lasting several years have been made with 38 Simmentaler cows to ascertain the periodical lactation of the breed. The number of

Recently, periodical control tests have been made with a view to determine the composition of blood, pigment, thickness of skin, temperature of skin and body, and the milk yield of Simmentaler cows, likewise, to examine the correlation of these factors with matters of constitution and environment.

Livestock Breeding in Abyssinia.

monarchies in the world-with a wonderfully salubrious and agreeable climate, live stock breeding-of a sort-exists but the animals bred are mostly of a wretched appearance and little value although many existing conditions are favourable for live stock breeding, such as almost endless grazing, abundance of rain during the rains period, highlands where sheep breeding should be carried on at great advantage, fertile valleys where magnificent fruit grows and where the soil produces maize, barley wheat and millet crops of quite exceptional value It is certain that the general lack of salt is one of the reasons why the live stock is not attaining the size and appearance that otherwise might be expected in an agricultural country with plentiful grazing Lately some European agriculturists have settled in the country and report that it is hoped to improve live stock breeding through the importation of Pedigree stud animals. Land is obtainable at ridiculously low figures, and the present enhabtened Ruler of Abyssinia, after his recent visit to Europe and especially to England where he expressed his surprise at the wonderful studs, herds and flocks he had seen has lately stated his intention to grant through the Regent in the event of their settling in the thieving propensities of the Abyssimians

In this remarkable country—one of the oldest country. Wild animals, such as lions, leopards, the elephant and the rhinoceros abound and of course do

The area of Abyssinia comprises 212,000 square miles, with a population of between 42 and 52 millions Neither of the population nor of the live stock has ever a census been taken, and it is impossible to obtain reliable figures as nobody seems to know. Abyssinia is divided into divisions—the Amhara, stretching over the centre and the west of the country, the Shoa stretching towards the south, and the Tigre in the north The chief towns are Addis Abeba, where the foreign Legations and Consulates are domiciled, Gondar, Ad wa and Ankober Industry and manufacturing are non existent, the only occupation of the people being agriculture and live stock breeding The people consist of Hamitic, Semitic and Negro elements Mentally, the Abyssinians are surprisingly superstitious, and their ignorance of things in general amazing. They are of medium stature, well built, dark haired, with rather swarthy complexion. Along the chief rivers such as the Atbara River and the Bahr-el Azrek, the Blue Nile and the Tekazze magnificent grazing abounds and live stock attain a larger size in these valleys. A portion State aid and import facilities to his Livestock Depart- of the country consists of highlands at an elevation of ment Thus it may be hoped that conditions for live from 6,000 to 8,500 feet Sheep breeding should stock breeding may improve Probably European here prove a most remunerative undertaking. The and American breeders could obtain special facilities chief obstacle towards successful breeding is the

Livestock Breeding in Algeria.

The Live Stock estimate for Algeria states . cattle 1,028,000, sheep 7,000,000, pigs 112,000, horses 200,000 Divided into three Departments-Algiers, Oran and Constantine—this interesting country under French Government has made very great strides and farming and live stock breeding are carried on to an extent that would scarcely have seemed possible prior to the French occupation Colonisation commenced in the year 1901 when many Europeans, but chiefly French, settled in the country Although admittedly the French rule is very severe, the country is increasing in prosperity from year to year, and slowly, almost imperceptibly, the French iron hand is stretching further and further towards east, west and south, teaching the turbulent natives well-deserved lessons in orderly government. In the Roman days Algeria was the chief granary of the world, and this probably explains the natives' love of agriculture and live stock breeding With the fall of Rome and the country successively and the Kabyles, farming was still the foremost occupation, rather than trading, and when the Moors were expelled from Spain and made piracy their chief occupation and source of income, the natives were forced to till their soil and rear the cattle through the help of the slaves whom the Dey, the ruler of Algiers

Excellent horses have been bred here since time immemorial, and the numbers of sheep, pigs, goats and camels seem to increase from year to year Rivers abound, and although they are unimportant and small they are very serviceable for irrigation. The French Government have carried through a remarkable system of drying up unhealthy marshes and lakes with stagnant water, greatly to the improvement of the public health and much in favour of the live stock breeders, as injurious insects are being killed. The climate is very variable, with very hot summers when little or no rain falls. Live stock breeding as stated, is the main coming under the cruel rule of the Moors the Saracens occupation and improvement in the existing stock is visible from year to year Undoubtedly here is a for the live stock man and most of the farmers are anxious to discard breeding off the 'scrub' and improve their flocks and herds by crossing with sires of European breeds

Horse breeding is the subject of particular attention on the part of the Government and a number of exceedingly well bred stallions are always kept at the Government Stallion Depôts and Haras at Blida Tiaret. Setif and Constantine The French Government have for many years experimented on breeding crosses from the Syrian Arab Stallion and their own remounts after having for a long time experimented on crossing the Arabs the Anglo Arabs the Berber and the English Thoroughbreds and the experience seems to point towards the Berber horse (Barb) combining all the qualities required in the direction of speed, compactness and endurance These Berber horses are remarkable for their endurance, and as for speed to cover 20 kilometers in 35 minutes seems to be the general standard

Experimenting with agricultural live stock is also warmly supported by the Government and a number of experimental fields in full activities, all co operated and supervised by the Director of the Agricultural interested party may communicate on matters connected with live stock-are contributing towards educating the young farmer An Agricultural Institute was recently (1021) mangurated, splendidly equipped and staffed, its chief aim being experiments on feeding and breeding and various kinds of research work in connection with agriculture with a department whose chief business is the dissemination of agricultural knowledge among the natives Agriculture in North Africa. being of very great interest to France is especially protected as it is realised that a prosperous agricultural community in Algiers is bound to become the safest possible bulwark against communism socialism and political encroachment The number of students. increasing yearly, attending the Institute testifies to the wish of the better class Algerian farmer to equip himself for modern farming and breeding With a view of demonstrating to these student farmers the value of utilising modern methods in farming and breeding from superior animal strains a farm of 1 200 acres is attached to the Institute and stock feeding forage cropping and dry-farming are here practiced All these students, when they return to their farms Institute Maison Carrée Algiers—with whom any may be relied upon to go in for rational live stock breeding

Livestock Breeding in Angola.

The Argola Colony belonging to Portugal on the West coast of Africa folds a very considerable s ock of name cattle and a preat number of sheep and purs bu no relable estimate can be produced. carried on since time immemorial in the pasture dis tricts along the rivers Darda, Benco Awanza and other overs where, in the days of the slave hunter the possess on of cartle was always a reams of purchains immunity by the poor natives from being chained and taken to the coast. Angola was discovered in 1405 by the Portuguese who with many other nationals during many years carried on cruel slave hunting. In the year 1887 as a result of a Treaty entered into with the Congo Free State a large tract of land was added to the colons which now consists of four districts the Luanda the Conzo, the Benguela and the Vissamedes In the interior a number of independent Sultanates exist, enjoying Portuguese protection. All these are large cattle and sheep breeders

Livestock Breeding in The Azores.

The la k of su table harbours is one of the chief d thrul its in the development of this important group of slards belonging to Portugal the geographical pos wn I which is in the North Atlantic Ocean nearly 81 miles from the coast of Portugal There are nire islands of some importance divided into three groups the most important being the Pico Faval. Ciraciosa San Jorge and Terceira which form the cen tral group while the islands of Flores and Corvo form the north western group and at a distance of 75 miles towards the south-east the important islands of Santa Marsa and Sao Miguel are the largest of all well populated and commercially the richest. The total area of these island groups is nearly 050 square miles Travellers who have only passed the islands in the distance and never explored them would be surprised should opportunity take them into the interior at the wonderful vegetation and beautiful scenery as seen from the sea they look most unpromising. The elimate is delightful and the vegetation tropical, with vineyards and luxuriant plantations of banana orange and lemon trees, while the sugar cane coffee and tobacco grow in abundance. The fruit plantations which abound in oranges pineapple etc. derive a considerable income from the export trade with Europe the United States and Brazil The main export article however is salted beel and nork derived from live stock breed ing which fact indicates that this branch of agriculture is one of some importance. The number of agricul tural and live stock Societies mentioned hereunder points toward a general interest manifested for farm ing and although of course these Societies cannot be of any greater importance each of them has enrolled in its membersh p list every available local farmer and stock breeder

According to old records the Azores were known prior to the year $460 when they were officially annexed by the Portuguese who landed there by a mere accident it is stated when they, much to their surprise discovered during their first sojourn that two islands all of a sudden appeared before their eyes while one island entirely disappeared This phenomenon has been repeated more than once since then, owing to the destructive and violent eartquakes which suddenly occur While none of the larger islands has ever been submerged a number of small islands are said to have appeared during the sixteenth century and several smaller islands disappeared suddenly in the seventeenth century

The population about 300 000 is almost ex clusively devoting its interest to acriculture and live stock breeding. The number of the existing in estock is unknown as no census has been taken but among the existing cattle breeds, were of which is indigenous as all have been imposed through the Portuguese two are quite valuable and much improved through selection and better breeding methods. As a pig producer the Azores should certainly do well as the islands have long done a brisk trade in fresh and salted pork Sheep are doing very well indeed but the existing breed should be substituted by one more useful Much damage is done to the lambs through the hawks from which birds the islands derive their name. The capital city Agra is on the island of Terceira Goats and poultry do very well in these islands where on the whole all kinds of live stock thrave

ing to Spain, situated about 65 miles from the west coast of Africa-" Happy Islands' seems to indicate that life and conditions long ago must have been considered exceptional The present-day name is supposed to indicate that dogs must have been very numerous, although this is not the case now. The group consists of nine principal islands-Sta Clara. Gran Canaria Teneriffe, Palma Gomera Ferro Graciosa, Lanzarote and Fuerte Ventura—the total area of which is 2857 square miles Most of them are probably of a volcanic nature, but it is a long time since eruptions occurred A peculiar feature of these islands is the total absence of rivers. The scenery is beautiful and the climate pleasant, although sometimes the heat is intense but moderated by sea breezes Sometimes fresh water is Winter does not exist scarce Everything grows luxuriantly, and in the numerous valleys intermingled among the mountains. the soil is wonderfully fertile. While the production of wine not so very long ago was the chief pursuit, the vine, after having suffered from a peculiar disease, seems in parts to be dying out Curiously enough. the camel is bred here to a certent extent, but goat breeding is the principal branch of the live stock in dustry and the Canary goat is a splendid milker. The breeding of cattle has long enjoyed encouragement from the Spanish authorities and the Andalusian

The medicial name of this island group belong- | breed is mostly prevalent. Pies are bred in every island where the animal is a not unimportant member of the smaller farmer's live stock. Sheep do excellently all over the islands and the type mostly bred is a Merino strain Only rarely are breed animals imported and it is probable that inbreeding takes place in the villages. The interested live stock man who would spend some weeks in the islands should undoubtedly find opportunities for making propaganda and it is not impossible to find a market for Pedigree pigs and sheep, even cattle

Whether the islands were inhabited prior to the advent of the first settlers at the commencement of mediæval times is unknown, although in many villages the type of the people is quite different from the Spanish inhabitants, probably originating from a race now on the point of extinction, the Guanches concerning whom it is stated that they were driven from island to island and finally conquered in the year 1495 by a French adventurer who then took possession of the islands After his death his successor transferred the rights to the Castilian king

Here is a unique field for a remunerative poultry breeding industry, with considerable local consumption and splendid shipping facilities to African markets The chief agricultural articles from which the farmers derive their mainstay are tobacco potatoes, sugar cane olive oil and raisins

Livestock Breeding in Cape Verde Islands.

The Live Stock estimate for Cape Verde Islands states

cattle 11,500, sheep 6 000 pigs 17 000 horses 1,200

This group of islands a possession of Portugal i in the Atlantic Ocean some 300 miles from the west coast of Africa has a total area of about 1,600 square miles with a hot climate a remarkable absence of trees and irregular water supplies. The soil is neither fertile nor properly cultivated and there is scarcely any condition prevailing favourable to live stock breeding In spite of such drawbacks, however, cattle are extensively reared and the export of meat products salted, dried and fresh, is the main source of income It should prove a paying proposition to introduce superior Pedigree strains-cattle, sheep and pigs-as the native stock is hardy, prolific and generally speaking suitable material for cross breeding. Although the number of islands is considerable several of these are only suitable for sheep rearing The more important are the Santiago island the Brava, Fogo, Sao Nicolas, Razo, Branco, Santa Luzia, Granda, Sao Vicente, Santa Antao, Sal Maio and Boavista all of which are situated in the windward and in the leeward group While mornings and evenings are cool and pleasant. with an abundance of dew, the temperature during the day is hot, often trying, chiefly from July to December The main crops cultivated are sugar, tobacco, cotton indigo and oil nuts Few horses are reared and mules and asses are extensively utilised in farming Currously enough no reptiles have ever been found in these islands where the guinea fowl the quail and the partridge appear in enormous numbers scarcely any industries with the exception of the making of soap and turning locally tanned leather into beautiful articles of luxury, but agricultural pursuits and live stock breeding dominate the life of the natives who are intelligent, very docile but probably among the laziest inhabitants of the earth When these islands were first discovered by the Portuguese Cadamosto in 1456, he reported to his Government that he found pigs, sheep and goats but not one single living human being. from which it would appear that the islands had been utilised by sailing ships for watering purposes and these domestic animals thereby introduced The population is now about 165,000 To Portugal the islands have always been useful and for world shipping their situation is of a certain importance for coaling and oil fuelling During the last fifteen years the cultivation of maize has increased very considerably. being the principal article of food among the natives. while the excellent quality of the coffee grown, although very little attention is paid to this industry, testifies to a statement often made by coffee experts that the Cape

Verde coffee bean is among the very best coffees produced Methods of farming are still most primitive as besides the wooden plough and the spade the average farmer never utilises any tools or machinery. Quite recently however an experimental agnoithure and live stock raising station was established at Priar, and local breeders are watching with interest the experiments now carried out here with a view of reaching results in regard to the possibility of increasing the milk yield of the local cattle stock through selection in breeding and better feeding. The turn-over in commercial commodities such as live stock products coffee indigo oil nuts and a liquor called. Aguardente made from sugar cane is important. At Sao Vicente where the local Administration is centered a Depart ment for Agriculture and Live Stock Breeding has been maugurated to which interested parties might apply for information. The capital town of the island group is Porto Granda whereto the seat of Government has been moved from the estiwhile capital Porto Praya

Livestock Breeding in Congo Territory.

The Population in the Congo is variably estimated t at from 15 000 000 to 35 000 000 in the Free State while in the French Congo-the region of west central Africa extending on the coast between Camerun and Kabunda up to the Ubanghi River and further on to Lake Chad-it is likewise variably estimated from 10 000 000 to 16 000 000. The number of European residents is very small and the bulk of the population consists of the Bantu Waregga the Menyema and other tribes and the existence of pygmies-Akka etc -- in great numbers long suspected has only recently been proved. The Congo Territory is geo. graphically an enormous district with a future that can only be imagined but when the means of transport have been extended tapping the resources of the interior untold still unexploited wealth will probably constitute the country one of the most valuable posses sions of the African continent. All the usual tropical plants are cultivated As the climate is equatorial it is questionable whether as a live stock raiser the Congo will be able to play any conspicuous part but in this respect the opinions held by experts are very divided Cattle sheep pigs and goats are reared in very large numbers but their commercial value is so far not known No live stock census has been taken

In the Lake Chad cattle district an area which includes the Archipelago of Lake Chad and all the surrounding districts of Kanem a vast stretch of land east of the lake cattle breeding has long been the chief occupation of the population and it is interesting to note that through skilful selection of breed animals the natives have succeeded in creating a really good type of breed generally called the Lake Chad cattle

the natives have succeeded in creating a featily good type of breed generally called the Lake Chad cattle numbering now slightly more than 200 000 head. These cattle differ considerably in appearance and performances from the other cattle stock and through careful observation on the part of an investigator who not so long ago made at his business to study the possibilities of improving the live stock in this district by means of imported sires the conclusion was drawn that inhireed ng has been carried on for a number of years and with very good results while testifying to a certain skill on the part of those who effected the improvement. A reliable informant estimates the cattle stock in the Lake Chad district at well over one million head. They have no hump grow to 150-

kilos from which it may be assumed that here is a breed of interest to the live stock improver considerably above the average native breeds in value. The head is curiously formed in the shape of a V and the horns characteristic rising vertically or otherwise crossing each other sometimes peculiarly twisted These cattle are called Kouri. The neck is short and flat the chest narrow the flanks are long and the back wide and very straight. They have a remarkably long tail. In colour they are white or sometimes white with small red or black spots. The oxen are very strong but remarkably lymphatic in temperament owing to the damp climate in the lake district and as for fattening they quickly attain a heavy weight, but are inclined to run into fat rather than lean meat On various occasions when fattening these oxen intelligent observation has been able to prove that they are splended butcher's beasts. Compared with other native cattle races the Lake Chad cows are good milkers 8 to 10 litres being a fair average As pack animals the bulls are very useful being trained to travel 4 kilom an hour while carrying a weight up to 120 kilos Although the natives are lymphatically indifferent and careless in regard to the breeding of their stock the fact that this cattle breed has been able to develop on now indicated lines illustrates the possi bilities of creating a live stock industry from which Already now considerable income could be drawn the Lake Chad cattle obtain far better prices than other native cattle in the district and when moved to the principal markets in Nigeria they always sell rapidly It is remarkable that the natives seldom or never

It is remarkable that the natives section to the consume the meat of their cattle and they exist entirely on mutton and goat flesh. The herds are never sheltered always graining along the natural pastures Breeding is carried on in a very haphazard manner and no control is exercised. The call is left with the mother or left to fence for himself. The guarding against wild animals or other perils is left in Itile children who early obtain a wonderful hand in stock management. When pastures become exhausted the herds are moved on to new grazing and often they have to swim across large lakes and nivers in reaching new grazing ground. Undoubtedly here is a nucleus for stock men as little capital is required to pursue cattle breeding and grazing possibilities are almost volument.

Livestock Breeding in Dahomey.

With only $8,000 square miles of area, the Dahomey Territory has a very large population, now nearly 1,050,000, where live stock breeding is the chief pursuit. There are two quite good breeds of cattle, one small-sized, sturdy, fairly good milkers but slow maturing, while the other breed is somewhat larger in size, but bad milkers This breed matures at an earlier date. The country holds large pastures suitable for cattle grazing. The soil is everywhere very fertile and, as is so often the case in French-governed territories, well cultivated, especially in the neighbourhood of towns. The chief agricultural crops, mostly consumed in the country, are maize and manioc root, and in some parts cotton, and for export and general trading butter and palm oil are either sold or bartered natives are remarkable for their cleanliness, love of their homes, garden cultivation and live stock generally. and the visitor is agreeably surprised to find a large number of farms in a high state of cultivation and good order

Dahomey, once upon a time an important negro kingdom, lies between Togoland and Lagos, extending to the Niger river. The coast strip reaches more than 75 miles where the number of islands, belonging to the country, seem to have created a system of lagoons through which navigation is possible. The Dahomey people are very intelligent but persistent worshippers of fetishes. Their cruelty to prisoners and their warlike pursuits were long a constant source of trouble to the French, but their inborn ferocity is dying out. They are certainly among the best farmers in Africa, and their skill as potters is remarkable. The chief cattle breeding regions are the Abomey, Grand Popo. Allada, Whydah and the Ague Districts. The breeding of pizs, goats and sheep is also considerable and quite good pigs are being marketed. As no live stock census was ever taken the number of the existing stock is unknown.

Livestock Breeding in Egypt.

The Live Stock estimate for Egypt states · cattle 720,000, sheep 1,130,000, pigs 18,000, horses 38,000

Probably from religious reasons, the ancient Egyptians expressed and perhaps felt abhorrence for breeding cattle, and contemporary scribes repeatedly testified that the eating of flesh was looked upon with contempt. On the other hand, Greek historians have often mentioned the "Shepherd Kings of Egypt," from which it might be deducted that live stock breeding really once upon a time was an occupation of some national importance. These so-called Shepherd Kings were, of course, the Huksos, originally aliens, probably of Palestine origin, who for reasons of their own invaded Egypt, bringing with them their flocks and herds. besides beautiful horses Many of them settled for good on the Delta, and it is known that they worshipped the Hathor Cow It has been proved that during the Hyksos Period the cattle in Egypt were hornless; that they were highly treasured as producers of milk, and that they were never permitted to be used for work.

It is stated in the Scriptures that when the Tribe of Israel bergained with the King of Egypt for their exodus their spokesman Moses, who undoubtedly was a man of affairs, stipulated that "our cattle also shall go with us.

In modern times Egypt has done singularly little towards improving her live stock, and it is only quite recently that the Government have been paying more attention to this important branch of agriculture From more points than one this circumstance is remarkable as the country lends itself to live stock raising on a big scale. Its geographical position is such that a grouperous live stock industry could be created with natural outlets to many neighbouring countries, but as live stock breeding in Sudan is slowly coming to the fore, it is likely that Egypt will in time draw lessons from the results obtained in this neighbouring country?

The indigenous cattle breeds in Egypt are nowadays not particularly valuable; but that in ancient times magnificent beasts were reared has been proved over and again. It has also been proved that splendid horses, once upon a time, were bred in Egypt, and the Egyptian goat was in mediaeval times a cherished animal. often sent by vessels to other Mediterranean countries where it was held to be a remarkable animal owing to its milking propensities. It has been stated in some quarters that the Angora goat in Turkey really emanated from Egypt, a statement that, however, has never been verified. Animal life was never proficient in Egypt, but the jackal and the hyena seem to thrive and multiply. To-day the chief beasts of burden are the asses, horses, and the one-humped camel, but buffaloes are used in certain parts in farm labour. While improved methods in cattle breeding are only slowly coming to the fore and the live stock industry still remains in a very backward condition, sheep breeding has always been and is to-day the mainstay of the smaller farmers, and yields a steady and reliable income. The same may be stated concerning the goat.

Organised breeding, aiming at improving existing stock, does not exist in Egypt, but on several of the larger estates efforts are certainly made to improve the cattle as well as the sheep. Pig breeding will probably never attain any importance. The Department for Lave Stock states that very likely opportunities for breeders of prominent sheep-breeds may find opportunities for selling stud animals, as the existing indigenous sheep breed on the whole shows signs of deterioration. The Agricultural Society, Cairo, is anxious to see live stock breeding developing on up-to-date lines, and interested parties are advised to correspond for such purposes with the Secretary.

Livestock Breeding in Eritrea.

It is not generally known that in this Italian colony very excellent sheep are bred. With magnifi cent pastures almost all over the country on which very large numbers of sheep could be reared it is likely that the Italian Government during the next few years may create special facilities for settlers who will take up this pursuit. The official live stock estimate gives the number of cattle in the Colony as 557 000 sheep 1 703 000 while the number of pigs reared is undoubtedly of some importance although no official census is at hand. Horse breeding is insignificant the official estimate being I 475 While these figures are official it is privately stated that the number of cattle is probably 800 000 and that the sheep stock exceeds 2000 000 In this valuable Ital an possession a considerable area of the Abyssinian plateau lands is included and as this territory has an elevation of 7 150 ft there is ample explanation why the sheep stock generally assumes a remarkably good appearance size and production. The climate is exceedingly healthy and salubrious in the tableland Various crops are likewise grown at this elevation

In the low lying districts on the other hand the heat is intense the thermometer seldom falling below 95 deg The total area of Eritrea is estimated at 95 300 square miles but it is privately stated that it is much larger. The population with the exception of the handful of Europeans living in the capital Massowa consists of nomadic shepherds who spend their lives tending their herds and flocks constantly moving their movements being regulated by the reports of superior pastures being available now in this now in that district. In spite of this nomadic life a certain system of dairy production seems to be in vogue as the supplies of butter cheese and meat besides hides skins and wool appear at regular intervals on the chief markets where they are offered for sale according to classification Besides live stock products the natives market large quantities of very good tobacco and bananas and cotton in smaller quantities These are the main articles of trade This Colony is bordering on the Red Sea extending from Cape Kasar in one continuous stretch down to the Strait of Bab-el Mandeb The total population is probably close on 400 000

Livestock Breeding in French Guinea

This French Protectorate between Sierra Leone and the Portuguese Colony of the same name is officially stated to contain 85 000 square miles but its boundars have never been properly settled and it is possible that a larger area is claimed than really belongs to the terrotory. The area extends towards the French Soudan and includes the very populous native region known as Futa Jalon The country is throughout extremely fertile and the india rubber trade draws large supplies from this territory. The coffee bush is well developed and yields a very fine quality of bean Other products are palm oil and cocoanties. are probably indigenous to the country but of no par ticular ment. The natives largely go in for goat breeding French breeders have from time to time exported bulls of the Normandy breed for crossing the native cattle with good results it is reported. The administration is in the hands of a governor who resides at the capital Konakry which town is in railway connection with the Upper Niger territory A Department for Agriculture and Live Stock Breeding under the charge of a Veterinary Officer has recently been maugurated.

Livestock Breeding in Gambia

In this little colony of a small area small population and only a few hundred white settlers consisting of the island of St. Mary and the Combo district at the mouth of the River Gambia where a flourishing trade has existed for very many years chiefly in cattle hides and skins beeswax rubber rice palm oil and ground nuts live stock breeding is in the hands of the Fulla tribe controlled and managed by wandering tribesmen and therefore no statistics are available in regard to stock. Attempts to obtain an estimate in the absence of a regular census have been made but as the live stock is constantly moved up and down the Protectorate no reliability can be given the various estimates which from time to time are obtained from

The Government have been experimenting in live stock improvement and not so long ago introduced Pedigree stud animals imported from England but for various contributing reasons the experiment did not turn out an unqualified success and in the year 1919 ravages of pleuro-pneumonia very considerably decimated the cattle in this part of Africa. Cattle as well as pigs sheep and horses are bred and there is considerable from for improvement. As regards the pig stock the native indigenous race is not bad and could undoubtedly be much improved through crossing with Large White Yorkshire boars. Black coated pigs have not proved successful here.

Zebu and these two breeds are continuously crossed with each other Whether these types are indigenous cannot possibly be stated but probably they originated from Asia. Both are small symmetrically developed. very compact animals in appearance no unlike the Shorthorn cattle. They develop very slowly and only reach their full size at the are of 6 to 8 years The cowis not full-grown until reaching 7 years and the bull a 6 years. The Veterinary Department who recently made an exhaustive survey of the possibilities came to the conclusion that if bulls and bullocks were allowed to reach full development, they invariably shape into very fine animals capable of competing favourably with runy a small European card- breed, such as the Dexter and Kerry cattle. Or course as milk producers these cattle have never been developed, and thus a cow is considered good if she yields an average of two purts a day. The under and the tests are very small. During the lactation period the cows are never properly fed, and the calving time is never resultied. The Veterinary Department strongly recommends the introduction of English bulls and point out that while this may be full of deffitake up cotton growing on a commercial basis. is a most profitable industry, and a large number can be maintained in every native village. The only drawbacks are the hyena and the leopard Cross breeding with a large sized breed would immediately prove profitable as the size would increase and the ability to grow wool would probably be inherited To illustrate the practicability of sheep breeding in this part of Africa it should be mentioned that Merino as well as Karakul sheep growing fine fleeces of wool are doing very well indeed and attain farly large size The French Government who have carried on a series of experiments in the Bend district of the Niger have already success to report It is held that the Dorset Horn breed should do peculiarly well in this Colony

As regards horse breeding good horses have been bred here for a very long time, undoubtedly originating from the Berber horse The natives give more care to their horses than to any other domestic animal. housing them at night while looking after them in value of pigs is £3 the day. It is held that for improvement Suffolk stallions would do specially well

As regards pig breeding, the indigenous breed. roaming about wild, is the origin of the domestic pig which is small and black in colour, and remarkable for its large litters, twelve to sixteen As this is a grazing pig, improvement should probably be more successful if crossed with boars of a grazing strain All over the Colony enormous numbers of pigs are bred. and the same tale could be told-in-breeding and lack of blood refreshing The Veterinary Department are anxious that improvements should take place through the importation of valuable Pedigree strains, but consider it necessary to first disseminate better knowledge among the natives concerning pig keeping and treatment. According to a recent report on the live stock industry in the Gold Coast Colony, the average price per head of cattle is estimated at £8, sheep and goats 10s and horses £10 The average

Livestock Breeding in The Ivory Coast.

This territory lying between Liberia and the Gold | Coast is a densely populated country belonging to France, very fertile and well watered with a population of nearly 2,200 000 natives but only a handful of European residents. The natives are industrious and intelligent and of a peaceable disposition chief occupation is live stock breeding, and very good cattle are exported to neighbouring territories Goat and sheep breeding are also undertaken 1 Along the Akba and Sassandra rivers, on splendid pastures free from the Tsetse fly, large herds of cattle are maintained No live stock census has been taken and the number is unknown. The Government is nowadays centered at Bingerville to which place it was removed some years ago from Bassam Veterinary officers are employed to advise the natives in regard to livestock breeding to which they devote much attention

Livestock Breeding in Kenya Colony.

The latest Live Stock estimate for Kenya Colony states cattle 3 400,000, sheep 2 850,000, pigs 13 000 horses 500, goats 3 600 000, camels 60,000

One of the advantages to the stock breeder in , Kenya is the abundance of natural pastures of very nutritious grass and as there is no winter the stock can be maintuned on natural herbage all the year through During the last three to four years thanks to strict measures by the Veterinary Department, contagious diseases have been systematically fought and a considerable measure of immunity is now generally obtained through inoculation. The change to the good speaking generally, is now evident and the live stock to-day can scarcely be compared with what it was in pre war days owing to the great care devoted to the domestic animals by the European settlers These now hold more than 200 000 head of cattle of which a great proportion consists of graded ups from the native stock on which Shorthorn, Fries an, Ayrshire Hereford, Aberdeen Angus Jersey Red Poll and Kerry bulls have been crossed. The problem for the settler, or rather the live stock man is however, to find a market year after the war, the increase in the cattle stock is so rapid as to make this problem one of some magnitude The same may be stated in regard to dairy products but with a view of meeting the difficulty, the Government are anxious to create a dairy industry on modern lines and to organise an export trade in the surplus butter and cheese production to other countries

When the first European settlers in Kenya Colony took up cattle breeding as the speediest means of existence they were surprised to discover the enormously large herds of cattle grazing everywhere, in the possession of the natives in point of fact it was early found that the number of herds and total number of head in the Kenya Colony far outstripped many other territories on the African continent where cattle breeding has been carried on since the days of early colonisation, and the explanation is, of course, to be found in the salubrious climate in Kenya. The occurrence of two rainy seasons in the year guarantees a continuous growth of pastures, while over the immense for his surplus beef, and already now, in the eleventh I areas of the colony the rivers are well distributed, with abundance of water. No stock housing is required cenerally speaking although of course valuable stud animals and imported dairy cattle must be protected aramst ticks which infest the grazing lands all over the colony. The Tactee fly infests certain districts Experience however has shown that the Tactae fly seldom or never attacks the d stricts where the Europeans settle 10. at higher altitudes. The attacks from wild animals become less every year. The native humped cattle of the Zelsu type are suitable for grading up. There are arrieral types among which very good cattle can be found such as the Masai the Boran etc all of which are probably nearly immune to ticks. With such cattle material close at hand obtainable at extremely low prices the grading up industry should prove interesting and paying to the live stock man who approaches the subject with an understanding mind and with sufficient capital The indigenous cow is undoubtedly by nature a good milker but as she is never required to yield more milk than demanded by her calf her natural propensities have never been developed

As regards sheep breeding interesting progress is being made with grading up the native ewes through Merino rams and the wool from the cross product is lately meeting good demand and better price in the English markets High up on the tableland sheep breeding cannot fail to develop and it is likely that within the next twenty years Kenya may develop her sheen breeding industry on very much the same lines

as in British South Africa

The number of pure bred and graded up Merino sheep may probably be estimated at close on 80 000 The best sheep runs are along the plains of Laikinia in the Rift valley and in the Nakuru and Knabe districts The average growth of fine wool is now between 5 and 6 lbs and the quality is so much improved that the wool sells easily on the London wool market. The cost of shearing the wool and shipping expenses to England amount from 21d to 3d per lb A rehable estimate concerning the death rate percentage for the Kenya sheep flocks gives the figure at from 800-9% In comparison the birth rate of the breeding flocks may be estimated at 87% while the loss of lambs between birth and weaning is scarcely more than 3% It is estimated that the average sheep run to become a paying proposition should be not less than 5 000 acres on which about 2,500 sheep can be permanently kept grazing The actual cost per head per annum for maintaining a grazing sheep is about 3s and it is stated that the sheep breeder calculates his gross profit at 10s Very good sheep land is now obtainable at prices from 5s to 25s per acre So far there is more sheep land obtainable than the present number of sheep can fill up On well watered lands two sheep to 3 acres can be grazed without running any risks Within the great Masai reserve breeding ewes can be acquired the actual price being a matter of bargaining while a safe average would be 15s to 20s per head These native sheep are of a remarkably good size and strong constitution and are excellent material for crossing for each occupier It is estimated that with a number of English breeds or with Merinos They grow no wool In the cross the mutton is already of a very improved quality, and after the third cross Merino wool is grown. Breeding for the sake of breeding stud animals, such as Merino rams, would prove a remunerative enterprise

The Romney Marsh sheep are coming rapidly into favour in the high country where they yield a good fleece of wool as well as good carcases and in a relatively wet country like Kenya they are not subject to foot rot and other difficulties of the Merino sheep

It is interesting to note that pigs thrive remarkably well under the Kenya climate and develop size in this country more rapidly than in many other tropical lands probably owing to the circumstance that their feed is plentiful and always available at extremely low prices so that pig fattening where bran lucerne and maize are available in large quantities at cheap prices should easily become a staple industry. Bacon and ham are produced in excellent qualities and an export trade in these articles may probably develop

It is stated on good authority that the existing pig stock is the direct progeny of stud pigs originally imported from England and South Africa

To-day almost every British pig breed is to be found in the Colony where however it is stated that the pig most suitable for local conditions is the cross between Berkshire and Large Black course refers to the question of breeding for the bacon trade On the other hand there are indications pointing towards the Tamworth pig having an important role to play in cross breeding, but too little experience has so far been gained As soon as regularity for outlets of the pig breeding industry can be arranged there is every reason to believe that pig breeding will come to the fore and generally taken up by European settlers and the natives Attention is being paid to the already existing bacon factory where complete refrigerating and up to date machinery have been installed As is the case among bacon curers in England so here in Kenya Co'ony the curers have a battle against deliveries of second class pigs

Where horse breeding is carried on success is attained A number of imported Arab sires have proved exceedingly useful as foundation for breeding Somali penies Goats do exceedingly well and poultry breeding is every year assuming larger proportions

Kenya Colony with its diversified climatic conditions and many natural advantages will undoubtedly develop and become one of the valuable jewels in the British Crown and it is only a question of time capital and settlers There are now about 2 600 Europeans regularly engaged in agricultural pursuits. An area of nearly 5 000 000 acres has been set aside for occupat on by Europeans while another area of approximately 2 000 000 acres is held available for alienation. Of the area already allotted 4 600 000 acres are already in occupation. The total cultivated area is now a 500 000 acres showing an average of about 3

local Administration at its farm at Ambovombe in the Province of Fort-Dauphin , and secondly by the Tourcoing Chamber of Commerce at Andriandampy in the Province of Betroka In the first instance the idea is to obtain, by repeated cross breeding of the native sheep with Provence and Chatillonnais rams a hardy breed capable of producing in the 4th or 5th generation a good fleece of fine merino

The Tourcoing Chamber of Commerce on the contrary, is endeavouring to acclimatize South African merinos Experiments so far in this direction have not been quite so successful as the results obtained at Ambovombe, nevertheless the difficulties have in a certain measure been overcome and it is hoped that the fruits of efforts will be apparent in a not too far distant

GOATS -Apart from the Comoro Islands and the west coast of Madagascar among the Musulman populations of the Colony where goat breeding may be said to exist goats are only found in insignificant numbers and are kept more for their meat than for

The native variety, however, descends from the Nubian goat and its milking qualities are not to be

They could easily be improved by the importation of the Alpine breed or even the Maltese variety if it were not feared that the latter might introduce 'Medi terranean fever. a disease which is so far non existent

ın Madagascar

The local Administration is endeavouring to acclimatise Angora goats at its farm at Befanamy near Tulear with a view to the production of mohair Two kinds have been imported, one from Nairobi and the other from South Africa The latter is proving to be far superior to the Nairobi variety as a wool producer As soon as the Befanamy farm has formed a

rucleus of genitors experiments will be continued on a more extensive scale in other parts of the Colony

The Administration is also contemplating the introduction of the Astrakan sheep which should thrive and be of service in certain dry regions in the south west of the island or in the west Sakalava country

The estimated total number of goats in Madagascar at the present time is scarcely more than 50 000

Horses -Horse breeding is confined to the high plateau land in the districts of Antananarivo, Ambato-lampy Antsirabe and Faratsiho Numbers are slightly decreasing owing to the opening of new roads and the present time is only about 600

consequent increase in motor vehicles, as being a more rapid means of transport

The principal objects of horse breeding in Madagascar are to provide remounts for the military corps. and an element of sport on the local race courses

The Veterinary Department has made an attempt at encouraging the breeding of light draught horses for agricultural and transport purposes by introducing Brittany stallions but the experiment has met with little success, the demand for this class of animal being very small. It is true that in a country like Madagascar the draught horse which demands constant attention. good keep special harness and an experienced driver. cannot compete favourably with draught oxen

The local Administration however, is desirous of stimulating the horse breeding industry with a view to encouraging a more extensive use of horses for travelling over the country roads and thus liberate for other work natives hitherto employed as filaniana" (palaquin) bearers The scarcity of labour makes it imperative that everything should be attempted to obviate The gradual supression of the filanjana and its substitution by equine transport would be a means to attaining this end and would at the same time give a considerable impetus to the horse breeding industry At the present time there are only some 4 500 horses in the Colony I 500 of which are brood mares. The insignificance of these numbers is all the more deplorable as they render the breeding of mules on a large scale impossible and it is particularly the mule owing to its hardiness and sure footedness in difficult country which would be appreciated by travellers both as a riding and as a pack animal

Donkey breeding is carried on on an even smaller scale than horse breeding doubtless owing to the fact that until recently there has been little demand for them A certain number is now being used for trans-

OSTRICHES -These birds introduced into Madagascar from South Africa in 1902 are thoroughly acclimatised and thrive well at the Government farm at Befanamy and on private farms in the dry regions The slump in feather prices has howof the south ever as is the case in South Africa arrested the develop ment of the industry Breeders confine themselves to keeping a few breed animals in the uncertain hope that ostrich feathers may once more be la mode

Cattle Breeding in Madagascar.

By WM SUTHERLAND, Ambohi Janahary, Madagascar

Cattle breeding in Madagascar from the breeders' point of view is a very promising industry, but at present it seems to be passing through a critical stage of the owner are killed to make fete and to help his spirit on the way The horns are afterwards placed in conspicuous positions on the tomb of the deceased, or on high poles in the village. When male children are circumcised bulls are killed, and the father in conto several thousands and they take great pride in gratulating the child expresses the wish that his progeny ewning a few very big bullocks which on the death I may be as numerous and as vigorous as those of the bull

Most of the cattle are owned by the native Malagas, nearly every family possessing from one or two.

The cattle are nearly all of the Zebu breed, yers hards and active, and travel long distances to market with less loss of weight than perhaps any other breed They are slow to mature but when properly fattened the meat is of excellent quality. As draught oxen they also excel as they travel faster than most other breeds and pull well. The Malagass use them also for puddling their rice fields by driving them in herds round and round the field which has been irrigated to a depth of about nine inches. This is very trying work and they quickly lose condition Ploughing through mud and water up to their bellies with half a dozen velling devils in loin cloths armed with sticks chasing them round, the wonder is that they survive at all

The hump is considered a great delicacy as it is formed of alternate layers of meat and fat. It also acts as a reserve to strengthen the animal in periods when fodder is scarce, it then becomes limp and turns Where these cattle originated is over to one side difficult to say, but they greatly resemble the cattle of the East African Highlands though one sometimes sees one or two in a herd of pure faun grey colour with all the characteristics of the Indian Zebu. The usual colours are black and red or either of these two colours mixed with white. The pure black seems to be the best colour, but red is also good, and bulls of either of these colours are very prepotent
